$15,000 Reward!

WHEREAS, A large number of gublerhouses and Street Lamps have been stolen from the city of Quincy in this town, and the undersigned offer the above reward to any person who will furnish evidence sufficient to secure the recovery of said offences.

A SIMPLE BEAUTY. A lovely young lady, at the time when belles in Glasgow were scarcer than they are now, was talking with a gentleman from a distance about that city and its gayeties. The conversation turned upon balls and the attendance at them, when the gentleman laughingly asked the question:—“Have you many beauties in Glasgow?” “Yes?” “On which the young lady gravely replied, “Oh yes, sir; there are five of us!”

When the only throne she coveted was his loving heart; and when Mrs. Aburne begged her to demand her right she would meekly declare that she hope would not but his whom she loved. Her love would have been like the Italian girl:

"The same
In hushed despair, in open shame,
She would have rather been a slave,
In tears, in bondage by his side,
Than shared in all if wanting him,
This world had power to give beside:"

Still, when a dim whisper came from the court of Charles II., a she heard of the gay darning of the s-
—the king's son—her son, a wild would to present herself to their eyes would come stealing over, and she wounot my husband; you are my son—I am own beautiful, and they tell me you are the beautiful and well beloved. Answer me Am I not your mother?"

"Before God I believe you are, but—"
 "I see, I see! There can be no true bond, you would say, between us! I that your father had been but a poor goat-herder on my native Welch mountains! Then I could have owned my son and he would not have been ashamed of me."

"Mother, dear mother!—"

"O that sound! How my soul has been thirsting for years to hear it!"

"And you shall hear it! But, think, dearest mother, this is not the place for you, you have lived so quietly. Return,

A sun never enters a slow form of suicide. A sun bath is the most refreshing and life-giving bath that can possibly be taken.

Always keep the feet warm, and thus avoid colds. To this end, never sit in damp shoes or wear foot coverings fitting and pressing closely.

The best time to eat fruit is half an hour before breakfast.

A full bath should not be taken less than three hours after a meal. Never drink cold water before bathing. Do not take a cold bath when tired.

Keep a box of powdered starch on the wash-stand; and after washing, rub a pinch over the hands. It will prevent chapping.

Short communications and items of news are solicited from friends and patrons. Anonymous communications are not published.

FAST DAY. On Thursday afternoon the "Actives" of North Weymouth, by invitation of the Vulture Engine Co. No. 4, met the "Vulture" boys near the Quincy Point bridge, and preceded with them to their engine house, and after lending a hand to the breaks of the "Vulture" to the tune of 190 feet, without the "extensions," the two companies preceded by good music and led by Mr. T. F. Cleverly, the first assistant of the inviting company, repaired to Thomas' Hall, where they did ample justice to the chowder, &c., prepared for them by the obliging steward of the Vulture Engine Company.

In the forenoon the "Actives" had two running matches, after playing their engine. In the first match of about a mile, four entered and Mr. Murphy, of Weymouth Landing, won the first prize; in the second, a match of 100 yards, Mr. Wilbur Cleverly, of Quincy Point, won the first prize.

PILGRIM FATHERS. The grand scenic Cantata of the Pilgrim Fathers, which is to be given by the Quincy Musical Union on April 16th, is attracting the attention of all lovers of good music, and with good reason. The Society has been heartily at work and has entered into all the plans and thoughts of the Director with perfect unanimity which is of itself a guarantee of success. The Cantata is a most pleasing composition and will be given with scenery, costumes, &c., which, together with the aid of numerous auxiliaries will make it a most enjoyable evening's entertainment.

Reed and the yacht Sagamore heretofore a familiar object at the Squantum mooring was bought by Mr. M. J. Kiley of the Dorchester district.

SALE OF REAL ESTATE. Two lots of land belonging to the estate of the late Charlotte Carr, on Adams street, Quincy, were sold at auction on Monday last. The lots together measured about 18,234 feet and were purchased by Mr. Isaac Fenno at fifteen cents per foot.

A GOOD PLACE TO BUY CARPETS. To all who contemplate furnishing either partially or completely, we would recommend a call on the carpet house of John H. Pray, Sons & Co. They are one of the oldest, and most reliable firms in Boston, and in purchasing of them, one is always sure of a good carpet at a fair price.

DISTRICT COURT. The business has been very quiet at this institution during the week:—

The two liquor cases, which were brought against Wm. P. F. Meserve, of Quincy, on complaint of Henry H. Faxon, were disposed of on Monday. On the complaint of selling intoxicating liquors on the Lord's day, he was discharged. Although the evidence of Thos. W. Curtis was that he had bought and paid for liquors on the Sabbath, at the Robertson House, it was shown that he was a guest of the House on the day he bought the liquor, having ordered and paid for a dinner on that day. On the second complaint, that of selling liquor over a public bar, Mr. Meserve was found guilty and fined $50 and costs. From which sentence he appealed to the Superior Court and gave bonds in $300 for his appearance.

MESSES. William T. Shea, John E. Burns and William H. Teasdale, attended the Temperance Convention at Lawrence, on Thursday. They being delegates from the St. Mary's C. T. A. Society of Quincy.

April came in with a tough north-east snow storm. More snow was visible on April 1st morning, than on any time in March. But no sleigh parties made their appearance to be April fooled, and the white pretty flakes began to dissolve and scamper down the gutters to the brooks.

The Rev. E. R. Drake has resigned the pastorate of the Christian Union Church, at Quincy Point, and preaches his last sermon to-morrow and he says he has something special to say to the society. The society has prospered under his ministrations, and he may be assured that he leaves a large circle of warm friends.

At the regular communication of Rural Lodge of Free Masons on Thursday evening last the Lodge was visited by about fifty "brothers of the mystic tie," from South Boston, who came out on a special train; one of the knowing ones says, "It was a real good time." The supper was an excellent one and was prepared by the veteran caterer Loring A. French.

Joseph T. French resigned the position of Superintendent of Lockup on Tuesday last. During his term of two years' service Mr. French has catered to the wants of thousands of weary travelers and has at all times kept the establishment in a neat and cleanly manner. "Good bye Joe!" will no longer be the last word of the unfortunate man who is placed there for safe keeping. Michael Walsh has been appointed to fill the vacancy.

Town Meeting.

We are unable to see the necessity of expending $8000 to enlarge the Adams Schoolhouse, as, by the report of the School Committee there are only seven more pupils in the schools than there were fifteen years ago. In 1864 there were 420 in the Adams schools; by the last report 436. In reality there are not as many scholars in the south schools as there were in 1864, by fifty pupils, as since that time a school belonging to the Coddington schools, kept over Mr. Bond's store of fifty or more children, has been returned to the Adams. In all fairness, the Committee ought to have returned this school to the Coddington house, which would have relieved the Adams of fifty scholars, and reduced their number of pupils to 370; much less than the whole number was in 1864, when it was 420. We think it strange economy to expend $8000 to enlarge the Adams schoolhouse, when the pupils within her limits are decreasing. We know that people are apt in the excitement of town meeting to vote away more money than they intended, but the day of repentance soon comes; when they are called upon to pay their tax. At this meeting they have an opportunity to economize before the day of retribution arrives.

The amount of money appropriated at the March meeting, with the County and State tax added, will make the town tax upwards of sixteen dollars on a thousand, and if the Assessors as contemplated reduce the valuation, it will be nearly twenty dollars on a thousand, which is a much larger tax than the town has assessed on her citizens for years. It seems singular that Quincy should increase her tax while other towns and cities are cutting theirs down.

Quincy is comparatively a poor town, but a few wealthy persons reside among us, which makes the burden of taxation bear heavily on the masses, especially in these hard times, which is evidently the case, as last year over a third of a million of dollars of their hard earnings was drawn out of the Quincy Savings Bank, (or $385,463.34) to assist them to bear the necessary burdens of life. It is often asked why rents, and the necessities of life are so high in Quincy. This is easily answered: If you have high taxation the landlord must have his return in advanced rents and the store keeper in the price of his goods.

To expend one thousand dollars on schoolroom for them and let the two commodious and pleasant schoolrooms in the stone schoolhouse remain idle, is we think preposterous.

SOUTH QUINCY.

LECTURE BY G. G. BUSH, PH. D. The attentive audience which assembled in Trinity vestry last Friday evening enjoyed a treat in the lecture by Dr. Bush, formerly a Professor in the Vermont Methodist Seminary, and lately returned from abroad, where he has been spending some years in study and travel. Dr. Bush is a cultured gentleman and his lecture was one to be appreciated by a cultured and refined audience. His subject was Ireland, Scotland and England. He spoke of the beautiful lakes of Killarney, so widely celebrated, which he regarded as no more beautiful than many of the crystal lakes of America, of the Giant's Causeway in the north of Ireland, said to have been built by an Irish giant across the narrow channel to the shore of Scotland, in order to enable a Scotch giant to cross and engage with him in combat. Of Scotland, the land of Scott and Burns, he gave a glowing account. Glasgow, Aberdeen, Melrose Abbey, Ayr, and Leith, London and Katrina were painted in living colors, while his frequent allusion to the fine descriptive poetry of Sir Walter Scott gave an added charm. All were sorry to leave the Highlands and pass to England, but when once there it was no less interesting. English Cathedrals were one point of interest, and Dr. Bush regards them as too much neglected by American tourists. London, with its four millions of inhabitants and grand sights, he thinks the greatest as well as the largest city of the world. Less beautiful than Paris, not so interesting as Rome, with all its ruins, less grand than that of Constantinople, it is yet the great city of the world. Angus & Patriot, Montpelier, Vt.

For the Patriot.

Reply to Justice.

In the last issue of your paper I find a letter signed by "One of Twenty," which needs a few corrections.

First.—The Chemical was not the first piece of apparatus to arrive at the fire spoken of. The Hose Company laid 800 feet of hose, and waited fully five minutes before the Chemical arrived.

Second.—The fire occurred May 20th, 1878, which comes into the years 1878 and 1879, for which the town voted them $10 a man.

Third.—He says they responded to every fire which they knew of, or heard the alarm. I beg leave to differ; their engineer of that year told me personally, that on five or six occasions he had gone to the engine house and to members, houses, and told them there was a fire; they told him they knew it, they had been watching it. They told him to go home, and not make so much noise, waking people up at that time of night, and did not turn out, even refused to give him the keys of the church to ring the bell.

If "One of Twenty," thinks they deserve ten dollars a man for responding to three alarms, what should be paid to those firemen who responded to twenty-three alarms. Is he aware that the Board of Engineers had under serious consideration the disbanding of the company, which the trouble at West Quincy at the time alone prevented.

If Wollaston is so near Heaven as some people who live there think, the engineers had better take the Chemical away, for there will be no occasion to use it there. I think the communication should have been signed by "one of ten," as that is all that ever turned out at a fire, and the ignorance shown, makes it certain that he belongs to the "stay at home ten." In future "One of Twenty," had better write on a subject he knows more about, or tell the whole truth, hit whom it may.

HYDRANT.

For two years past Mr. Isaiah G. Whiton, a prominent and worthy citizen of Quincy Point, has had growing on his back a swelling supposed to be a tumor, and of late its proportions having become so large and troublesome, he decided to have it removed, which was done very skillfully by Dr. Porter at the Mass. General Hospital, Boston, on Monday last. As last accounts Mr. Whiton seemed quite comfortable, and hoped to be able to leave the hospital in about a week.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, APRIL 5, 1879.

Food Adulteration.

The subject of food adulteration has been quite fully discussed of late by the daily press, pro and con. Since the manufacture of "wooden nutmegs," and the patents for making "Java coffee," and "oleomargarine," a substitute for butter, we have seen nothing equal to the artificial manufacture of eggs in San Francisco. A California journal says, the albumen is imitated with a mixture of sulphur, carbon and fatty matter obtained from the slaughter-houses and rendered sticky with mucilage. The yolk is composed of blood, phosphate of lime, magnesia, muriate of ammonia, oleic and margaric acids and colored with chrome yellow. The egg-shells are shaped by a blow-pipe from a mass of gypsum, carbonate of lime and oxide of iron. After the shells are blown the albumen is forced in through a hole in the small end and adheres to the sides; then the yolk is added, and after being covered with more of the albumen mixture the hole is sealed with cement; the completed egg is then rubbed smooth and laid aside for packing. It is asserted that many barrels of these eggs have been already shipped Eastward for consumption. As the East is so fond of Western products, such as meats, grains, fruits, dairy products, etc., we may be, and most likely shall be, furnished with eggs manufactured and shipped from San Francisco to New York and Boston. And there will be chemists, undoubtedly who will testify as they do of oleomargarine, that it is better than that quality of butter that is unfit to eat; so of manufactured eggs; they will probably inform us that eggs made at the San Francisco factory are better than rotten eggs, though the products of hens.

ANDREWS' BAZAR. Is a name familiar to over two hundred thousand readers, for it is the title of the leading fashion monthly of the nation. An extended and thorough experience of many years in all that appertains to the female toilet guided by an exquisite taste, is shown in the studies of fashion given in the pages of this periodical, in the illustrations, the descriptions and the thousand and one suggestions as to the requirement of artistic dress. The elegancies of life, as displayed in "Household Decoration," "Needlework," "Floriculture," etc., are happily taught, and the higher branches of literature represented by the cleverest writers whose service money can purchase. Among the departments may be noted criticisms on art, music, books and the drama; fiction, both serial and short stories; poetry; essays and sketches of travel; biographies; humor; and brilliant gossip of a personal character. Andrews' Bazar is a treasure-trove of fashion, wit, fancy and wisdom. Subscription price $1 per annum; price per single copy, 10 cents. Address, W. R. Andrews, Cincinnati, Ohio.

A CURE FOR WARTS. G. W. Hoof, of Chicago, writes to the Inter-Ocean: Some two months since I noticed in a country paper a simple remedy to remove warts. As I had no less than twenty large seed warts on my hands, and several smaller ones, I applied this remedy as published, taking a common Irish potato, cutting it in two, and applying the juice over each wart two or three times a day. Mine have all disappeared and as this remedy is handy for all, I thought it worthy of republishing.

For the Patriot. Good Advice.

Advice will never harm any man if it be good, if bad turn a deaf ear. God has never called upon any man to do anything he cannot do, hence all things are possible with God, but impossible with man. Let us covet the best gift that God will bestow upon man; strive to do his will in all things. Man knows but little what power God will bestow upon him if he be true to himself. Let me say to all, both rich and poor, to lay up treasures beyond this world for the day will surely come when you will need them. Let us all have our lamps trimmed and burning, and when death or change shall come we shall not fear to meet our loved ones beyond the river; nor fear to meet our God. Let us always be willing to lift up the fallen of God's children, for by so doing we obey God's commands. Selfishness will never bring peace to a man's soul in this life or in the life that is to come. But good deeds will give him peace day by day if he does them for duty's sake. The way of the transgressor is hard. Let the people see that you mean to be a man. Then you will do some good by living in the world.

A FRIEND.

Women have voted this spring in many of the school district meetings in New Hampshire, while in other places no desire has been manifested by those, to whom this privilege is now for the first time granted, to take advantage of it. Where the women have attended these meetings good order has prevailed and they have been treated most respectfully. It is too early as yet to draw any conclusions as to the effect of the change upon the condition of the schools, though the experiment has shown that many women are taking much interest in educational matters.

The people of the United States spend $8,000,000 per annum for wall-paper,—their requirement being about 57,142,860 rolls, or 457,142,400 yards—which would be sufficient to girdle the earth at the equator and leave several hundred miles to spare.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, APRIL 5, 1879.

What the Capital Cost.

Last June Congress called upon the Secretary of the Treasury for a tabulated statement of all money spent by the Government since its origin in the District of Columbia. This statement has been prepared by Mr. Bailey of the warrant division, and is full of interesting figures. The total expenditures for what may be called permanent improvements, including original expenditures, the cost of repairs, furnishing and keeping in order the public institutions of Washington, are as follows:—

The capital,	$17,184,691.13
The patent office,	13,197,908.19
The treasury department,	7,062,942.42
Streets and avenues of Washington	5,975,294.98
The state department,	4,989,748.21
Loans, etc., to Dist. of Columbia,	4,927,290.80
Benevolent institution,	4,732,448.92
Penal institutions,	4,418,324.70
Water works,	4,000,822.16
Navy department, (including yard),	3,809,236.04
Department of agriculture,	3,174,392.75
Smithsonian institution,	2,905,420.36
Post office department,	2,124,504.69
War department,	2,044,064.42
Parks and public grounds,	1,826,537.33
Executive mansion and grounds,	1,640,419.90
The library of congress,	1,575,837.24
Bridges, etc.,	1,260,568.12
The botanic garden,	722,813.88
Works of art, painting, statuary—
Corcoran gallery,	602,569.18
Canals,	527,418.83
Miscellaneous,	350,540.05
Fire department, (buildings, engines)	199,260.60
Courts,	78,486.82
Total,	$92,112,336.87

The total represents the amount of money the Government has invested in the District of Columbia, under the items named, none of which, under the statutes, is taxable. The Government owns all the streets, avenues, alleys, parks and public grounds in Washington, and is proprietor of about one-half the average of the city. In lieu of taxes, it annually provides one-half of the money required to support the district government.

The Story of a Cow-Bell.

A correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette sends the following story of a law case from Floyd County, Ind: Mayfield and Feathergill were well-to-do farmers. One of Mayfield's cows dropped a bell from her neck in the woods that cost fifty cents, and was half worn, and was supposed to be worth twenty-five cents when lost. One of Feathergill's boys, in passing through the woods one day, found a cow-bell, Mayfield claimed that it was his bell, and demanded it. Feathergill refused to give it up. Mayfield replevined it, and this commenced a lawsuit that absorbed the farms and personal estate of the contestants. Not being able to pay lawyers' fees any longer, the lawyers refused to serve in the case, and the litigants were compelled to compromise, which they did by each agreeing to pay his own costs, which amounted to over $1,500 a side, or an aggregate of over $3,000.

It is thought by some that Florida is the only State that grows oranges for market, yet the orange crop of Louisiana for 1876 was estimated at 32,000,000 oranges.

A sharp young fellow sold forty-eight Bibles in Chicago by having printed on the covers, "One thousand recipes for making handsome women."

Summary of News.

Fast Day in Vermont occurs April 11th.

The New York World's Fair is expected to be opened in May, 1883.

In round numbers we have now thirty thousand post offices, and they are increasing at the rate of a thousand a year.

Three Boston candy factories employ 300 people and make 4,000 tons of candy yearly.

Caleb Cushing received twenty-six thousand dollars in legal fees, during the last year of his life.

Ipswich boasts a 44-year-old pony, which Caleb Cushing brought from Mexico long ago. It is almost as hardy as ever.

The lieutenant governor of Colorado, a little short of a year ago, was a day laborer, and his wife took in washing. To-day he has an income of $6000 a month.

Popular Errors.

To think the more a man eats the fatter and stronger he will become.

To believe that the more hours children study the faster they will learn.

To conclude, if exercise is good, the more violent it is the more good is done.

To imagine that every hour taken from sleep is an hour gained.

To act on the presumption that the smallest room in the house is large enough to sleep in.

To argue that whatever remedy causes one to feel immediately better is good for the system, without regard to more ulterior effects.

To eat without an appetite, or to continue to eat after it has been satisfied merely to gratify the taste.

To eat a hearty supper for the pleasure experienced during the brief period it is passing down the throat, at the expense of a whole night of disturbed sleep and a weary waking in the morning.

PLANTING TREES. This is a job that should not be hurried. It is not fair treatment of a tree to put it into a hole with clods of wet, half frozen earth around its roots. If trees are received before the ground is ready, heel them in and let them wait. Select a dry place where the soil is light, open a trench, and lay in the trees in a slanting position—at an angle of forty-five degrees, one after another, carefully covering the roots and lower part of the stem of each with soil. See that each tree is properly labeled, or if there are a number of a kind, place a stake to mark them in such a manner that there will be no doubt about their names when they are taken out. Care now will save much trouble in future. When properly heeled in the trees are safe for a month or more.

SATURDAY, APRIL 12, 1879.

Geese or Gooses.

The particular kind of a smoothing-iron known among tailors as a "goose" came near upsetting the reason of a bright young clerk and the proprietor of a Chicago tailoring establishment one day this week.

The manager wanted two of the instruments mentioned, and so told the clerk; but after the latter had sat for some time writing on the order, he looked up in a bewildered way and asked:—

"What do you call the plural of a tailor's goose?"

"Why, geese is the plural of goose," said the manager.

"Well, you wouldn't have me write an order for two tailor's geese would you?"

"That doesn't sound hardly sensible in this connection," replied the proprietor; but how would it do to say 'two tailor's geese'?"

The boy turned to the dictionary, and shaking his head, remarked:

"Webster doesn't give any such plural as that to goose, and I ain't going to."

The situation was growing serious, when the clerk suddenly set to writing with the exclamation:

"Now I'll fix it."

And the order, which he soon handed to the head of the house to sign, did fix it, for it read:

"Messrs. Brown & Co., hardware dealers, Fifth Avenue: Please send me a number one tailor's goose, and—by the eternal—send me another just like it."

But further than this the question of what is the plural of tailor's goose has not yet been settled in this town, or any other that we know.—Evenston Journal.

Read This Girls.

Learn to darn stockings neatly, and then always see that your own are in order. Don't let a button be off your shoes a minute longer than needful. It takes just about a minute to sew one on, and oh, how much neater a foot looks in a trimly buttoned boot than it does in a lop-sided affair with half the buttons off. Every girl should learn to make all the simpler articles of clothing, and we know a little girl of seven who could do this, and who also made the whole of a blue calico dress for herself, and pieced a large bed quilt. She was not an over-taxed child, either, but a merry, romping, indulged, only daughter. But she was "smart," and she did not die young either. Indeed, we have seldom known children "too smart to live." Very few ever die of that complaint, whatever their grandmothers may think.

So never be afraid a bit of overdoing the business. Help all you can, and study over the business daily. Once get in the habit of looking over your things, and you will like it wonderfully. You will have the independent feeling that you need not wait for any one's convenience in repairing and making, but that you can be beforehand in all such matters. The relief to your weary mother will be more than you can ever estimate.

Fating House Scenes.

Brown, having eaten his breakfast, walks up to the desk to settle.

Brown.—How much is my bill?

Cookier.—What have you had?

Brown, (stopping to think).—Well, let me see. I had some codfish, chicken, lamb, veal, mutton, ham, beef, pork and potatoes.

Cookier, (nodding up the different items).—One dollar and forty-five cents.

Brown.—Good gracious! Is that your price for a puns of hash? Which was all he had eaten.

"Not for a hundred dimes, sir."

Here, my dear, drink a glass of wine," said a lady, as she handed a glass of sparkling champagne to a bright boy.

"No, thank you ma'am, I belong to the cold water band," replied the boy.

"I'll give you a dime if you will drink it," said a gentleman, who wanted to test the wine testator's strength.

"O no, no," rejoined the boy, "I would not break my pledge for a hundred dimes!"

Notice young testator! How many of our readers are as true as he?

Lady.—Are you sure she's not at home?

Bridge.—Indeed an' she ain't. If I'd don't believe me, ye can ax her—she's up stairs, so she is."

SCHOOL APPROPRIATIONS. The Canton Journal gives the following figures as appropriations made for schools in the several towns in this county for the year 1877:

Brookline appropriated for schools for 1877, exclusive of cost of supervision, $27.84 per child, between the ages of 5 and 15 years; Milton, $26.81; Dedham, $17.59; Needham, $16.78; Walpole, $16.18; Norwood, $15.62; Hyde Park, $14.48; Wrentham, $13.96; Quincy, $13.94; Holbrook, $13.62; Medfield, $13.02; Weymouth, $12.84; Canton, $12.73; Randolph, $12.48; and Foxboro', $12.14. For 1878, including $1300 for supervision, Canton's appropriation was $12.39.

SALE OF A CHURCH PEW. Messrs. Wheatland & Bird offered at auction a pew in the Central Church, corner of Berkeley and Newbury streets, Boston, valued at three thousand dollars. The property was bid in by the society.

NEW TEETH. Mrs. John Baptist Zoliver of Oldtown is 73 years old and the mother of seventeen children, ten girls and seven boys. Within the last year nine new teeth have grown to their full size from her upper and lower jaws.—She is cutting the tenth now.

There is an artesian well in Paris which is nearly two thousand feet deep four feet in diameter at the top and two feet at the bottom, and which discharges upwards of 5,000,000 of cubic feet of water every twenty-four hours.

A newly-discovered process by which sugar can be profitably made from Indian corn and sorghum will soon be made public, so officially reports Mr. Victor Drummond, Secretary of the English Legation at Washington. He says that sorghum will yield 1,000 pounds of sugar from each cultivated acre and Indian corn about 800 pounds. If the discovery equals what is claimed for it, its importance to our farmers especially in the West, can hardly be over-estimated.

It is estimated that Iowa produced last season was 45,000,000 bushels of wheat, equal to a bushel for every man woman and child in the United States.

The average salary of a clergyman in the United States is only $500 a year.

California produced seven million gallons of wine last year, and thirty thousand boxes of raisins, the production of the latter being a new enterprise not yet fairly under way.

There are fifteen thousand Masonic lodges in the world, with a membership of five million.

At the recent town meeting in South Abington a committee was selected to make inquiries as to the cost, etc., of a public park.

The hair-spring of a watch weighs 1-15,000th of a pound troy. In a straight line it is a foot long.

S. B. Dyer has a geranium in his greenhouse in Abington that is now adorned with nearly a thousand blossoms. The plant is four years old, is about ten feet in circumference and four feet high.

Every Galesburg, Ill., house containing scarlet fever is placarded.

The town of Brockton has reduced its indebtedness upwards of ten thousand dollars.

Steam-ships for Europe usually carry about 30,000 letters each trip.

Paraffine combs filled with glucose are sold for honey comb.

A lady in Windham, N. H., has kept a diary twenty-eight years, without missing a day.

A school in Londonderry, Vt., ran through a full term this winter with but one scholar.

A colored man, aged 84 years, near Free Union, Va., is the father of twenty-four living children, ten of whom are boys and fourteen girls. Thirteen of the latter are mothers of twins. The number of his grandchildren reaches a hundred. Jacob Wheeler is the name of the old man. He is now living with his third wife, and works hard every day.

It is stated that Gen. Banks' new berth as United States marshal of Massachusetts is worth $25,000 per annum. If this is so, the time has come for a decided reduction of the fees allowed United States marshals. When a marshal is paid more money than the chief justice of the United States, an overhauling of fee-bills should take place.

Rhubarb is raised for the New York market, in winter, in ice-bound Quebec. It is cultivated in dark galleries twenty feet under ground and heated by steam. The stalks are tender and almost white, and bring a high price as a winter luxury.

Brother Slack of the Boston Commonwealth is responsible for the following:—"It was at the 'Temple,' Quincy, Mass., after a stately funeral, that the master of ceremonies solemnly announced in sonorous tone that 'the audience will remain seated while the corpse passes round to look at the mourners!'"

They would be pleased to have the public call and examine this feed, as they believe it to be superior to any in the market.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, APRIL 1, 1879.

Using Her Feet.

Rev. Mr. Nightingale contributes to the Springfield Republican the following story of Rev. Dr. Lothrop, an eccentric parson who officiated in West Springfield:—"A young lady, a member of Dr. Lothrop's church, went on a visit to a neighboring town, and while there attended a party and danced. Tidings of her sin reached home before her. On her return she was visited and called to most severe account for the disgrace she had thus brought upon herself and the church, and which had been found out, notwithstanding it had been done among strangers. One staid maiden was specially earnest in her rebukes, and made the poor girl feel very bad. "What shall I do?" she asked. "You had better go and see Dr. Lothrop." She did go, and told him all about it. "And so, my dear, you went to the party, and danced, did you?" he said. "Yes sir." "And did you have a good time?" "Yes sir." "Well, I am glad of it, and I hope you will go again, and enjoy yourself. And now I want you to tell me the name of the woman who has been making you all this trouble." She told. "Go to that woman, and tell her from me that, if she wants to get to heaven she had better make more use of her feet and less of her tongue."

The Other Side.

Once, in a happy home, a sweet, bright baby died. On the evening of the day, when the children gathered round their mother, all sitting very sorrowful, Alice, the eldest, said, "Mother, you took all the care of baby while she was here, and you carried and held her in your arms all the while she was ill; now, mother, who took her on the other side?" "On the other side of what, Alice?" asked the mother. "On the other side of death; who took the baby on the other side, mother; she was so little she could not go alone?" "Jesus met her there," answered the mother. "It is he who took little children in his arms to bless them, and said, 'Suffer them to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven.' He took the baby on the other side."

A WIFE'S OWN LETTERS. "I want you to distinctly understand, sir!" began a Third Street wife as her husband came home and tossed into her lap an open letter addressed to her personally—"I want you to distinctly understand that I read the papers!"

"Do, eh?" was the careless reply. "Yes, sir, I do, and I know that the post-master-general has ruled that a husband has no control over his wife's correspondence. Here, sir, you have for the fifth or sixth time opened a letter addressed to me personally!" "Yes, I know it," he demurely replied, "and for the fifth or sixth time I have written across the envelope:—'Opened by mistake!' If that doesn't cover the case you can appeal!" She didn't appeal, but she is going to rent a lock-box.

The late Crispus Graves of Deer-ing, Me., and his brother, occupied one room in their house for all purposes. They had a perfect arsenal of old weapons, mended their harnesses in the room where they eat and slept, and on the smoke-begrimmed walls kept their accounts and their diary of events, which ran back to 1840. They never changed their clothes, and it is said that it did not cost them $50 a year to live. Crispus left $15,000 to the district school in Falmouth.

The Old Colony management is shrewd, vigorous and comprehensive.—It means dividends to the stockholders at all hazards, as well as good accommodations for the public.

"My dear," said a husband, in startling tones, after waking his wife in the night, "I have swallowed a dose of strychnine!" "Well, then, do for goodness sake lie still, or it may come up."

The Newton Journal calls attention to the decease of five prominent business men of Boston, residents of Newton, within a comparatively recent period:—Seth Adams, J. Wiley Edmunds, F. M. Johnson, Langdon Coffin and Gardner Colby.

One of the largest cranberry farms in the world is known as Sackett's Marsh, near Berlin, Wisconsin. It comprises 750 acres of marsh, about one-fourth of which is under cultivation.

LIVE NOBLY. Men should learn to live nobly. It is not enough that we pass through life inoffensively. We must crowd our days with acts of positive goodness. There is many a harmless plant, which, because it is nothing more than harmless is trampled in the mire or burned with useless stubble. A flower, not half so large or strong, because it smiles a blessing on the world, is cherished in kindness and praised for its benevolence. Live nobly, which means that you are to love and serve your God with all your heart, and soul, and mind, and strength, and your neighbor as yourself, loving not in word only, but in deed and in truth.

"Now, children," said a Sunday-school superintendent, who had been talking to his scholars about good people and bad people, when I'm walking in the street, I speak to some persons I meet, and I don't speak to others; and what's the reason?" He expected the reply would be, "Because some are good and others are bad;" but to his discomfiture, the general shout was, "Because some are rich and others are poor."

This is a good old story—given in the Graphic—about the aged lady on her death-bed, who was in a penitential mood. She said: "I have been a great sinner more than eighty years, and didn't know it." An old colored woman who had lived with her a long time exclaimed: "Lors! I knowed it all the time."

A little girl who had often heard her mother speak of her father, who was somewhat bald, as being a self-made man, asked her one day, if father was a self-made man, why he didn't put more hair on his head.

"Why do you call me birdie, my dear?" inquired a wife of her husband. "Because you are always associated in my mind with a bill," was the answer.

"I would not live always," is an old song; but nowadays, remarks an exchange, there are a great many persons who are trying all ways to live.

"Can I go into your show without paying," once asked a female of A. Ward. "No," said A. W., but you can pay without going in."

What is the difference between a hungry man and a glutton? One longs to eat; the other eats too long.

A Sunday school boy on being asked what made the tower of Pisa lean replied, "Because of the famine in the land."

"I am a broken man," said a poet. "So I should think," was the answer; "for I have seen your pieces."

The knock-kneed man can get over the landscape more rapidly than the bow-legged man, but he cannot frame it as beautifully.

An exchange says: "There isn't much difference between a grasshopper and a grass-widow, after all. Either will jump at the first chance."

Josh Billings says he knows people who are so fond of argument that they will stop and dispute with a guide-board about the distance to the next town.

Longfellow was presented to Mr. Longworth of Cincinnati. The latter remarked to the poet, "There is no great difference in our names." "Yes," replied Mr. Longfellow, but scorth makes the man, the want of it the fellow.

A farmer the other day wrote to a New York merchant, asking how the farmer's son was getting along, and where he slept nights. The merchant replied, "He sleeps in the store day-times. I don't know where he sleeps nights."

A new biographer of Artemas Ward says the genial humorist usually wrote with one leg over the arm of his chair. We had always supposed he wrote with a pen or pencil, but to write with one leg over the arm of the chair, is not so difficult as to write with one arm over the leg of a chair.

Why are your cheeks like my pom-poms?" said a country beau to his talkative sweetheart, as soon as he could get a word in edgewise, after they had set out on their ride. "Is it because they're red?" said the blushing girl. "No it's because there's one of them on each side of a waggin' tongue."

Every day we have evidence that the small boy has no soul. The other day a crowd gathered around a farmer whose wagon load of butter and eggs were fast in a mud hole, and while some suggested that he pull his horse free, and others that he pull him haw, the ever present boys yelled, "It's no use, mister. Yer old horse ain't strong enough. Take him out and hitch in a roll of yer butter."

He had stayed till the clock hands hung together at eleven, and that valuable recorder of time was menacing a strike. She had yawned till her mouth felt large enough for a horse collar, and yet the man evinced no symptoms of speedy departure. "I've been working on a motto to-day," she finally said, as she held her eyes open with her fingers; "don't you want to see it?" He said he did. She brought out the article, and passed it to him for inspection. He held it up to the light, and read the cheerful sentence: "There's no place like home." The young man guessed he'd be going.—Rockland Courier.

Unitarianism.

Rev. E. A. Perry chose for his subject on Sunday evening last, Unitarianism; and for his text, Mark, 12th chapter and 29th verse.
He said the modern theological questions did not arise in the early christian church. The so-called Unitarian and Universalist heresies were orthodox in their day. In fact it was not till the sixteenth century that these were named.

After the Reformation, Unitarianism was strong in Poland and Transylvania. Persecution rooted them out of the former but in the latter they still abide.

In England these views arose soon after the Reformation. Later many protestant churches, being creedless, joined into Unitarianism.

In America the first appearance of Unitarianism in the preaching was in 1733. In 1785 King's Chapel, Boston, seceded from the Prayer Book. The Trinity and the worship of Christ. Some wings of the Congregational Church began to appear. But for some years no real relations were maintained between them.

In 1815 a discussion between Dr. Wm. E. Channing and Dr. Worcester resulted in the formation of the Unitarian denomination. Channing, pure, upright, philosophical, spiritual, able, eloquent and scholarly, became the founder of a new sect.

There are a little less than four hundred churches and clergymen of this denomination in the United States. Of these full half are to be found in Massachusetts.

The people of Massachusetts were decidedly better prepared for the reception of this view than those of other parts of the country. In many cases churches bodily accepted Unitarianism. In some cases the church members remained believers in the Trinity. They were compelled to secede. Suit was brought in the name of the church against the parish for control of church property. The Supreme Court held that the church had no existence in law, and that church property must in all cases remain with the old organization. These old organizations retained the Congregational form of government and to hold property. King's Chapel for a similar reason retained the Episcopal form.

Unitarian churches are then Congregational churches. Indeed they retain today more of the independence of Congregationalism than any other denomination in the Orthodox churches. In fact a Unitarian church is the oldest in the United States.

Unitarian churches have doctrines but no creed. The true idea of a church is an organization of doves, Christianity as a faith rather than a belief. But if no belief be requisite there is a danger that one will drift into denial of everything unitarian, and that can be called christianism.

Unitarians deny the Trinity, namely, the Deity of Christ and affirm that he was Christ to be the teacher of men. Some teach that Christ was divine, others that he was but a man who taught better than the ordinary. The doctrine of vicarious atonement was given up by the Unitarians. During the last few years endless misery has also been outworn. The first elaborate sermon in America on the question of the Trinity was written not by a Unitarian, but by Hosea Ballou, a Universalist.

Unitarians have been much interested in philosophical and practical christianism. They wield a large power because of their culture and high social position. May God speed them in their good work.

Probate Court.

Judge White held his regular monthly session of Probate Court in this town on Wednesday last, when the following business was transacted:—

Adjudication.—James Bates, administrator of the estate of Lowell Bates of Westbury, Aaron A. Prescott, administrator of the estate of Betsey Prescott of Norfolk, bonds, $800. Susan L. Conant, executrix of the estate of Frank D. Lawrence of Quincy; bond, $1000. Maria Lawrence, administrator of the estate of James C. Doherty of Cohasset, bonds, $1000. Special administration of the personal estate of Elisha Simpson, all of Quincy.

Probate.—Mary J. Belcher for a dower in the estate of Nathaniel Belcher of Quincy. Lucinda A. Packard to be executrix of the estate of Sally H. Bond of Randolph.

Adoption.—presented.—Charles R. Allen, guardian of Edward A. and Frank B. Mitchell of Quincy. Seth Allen, executor of Edward McDonald, executor of the will of Abigail Newcomb of Quincy. Harriet L. Mansfield, executrix of the estate of Gardner A. Mitchell of Braintree. Robert M. Jones, Samuel W. Sweet, Jr., Ingersoll Jones and Charles U. Cutting, trustees of the will of Ebenezer Francis Sawyer. The trustees on this estate received and paid a bill of millions of dollars.

Adoption.—presented.—Estate of William Doherty of Quincy. John Page, assignee of Francis and E. W. Underhill, assignees. Estate of James F. Smith of Hallowell; Charles F. Smith, Charles C. Bixby and Eleonora C. Bixby, assignees. Estate of Thomas J. Hild and Patrick Kinney, assignees. Estate of John L. French of Randolph; Eleazer Deal, John Long and John V. Deal, assignees.

Adoption.—A young man named William Condon was fatally injured at Paul's quarry at West Quincy on Saturday last, by being crushed by a falling stone. He was conveyed to the Massachusetts General Hospital but died before reaching there. His remains were interred at West Quincy on Sunday last.

H. M. S. PINAFORE. It is with feelings of doubt, that the critic attends the performance of the average "travelling combination," for the chances are more than even that it will prove to be, what is generally regarded as a snide show; the writer was therefore agreeably disappointed in the troupe that gave "Pinafore," at the Town Hall last week Friday evening for whatever their shortcomings may be, they are evidently trying to do honest work in an honest way; and in so much deserve encouragement. From a dramatic point of view the troupe is sadly deficient, crude and amateurish and show the lack of energetic stage handling. Musically considered they do some work that would do credit to an organization of more pretensions; many of the numbers being rendered with a dash and spirit quite entertaining, but without the finish, which close study and proper training alone can give. The stage was set neatly, the orchestra was fair. The house was small and moderately appreciative.

GRAND JURY REPORT. The Grand Jury for Norfolk county reported Tuesday last two indictments for manslaughter were returned against the Old Colony Railroad Corporation for causing the deaths of Patrick Reagan and John A. Hasey at Wollaston last October. It is understood that the difficulty in the two cases is that the Corporation is unable to determine who are the legal heirs to whom the money shall be paid; and it is in order that this matter shall be determined by the court that the Corporation has not settled the payment of the $5000 damages. It is probable that the corporations will plead guilty and ask the judge to indicate the parties to whom the money shall be paid.

Other bills were returned as follows: William J. Rothwell, larceny of two coats from Sidney S. Whitaker at the Jail; sentenced to one year in the House of Correction.

Charles Jones of Boston, for larceny of money to the value of $18 from W. F. Meserve at Quincy; plea not guilty.

Charles Allen of Brockton, larceny of a watch and chain from Henry W. Darling at Stoughton; plea not guilty.

Dennis Mulligan of Boston, larceny of copper pails and other articles from the dwelling of Samuel G. Wyman at Braintree; plea not guilty.

William Cook of Needham, perjury in testifying before Judge Bacon at the last term of court.

Charles W. Skelley of Foxboro', defacing a schoolhouse in that town.

Joseph J. Brame, assault upon Philip Duffy.

DISTRICT COURT. The following cases have been before Judge Bumpus this week:—

Marshall Banks, a colored gentleman of Boston, for being a vagabond. Found guilty and sent to the House of Correction for two months.

Thomas Donahue, of Randolph, for an assault on his wife. Found guilty and fined $10 and costs.

Thomas A. Smith, of Holbrook, for an assault on Samuel Emery. Found guilty and fined $10 and costs.

Thomas Kelley, of Randolph, for being drunk. Fined $3 and costs. For non-payment was committed to the House of Correction.

Charles Whiting, of Weymouth, for cruelly beating a horse, thereby causing its death, was fined $50 and costs.

FATAL ACCIDENT. Last Monday night as the 1115 train was leaving the Old Colony depot in Boston, a man was discovered lying on the tracks. The train was stopped, and the body was found badly mutilated, and life extinct. The remains were taken to the Morgue to await identification. It was found to be the body of Michael Igo, a son-in-law of Mr. Patrick Gallagher of this town.

THANKS. Our thanks are due Congressman Hon. B. W. Harris for a copy of the Congressional Directory.

TREES, PLANTS, &c. We would call the attention of readers to the advertisement of the Merrimack River Nursery. The trees from this nursery are spoken of quite highly by citizens of this town, who have purchased them. Catalogues mailed free.

Joseph Dyer, Jr., has been re-elected Collector of Taxes of Braintree. His pay this year is seven mills on a dollar.

One of our most estimable citizens may be thankful for the introduction of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, for its timely use has saved his life.

IS HEAVEN SO VERY FAR AWAY?
For hours along the crowded street,
With aimless steps I've trod,
Without a home or hope in life,
With scarce a hope in God.
This cruel night is fitting close
To such a crushing day;
The earth is, Oh! so dreary cold!
And Heaven so far away.
The friendless rouse no anxious thoughts,
The busy throng sweeps on;
I've strayed beyond the city's lights,
The twilight's gray has gone,
My useless arms have failed to win
A crust, a place to stay.
Earth has no work, no room for me,
And Heaven is far away.
O, great, wide world! O, frowning sky!
So cheerless and so vast,
I dare your keen and cutting sheet,
Your piercing, bitter blast;
Huge, howl and lash this living spark
From out the tortured clay,
That feels existence dark, all dark,
And Heaven so far away.
How dark and black beside my feet
The sloughy river rolls;
It beckons as a demon might
To lure unhappy souls.
Its slimy voice is whispering,
Here, rest in peace for aye.
O, God! the river is so near,
And Heaven so far away. J. M.

Poetry.
Courage, Faint Heart.

The first of the two following poems origi-

IS HEAVEN SO VERY FAR AWAY?

HEAVEN IS NOT FAR AWAY.
O, weary, drooping, faltering soul!
Thou'rt trembling on the brink
Of Styx's dark and troubled tide.
Stop! Pause a moment! Think!
What though dark clouds obscure the light,
And darkness hides thy way,
Have courage yet! press bravely on—
Heaven is not far away!

Think not that yet from human hearts
Has kind compassion fled;
Nor that God's tender, watchful love
To such as you is dead.
Whate'er thy sin, howe'er thou'rt wronged,
Kneel trusting down and pray,
Confidingly, to Him who rules
In Heaven, not far away.

Pray that from out the guilty breast
Of him who caused thy shame,
And trampled 'neath his wanton heel
Thy girlish, virtuous name.
All guilty thoughts of triumph shall Be burned and purged away;
There place be filled with deep remorse,
Just Heaven is near the! Pray!

Pray for thyself, poor, wounded child.
Sob out upon his breast
Thy griefs, thy cares, thy bitter thoughts,
Thy feverish and sleepless hours;
So shall thy burdens disappear,
Thy troubles cease to weigh,
And cheerfully thy trust be put
In Heaven, not far away.

And when, at last, thy earthly sands
From out the glass of time
Are nearly run, and thou approach
The bounds of Heaven's clime,
O, then, forgetting all its griefs
While in its house of clay,
May joyfully thy spirit mount
To Heaven, not far away.

Receipts, Adit, &c.
POVERTY CAKE. One cup sour milk, two cups flour, one cup sugar, one teaspoonful soda, one cup chopped raisins, a little salt, butter size of a walnut, dark spices of all kinds. Bake in one loaf.

VEAL PIE. Line a deep tin pan with a good crust; parboil the meat and put it in; season high; nearly fill the pan with the water in which the meat was parboiled; sprinkle flour over, and cover with tolerable thick crust.

A matron dwelling on the banks of the Te, a married, under cross-examiwed a widower. "Very likely indeed," said she, with a toss of her head, "that my daughter should marry a second-hand man!"

A little girl recently went out to make a call. As she rose to go she exclaimed: "Oh! I forgot! I want to see all your new dresses and things—They'll ask me about them the first thing when I get home." She was furnished with the required details.

AUGUSTA, GA., APRIL 2, 1879.

During the past two years a great change has come over the South. Every thing is peace and happiness, and it seems now as if hard pan had been reached, and business of all kinds must come up again. I have been much pleased with most of South Carolina.
It is a great farming country and a farmer can work all the year round, with the exception of a few days in January.
Lands are extremely cheap,—you can buy good land for from two to five dollars an acre. I have had green peas, asparagus, strawberries, Irish potatoes, beets and radishes. The climate in some parts of South Carolina is beautiful.

You will be surprised I think, when I tell you that the long moss that you saw at the Centennial Exhibition is formed upon the trees by the poisonous vapors, arising from the swamps. I always supposed it grew out from the trees, but I am told by correct authority as I write you.

I have taken quite an interest in the manufacture of spirits of turpentine.
Riding along in the cars we pass thousands of acres of huge pine trees, and about six feet from the ground we notice that each tree has been cut in several places; and nearly at the foot of the tree we find that a hole has been cut to catch the running gum. The gum looks like the gum that comes out of your pine trees. Niggers gather the gum, and in each town we find a distillery for melting and transforming it into resin and turpentine. The process is as follows:—They pour the gum into a large vat, under which is a fire and what we term steam from the vat is the turpentine which runs off through a pipe, and the settings is the resin. Turpentine is worth here, twenty-five cents per gallon. I can't see how any one can live on its production, but I suppose, according to the old saying, "a half a loaf is better than none," and they are after the half loaf.

The lumber business is carried on very extensively in some parts of South Carolina, and its traffic employs a great many men.

But the greatest of all the productions in the South is that of cotton. We see in our transit over the country large plantations, and here and there we saw negroes plowing. It must be a beautiful sight to see a plantation completely covered with snow white cotton, and here and there a negro engaged in plucking
it. The price of cotton here is about eight cents. It doesn't pay to raise it, and many of the farmers are turning their attention to wheat and corn. Guano is sold by the car loads, and the farmer gives one bale of cotton net fall for a ton of guano now. A bale of cotton will weigh on an average about 500 pounds, so you see the merchant is getting $40 for his guano costing him about $20. The farmers are generally a very lazy and indolent race,—never saving their farm manure. All they think of is raising cotton,—buying their pork, beef and other things, they ought to raise.
The women are more for business than the men.

You would laugh to see some of the teams. Some harness a bull, or an ox, or a cow the way we do our horses; and they look comical enough. Eggs are pretty cheap; ranging from seven to twelve cents a dozen. Fair board can be obtained for $10 a month,—fever and ague, chills, bed bugs and fleas thrown in.

They have enormous rattlesnakes in South Carolina. I saw a dead one in Orangeburg the other day that measured six feet and ten inches long and larger than any part of my arm. I have seen a few alligators in the swamps in riding by in the cars; but I must not forget to tell you here just as plenty as robins in your part of the country, and I often stop for ten minutes or more to listen to their melodious strains.

The gardens and the woods send forth their fragrant perfumes, abounding in all quantities of handsome flowers. The beautiful japonicas are just elegant, and I will try and send you a few by mail.

Letter from Colorado.

DENVER, Col., April 5, 1879.
FRIEND PRESCOTT:—I take this opportunity to write a word about this city and its prospects. We are at an altitude of nearly 6,000 feet, and one feels pressed for breath, but the old residents find no trouble. There are a great many who come here with lung difficulty, and some die. I saw the graves of two young doctors in a cemetery near here.

The city of Denver is well laid out with wide streets and sidewalks. Many of the streets have trees of from ten to fifteen years' growth, of the cottonwood species, which are just budding out.
There are some trees in front yards in blossom, and the grass is green where they sprinkle.

The city is supplied with water by the Holly Steam Works. The water comes from the Platte river, which runs through the city. There are no fire engines here;
the Horse Companies do all the work, and they have days for turning on the water to run through the gutters for the purpose of cleaning them and irrigation.

As the city rises as you go from the river, this can be done to good advantage. The great need of this country is rains; the streets are hard and sandy, and the air is filled with dust when the wind blows. The city is very orderly, considering there are so many here waiting for something to turn up. The city has only eight policemen. The hotels, boarding houses and beer shops, are making money. The price of board is about $2.00 per week higher than at home.

The Leadville excitement continues to draw thousands, and men who came from there say the place is full and hundreds sleep out of doors, with snow from two to three feet deep all through the mountains, which can be seen from here. Pike's Peak can be seen also. It is about seventy-five miles off. It is said by parties who have been to Leadville that ten to fifteen persons die there every day of mountain fever and throat troubles, and most of them are buried in the night.

There are many eastern people here.
I have met Mr. Harvey Wheeler, who is looking hale and hearty, and also Harry Crane, formerly of Dutton & Crane, and quite a number with him from Malden; he is soon to return. The old residents here seem to think that Colorado is about the best place in the world, but Harvey says, "Old Massachusetts has some attractions you don't see here."

We have plenty of churches here, almost all kinds, but only one liberal, the Unitarian. The Rev. W. R. Alger, formerly of Boston, has supplied here since October last.

The Good Templars have two good lodges, and the temperance people are alive.

Many buildings are being started here
this spring, mostly of brick; and there are many carpenters looking for work.
Wages are $2.50 per day, when one can get a job. I should not advise anyone to come here with the expectation of Our Story.

Early Pioneer Life in California.

I do not profess to be a religious man, having never studied very deeply into the subject of doctrines and creeds. But I believe in an over-ruling power which governs all things, and in my wanderings over the mountains and plains of the great west, often camping out for weeks with no companions but my dog and horse, I have had some experiences which have led me to acknowledge a mysterious and undefined sympathy between nature and man, and that in some instances mind acts upon and influences matter; although I do not attempt to explain how such things are possible. I remember a case in point which happened when I was stock raising on the Rojo Seco. It was one dreary night in the commencement of the rainy season. I was sitting alone in my shanty—a good enough place of the kind, although not at all like a New England farm house; but I managed to make myself comfortable, and always had enough to eat and to drink, and room for any friend who might claim my hospitality. I had looked after my stock before nightfall, and sat down to my letter writing with a strong sense of the contrast between my snug quarters and the raging storm without. All at once something moved me to go across the gulch to one of my corrals. I knew that everything was all right there; but the idea had taken complete possession of my mind and would not be removed. I went to the door; the wind was a perfect tempest, the rain was not like that we have been used to call rain, but came down in blinding sheets.

"It is all nonsense going out on such a night," I said aloud, and returned to the letter I was writing to my wife. But I was uneasy, and could not fix my mind either on that or my book. At last, impelled by some irresistible force, I lighted my lantern, put on my oil-cloth coat and sallied out, making the best of my way with all possible haste to the corral. The mountain path was turned into the bed of a torrent, which rushed, roaring along, making rather uncertain footing. But I remember that some of the way I ran, so strongly was I impressed that my presence at the foot of the canon was necessary. The cattle were huddled together, and lived mournfully at the sound of my voice, and one pretty white heifer that I called Daisy—after a certain white Daisy at home—came out from the rest and rubbed her cold nose against my face. Everything was all right, and calling myself a fool for my pains, I turned to retrace my steps. After going several rods up the path, a yearning for companionship born of the darkness and dreariness of the hour came over me, and I went back to the corral, and took the path to the place where the lights from Tom Ray's fonde glimmered through the darkness. I make no pretensions towards being a moral man, but I always managed to get along and keep on good terms with my neighbors, without mixing in and becoming one of the rough set of which the society was made up, and seldom went to Tom Ray's excepting on mail days, to get my letters. Although I do not call myself a temperance man, I had no use for the bad tobacco and worse whiskey which Tom dispensed to his customers.

The creek, which ran very near the shanty, was rising fast, and as I paused for a moment to listen to the mingled roaring of the wind and waters, I was startled by a deep groan almost at my feet. Moving cautiously, for the bank was slippery, I found the body of a man laying partly in the water, and so situated that in an hour's time it would have been washed away entirely. Holding my lantern close to his face I recognized a young chap whom I had seen for several days about the puebler, well-dressed and with plenty of money, at first, but now, to all appearance reduced to the last extremity, quite insensible, and with only a few rags hanging about him. I rapped on the door, and called lustily for help, but every light disappeared suddenly, and everything was quiet about the premises. I am not very small, as you see, and in those days I was strong as a lion, so as the poor fellow was very slight it would have been nothing for me in the day time to have carried him the half mile to my shanty; but with the obstacles I had then to encounter, I was pretty well fagged when I reached there. I do not claim to be a philanthropist, but the person is not living who can say that Dick Henderson ever refused to share his last dollar or his last crust, if it comes to that. My father was a physician, and I was brought up among the pills and powders without having some knowledge of them. I had quite a stock of simple medicines on hand, and worked over the poor fellow all night. He was very ill a long time, and I nursed him back to health and strength, and had the satisfaction at least of thinking that I had saved a human life, whether for good or for evil, the future only could determine.

When he was able to talk he said to me one day, "I am sadly troubled to separate my feverish dreams from reality. I remember the row at Ray's and of being knocked down. When they threw me out doors, the cold wind and rain on my face must have restored me to consciousness for a few moments. I could not stir, and remember my anguish at the thought that I was left there alone to die. I had heard your sober, quiet way of talking, and I was so sure that you were the only person in the section who would be likely to befriend me. Then I seemed to remember being here in this shanty. The fire was burning brightly, the dogs were stretched out on the hearth. You sat by that table, dressed as you are now writing, your pistols lay within reach, but your gun stood in that corner. I wanted you to go to the aid of the poor fellow lying helpless, with the water rising around him, whom I regarded with a feeling of pity, as some one entirely apart from myself. You went to the door and looked out, and I was in ecstasy; then you went back to your employment and I was in despair. Presently you got ready with great haste and some of the way you ran down the slippery path, but you could not go fast enough to suit me. You stopped at a corral, and petted one of the white creatures; then started back the way you came, and I abandoned all hope, and remember nothing more until I awoke where I am now. How did I come here?"

I told him enough to satisfy him, and you can think what you choose, but in my own mind I had not a doubt but the spirit on the confines of eternity made one last desperate struggle to continue in the frail tenement of clay and succeeded. He was a pleasant fellow, and I became very much interested in, and attached to him. His story was simple enough. A lawyer by profession; success had made him reckless. He became dissipated, lost several important cases, failed in business, and discouraged at the idea of reformation, while surrounded by his old associates, like thousands of others, had left home and family to build up a fortune in California, where he had an uncle located. He fell in with Tom Ray at San Francisco when he first landed from the steamer, he being as usual on the lookout for some one to fleece. He had been completely taken in, nearly murdered, and thrown out in the storm to die.

He stayed with me until Spring opened. Then business took me to the States and he started once more to his uncle's. I fitted him out with a considerable sum of money, a horse and the only coat I had in the world—not a very snug fit by the way, but it answered every purpose; and I went to 'Ciso in my shooting jacket, and he sold out my interest on the Rojo Seco, and have never been there since. My wife returned with me to California, and we settled in the southern part of the state. I often thought of Ned Gay, but he seemed to have passed out of my pathway entirely, with dozens of other chance acquaintances. And I had given up ever hearing from him again, until five or six years later my wife and I went on a pleasure excursion, and stopped over night at a pleasant village in Placer county. As I stood on the piazza of the Crystal Lake House smoking my cigar, some one laid a hand on my shoulder. I did not recognize the stout, bearded man at first, but the voice and smile were Ned Gay's own. Our joy at meeting was mutual, and we compared notes as to the way the years had used us. Everything had prospered with my friend. He had commenced on his new life with a determination to make himself useful, and nobly had he succeeded. He had acquired a fortune and a sterling reputation among his fellow citizens, who looked up to him for his sound sense, wisdom, generosity and ability. If any enterprise requiring an energetic, prudent leader was started, he was instantly sought out. He was president of a bank, a judge in the county court, and has since been the recipient of high political honors.

Our quarters at the hotel were speedily vacated for rooms in his beautiful residence. We found his wife a lady of rare cultivation and refinement, and the treasure of a lovely baby boy, who had been christened by my euphonious name, but who was known in the household as Cherub Dick. We stayed with them a few days and a friendship was cemented which will last as long as life. And I am most heartily thankful for the impulse which prompted me to visit the corral, that tempestuous night when it pleased God to make me the instrument of saving a useful life.

Budget of Fun.

John writes to ask if old Boreas ever had any wives. Certainly; didn't you ever read about the Merry Wives of Windsor?

A man was boasting that he had an elevator in his house. "So he has," chimed in his wife, "and he keeps it in the cupboard in a bottle."

An Iowa clergyman boasts that he can marry twenty couples in an hour. Twenty knots an hour is pretty good speed for a clergyman to make.

"What's jography, Bill?" "It's telling of forrin lands that we know nothin' about by 'cute chaps that never seen 'em." Bill got a government situation.

The man who sang, "I'm lonely since my mother died," isn't quite so lonely now. The old man married again and his stepmother makes it lively enough for him.

An honest Hibernian, in recommending a cow, said she would give milk year after year without having calves. "Because," said he, "it runs in the breed; for she came of a cow that never had a calf."

"Here," said an eccentric old man to an office-boy who had brought a doctor's bill to him—"see here: tell your master that I'll pay him for the items of medicine charged in this bill, but as for the visits, why—I'll return them."

"You old vulture you," she exclaimed, when he hinted that five bonnets per annum were about enough for any ordinary women. Next day when he relented and told her to order the sixth, it would have made an angel smile to hear her sweetly call him "Birdie."

Two darkies were vaunting their courage. "I isn't 'feared o' nothin'," said one. "Den, Sam, I reckon you isn't 'feared to loan me a dollar?" "No, sah, but I does hate to part wid an ole fren' forebber."

The "Christian" names of ten girls in a Pennsylvania family are these: Emma Angelina Adlet, Lovinia Serena Cornelia, Alice Ellen Amanda, Torvella Susanna Corilla, Francina Telara Cencilia, Perina Sibylla Agnes, Christiana Edibulla Eliza, Annie Olivia Virginia, Ida Cora Jerine, and Mary Anna Alecia.

"Why don't you marry?" said Pope Alexander VII. one day to Alacci, the librarian of the Vatican. "So that, your Holiness if an opportunity offers, I may enter the priesthood?" "Well, then, why don't you become a priest?"

"I don't, your Holiness, in order that if an opportunity presents itself, I may marry well."

Have you seen My Son," asked a young lady of a young man the other evening at a social gathering. "Your son?" exclaimed the youth. "Why! I—I thought—you—you—y-o-u"—and he fainted. The usual restoratives were applied, and he was relieved when told that the lady had reference to the play of My Son at one of theatres.

Two men having agreed to a bet, to be won by whichever could tell the greatest lie—one of them declared that on a certain evening he threw a nail with so much force toward the moon, that it went through to its head. That's true, replied his opponent, for I was on the other side at the time, and clinched it with a claw hammer. The prize was adjudged to the latter—and since that time, every outrageous falsehood has been termed a clinch.

A good Scotch answer is generally worth remembering. A little company of Englishmen who went for a hunt to the Northern moors said to the guide, "John are there any pheasants here?" "They are just in thousands," he replied. "Any partridges, John?" "They are just in thousands," he again replied. "Well, John, are there any gorillas?" "No, there is not many gorillas here; they comes and goes in twos and threes—just like yourself." William Black adds "And it was a ferry good answer to the young man."

A little five-year old fellow came up to his mother the other morning, and with great earnestness said—"Mother I saw something run quickly across the kitchen floor this morning, and it hadn't any legs either; what do you suppose it was?" The mother's curiosity was excited at the strangeness of the supposed animal, and not knowing what else to say, said she guessed it was a snake or a worm, or something of that sort—she didn't know what. Having enjoyed his mother's inability to solve the problem for some time, he said, "It was some water."

New Hotel at Nantasket Beach.

Ground was broken last week for a new hotel on Nantasket Beach, which it is intended shall surpass in dimensions and display every other hotel on the shore. The new building is to be erected by Mr. Nehemiah Ripley, the well-known and popular proprietor of the Rockland House, and will be located directly upon the beach, on a line with the Rockland Cafe, and two hundred and twenty-five feet east of it. The new hotel will be three hundred feet long, one hundred and one feet wide, and will be, in its various parts, from one story to five stories high, with a fine basement under the whole structure for kitchen, storerooms, &c. On the westerly end, nearest to the Rockland Cafe, will be located the large dining room, one hundred and thirty-three feet in length. The entire building will be surrounded by wide piazzas, looking out on three sides directly upon the beach and ocean. Although it is to be somewhat irregular in its shape, the whole style of the new hotel will be unique, consistent and attractive, and with its two towers and its profuse ornamentation, it will prove a great addition to Nantasket Beach, and will be a landmark which can be seen at a great distance on the water.

The hotel will be kept on the European plan, and will be intended more particularly for transient guests by the day, though it will contain about seventy sleeping rooms; and the fact that it is to be conducted by Mr. Ripley, is a sufficient guarantee that it will be well kept and become at once a popular resort of the best class of patrons.

It is expected by Mr. Ripley that the building will be completed in season to be opened to the public on the coming fourth of July.

World's Fair in New York.

There is just now a prospect that the International Exhibition which it is proposed to hold in New York will take place in 1883, the centenary of our acknowledged independence and of the evacuation of New York by the British troops. The Committee of the United States Board of Trade, at a meeting held March 13, Nathan Appleton, Esq., presiding, voted in favor of this date, and also in favor of Riverside Park as the site. The proposed location is on the west side of New York city and extends up from 72d to 85th street, and from the Hudson river east to the Boulevard. The site covers about one hundred acres, a large portion of which is city property, while the rest is owned by opulent persons who would be willing to sell. The beautiful approaches from the city, the view of the Hudson and other advantages make the location a desirable one. In the matter of freight and transportation arrangements could easily be made to build piers extending over the Hudson River Railroad track to the river, where vessels could be unloaded and articles taken directly into the building. For passenger travel there are fair horse car facilities, and new cross-town lines would probably be organized to connect with all lateral routes. The Hudson River Railroad would pass through the Exhibition grounds, and new ferries from New Jersey would distribute a large portion of the southern travel, while boats on the Hudson could offer larger facilities. One of the great needs New York will have to meet in the event of the Exhibition taking place will be that of lodging for the crowd of visitors.

How Joe Lost His Bet.

An old fellow named Joe Poole, very eccentric and an incorrigible stutterm, was a constant loungee at a tavern in Waterford, Maine.

One day a traveler from a distant part of the State arrived at the tavern, and met an old acquaintance, a resident of the town. After some conversation on different topics the traveler was addressed as follows:

"By the way, Brown, look out for our old friend Joe Poole to-night. You will know him quick enough by his stutterm. He will be sure to come and offer to bet that you have not got a whole shirt to your back. If you take him up, you will be sure to lose by a trick he's got. He invariably offers to lay his wager, and always wins."

"Very well," said the traveler, "I will not let him go ahead of me. Much obliged for the caution."

The evening arrived and a large crowd collected in the bar room. Our friends were there, and old Joe was present in his element.

"I'll tell you what. You are nicely dressed, but I'll bet you ten to one you have not got a whole shirt to your back."

"I'll take the bet," said the stranger.

"Put the money in the Landlord's hands."

This being done the traveler pulled off his coat and was about following suit with his vest, when old Joe cried out:

"Ho-ho-ho! You've lost. Half your shirt is in front, and the other half on your back."

There was a roar of laughter, but the new comer did not mind it, but pulled off his vest, too, and quietly turning to Joe, displayed to his astonished gaze a shirt neatly folded and placed under his suspenders.

Of course the laugh was turned upon Poole, who acknowledged that he had lost the wager.

Easter Sunday.

As with the other prominent days, feasts, fasts and festivals of the Christian Church, Easter Sunday is a day arbitrarily assumed; and, as a movable feast, it may occur on any day between the 21st of March and the 25th of April depending upon the full of the moon after the 21st of March; and on Easter day depend all the movable feasts of the year.

The day is observed as the anniversary of the resurrection of Christ and the only controversy or difference of opinion that has ever occurred in relation to its observance has been as to the proper day; and this was determined and fixed by the zeal and efforts of the Emperor Constantine and the Council of Nice, A. D. 325. The controversy between the churches of Asia Minor and those of the West was of long continuance, as it seems that Polycarp, bishop of Smyrna, made an effort on his visit to Rome, with Anicetus, in the year 158, to adjust the matter between the Jewish and Roman churches. One party referred to the custom of St. Philip and St. John, and the other to the practice of St. Peter and St. Paul. Toward the end of the second century, Victor, the bishop of Rome, tried to compel the concession of the eastern church, but without success, and the question was finally settled 125 years later, as we have already stated. The Sunday following the full moon next after the 21st of March is now observed by all Christian churches eastern or western, Catholic or Protestant, as are the other feasts and festivals. —Boston Herald.

A Mean Advantage.

There was a score or more of women gathered together at Mr. Johnson's house. Mr. Johnson is a good-hearted man and a respectable citizen, though he is rather skeptical in some things. The women had just organized "The Foreign Benevolent Society," when Mr. Johnson entered the room. He was at once appealed to donate a few dollars as a foundation to work on, and then Mrs. Graham added:

"It would be so pleasant in after years for you to remember that you gave this society its first dollar and its first kind word."

He slowly opened his wallet, drew out a ten dollar bill, and as the ladies smirked their lips and clapped their hands, he asked:

"Is this society organized to aid the poor of foreign countries?"

"Yes—yes—yes!" they chorused.

"And it wants money?"

"Yes—yes."

"Well, now," said Johnson, as he folded the bill in a tempting shape, "there are twenty married women here. If there are fifteen of you who can make oath that you have combed your children's hair this morning, washed the dishes, blackened the cook stove and made the beds, I'll donate ten dollars."

"I have," answered two of the crowd, and the rest said:

"Why, now, Mr. Johnson?"

"If fifteen of you can make oath that your husbands are not wearing socks with holes in the heels, this money is yours," continued the wretch.

"Just hear him!" they exclaimed, each one looking at the other.

"If ten of you have boys without holes in the knees of their pants, this X goes to the society," said Johnson.

"Such a man!" they whispered.

"If there are five pairs of stockings in this room that do not need darning, I'll hand over the money," he went on.

"Mr. Johnson," said Mrs. Graham, with great dignity, "the rules of this society declare that no money shall be contributed except by members, and as you are not a member, I beg that you will withdraw, and let us proceed with the routine of business."

"It may seem a little late to express sympathy, but if Job ever had a ripe and blooming boar fair and square on his Adam's apple, he has our heartiest condolence."

"A thrifty father took his boy to a doctor. 'If you can cure him for less than the funeral expenses,' said he, 'go ahead; but if you can't, sonny'll have to take his chances.'"

"A retired milkman sent his son to travel, telling him to take notes and write home what he saw. He crossed a Spanish river dry shod, and wrote: 'It would be impossible to carry on the milk business in this part of the country.'"

"Lots of people passed a fat-looking pocket-book in a Watertown street on All-Fool's day, with a knowing chuckle, but an old countryman, who took the trouble of dismounting from his wagon, to pick it up, was rewarded by the sight of over $300 in good money."

"It is a profound problem in connection with boyhood, that it requires about four hours to learn a verse of Scripture by heart, and not more than four minutes to learn a verse of a comic song, sung by the end man at the minstrels."

"Chinamen wear five buttons only on their coats, that they may keep in sight something to remind them of the five principal moral virtues which Confucius recommended. These are jen, humanity; y, justice; ly, order; che, prudence; sin, rectitude."

Poetry.

For the Patriot. Right and Wrong.

Right is right and wrong is wrong. By whomsoever done; By the magnificent and strong, Or weak and lowly one. Might gives no right to do a wrong—Not to the mightiest of the strong—Does the impossible belong. The right to do another wrong. Shall we impute to the Most High An act that none could justify, And then in common sense dispute Say that the glaring wrong is right? All souls are mine, Jehovah said; The weakest soul that he has made, However transgressing and defiled, Belongs to God—it is His child. In His own image it was made, And still it bears its Father's seal; No hostile power can make it fade Or make His signet's stamp unreal. Will He cast His own away, Neglectful of a Father's care, Doom'd everlastingly to stay In agonizing, dread despair? Believe it not—it is a lie Framed to dishonor the Most High, And leads poor souls to scape the rod To feign a love through fear of God. For who could love a tyrant power, Who on their heads might ruin shower, Or doom the friends they loved so well To never-ending, burning hell? Weymouth, Mass.

Receipts, &c.

GRAHAM ROLLS. One cup milk, one-half cup yeast, one-half cup flour, a little salt. Make as stiff as possible with Graham flour. Mix at night; in the morning when risen, add one egg, one-half cup of Indian meal. Bake in gem pans, heating them before putting in the rolls.

PLAIN RICE PUDDING. Take a tea-cup of best rice, put it in a small pudding with three tablespoonfuls moist sugar; fill the dish with milk and water, equal proportions, and bake slowly; eat cold.

MARLBOROUGH PIE. One cup sifted stewed apples, one cup sugar, one cup milk, one-half cup butter, two well beaten eggs, nutmeg. No top crust.

A kerosene lamp is not a suitable light for the sick-room, for it should never be turned down low, on account of the disagreeable odor which results. A scientific man once said, "There is nothing in the world that will produce diphtheria sooner than a bad kerosene lamp." Be that as it may, if your kerosene lamp emits a disagreeable smell, it shows that something is wrong—the oil may be of an inferior quality, the burner may be poor, or it is clogged up, or the wick needs to be evenly trimmed.

A MISTAKE. An exchange tells of a young man who swore off smoking, and was worth ten thousand dollars in five years. There's some mistake here. We know a young man who has sworn off fifty times in five years, and isn't worth a cent.

Miscellany.

What Was She Good For.

A bleak winter evening, with the wind howling outside, and the drifts of fast-falling snow blinding the vision of all adventurous pedestrians; but within Cyrus Ward's home circle all was snug, brightness and warmth. It was a plain little room, nevertheless, where Mr. Ward sat at his table writing busily, with a pile of dictionaries, encyclopedias, and periodicals lying beside him for reference—a tall, refined-looking man, with gray hairs already beginning to gleam in the dark locks that overhung brow and temple. His wife was like himself—pale slender, and worn—and the three girls sitting round the fireplace completed the circle of family jewels; Bessie, Nellie, and Ida—three dimpled, rosy, soft-eyed girls, all of them with sweet voices like birds, and pink cheeks, and lips coral red and ripe—all of them seeming alike to the casual looker on, in a degree that was almost puzzling, and all of them displaying as possible, when you became acquainted enough to distinguish them.

Bessie—she was the tall one, with the tiny scar on her left temple, where she fell down stairs in the palm days of babyhood, and the mischievous sparkle in the hazel eyes—sat at her own special table coloring photographs, an amusement whereby she contrived to add numerous little comforts to the family housekeeping. Nell was ripping apart the breadths of a merino dress, which was to be dyed black and afterwards made up for mamma in the very newest style; and Ida was, according to her usual fashion, doing nothing.

For Ida Ward was the useless member of the family. Bess would not trust her with the photographs, because she was always sure to spill a blot of carmine on the nose of the "subject," instead of depositing it, in an orthodox manner, on the cheek. Nellie shrank from the assistance of one whose scissors were fatal in their clasp! Whatever she sewed had laboriously to be taken out—whatever she cooked was looked upon suspiciously, as somewhat akin to poison; and with all the intelligence in the world to render herself generally useful, Ida found herself ignominiously reduced to the condition of a domestic dog.

"I really don't know what Ida is good for," Mrs. Ward said, thoughtfully.

Mr. Ward looked up smilingly from his manuscripts, and said, encouragingly, in the midst of Nellie and Bessie's laughter, "I know what she is good for; she makes the nicest little pet in the world."

And he parted Ida's curly head as she nestled close to his chair, never dreaming, as he plunged once more into the vortex of the encyclopedias, how grateful the girl was for the kind word and look; for Ida was painfully sensitive on the subject of her own incapacity.

"I wish I could do something like you girls," said Ida, piteously. "Couldn't I teach as a governess, Bessie?"

"You teach?" said Bessie with good-humored scorn. "Why, you'd run away and begin to cry if a canary bird looked at you!"

"I might emigrate, perhaps, if one of you girls would go to Madame Chiffon's and get me a little work."

"And toil for six months for as many shillings!" laughed Nellie. "No, no, Ida; work isn't your forte!"

"Well, what is my forte?" demanded poor little Ida, with the courage born of desperation.

Nell shrugged her shoulders. Bessie only laughed; and Ida, receiving no human sympathy, took the cat on her lap, and with her wet eyes buried in pussy's white fur, whispered, "Oh, pussy! I miss you! I am very miserable!"

For it was a sad problem to overshadow the brightness of any young human life—"What am I good for? I can't even get married!" thought Ida, with a thrill of secret mortification; "for no gentleman ever looked at me twice! I could learn a blacksmith's trade; if I were a man, or a printer, or a silversmith's. Oh, why wasn't I a man?"

It was hard enough, under the most propitious circumstances, to "make both ends meet" in the Ward family; but when the quiet, hard-working Mr. Ward himself suddenly fell ill with congestion of the lungs, a panic came over them—a shudder of inexplicable dismay. For the literary toil where he was eking out the family resources must perform come to a stand-still when brain and hand alike refused to perform their duty.

The rent was coming due; the unpaid grocer's bill stared them in the face with its undeniable facts and figures; and poor Bessie's small photographs were at that stage of the inevitable battalions of want! Not a favorable state of things for poor Mr. Ward's contemplation, when the doctor—by the way, here was another impending bill for the future—tapped his own teeth with the gold head of his cane, and said ominously, after the manner of fat, middle-aged doctors, "He must keep his mind perfectly quiet; he must be annoyed in the slightest degree, or I'll not answer for the consequence!"

As if grim circumstance cared for the medical man's proclamation! "I wouldn't mind it so much," said Mr. Ward, tossing from side to side of his feathered pillows, "if it were not for that story I had promised to write for the 'Burlington Magazine.' It would have brought me in ten guineas."

"Ten guineas would be a very nice sum to have just now," sighed Mrs. Ward, very much in a tone one might expect in saying, "The philosopher's stone would be quite handy to have in the house."

"It isn't altogether that," said the invalid, with a little weary inspiration of breath, "but they are very particular people, and apt to take offence if one don't keep one's engagements to the letter. I'm afraid I never shall have any more work on the 'Burlington Magazine.'"

And this was the manner in which Mr. Ward "kept his mind perfectly quiet."

Ida had been standing by her father's bedside the while, with her red berry of a lower lip quivering, and a troubled dew in her eyes. And then she crept away up stairs, as noiselessly as her own pussy-cat, and held secret counsel with Bessie, who was painting photographs in a cold ante-room, lest the smell of the colors should annoy papa. As for two fires, that was altogether out of the question, in the present state of the family finances.

"Nonsense!" said Bessie, painting vigorously away; "nonsense!"

"But I think I could, Bessie," pleaded Ida, earnestly. "I'm almost sure I could. You don't know how much I've scribbled when I have been alone."

"Yes; but a regular story? And for a magazine? Why, they'd laugh at you, child."

"I am used to that," said Ida, meekly. "And I would so like to try, dear Bessie!"

"Well, try, then," said Bessie, with a little scornful laugh. "It can't do any harm, I suppose; but I tell you beforehand, you're only preparing a disappointment for yourself, Ida."

"And you won't tell any one—not even Nellie or mamma?"

"Of course not, if you don't wish it." Ida took her little battered portfolio under her arm, and went up stairs into the attic.

"I can only try," she thought, with her heart beating violently. "It doesn't seem so very hard to write a story, and if I should succeed!"

For three days she excluded herself up in the attic, at all the times and seasons she could snatch from attendance upon her father—writing eagerly for a while, then tearing up what she had written, in an agony of despair—sometimes full of hope, and then again marveling at her own wild presumption. But at last the task was completed.

Bessie met her, one evening, prowling through the twilight, more than ever like her own cat, as she returned from one of the numberless errands to the neighboring chemist.

"Where have you been, Ida?" she asked, a little sharply, as wise elder sisters will speak.

"I have just taken my story to the post-office," said Ida, in a whisper.

"Oh, Ida! why didn't you read it to me first?"

"I dared not, Bessie," faltered Ida. "I was so nervous, so frightened."

"What a goose it is!" laughed Bessie. "And how did you manage it?"

"I wrote a little note, saying it was Mr. Ward's story, and that I had copied it for him. Was that very wrong, Bessie? It was papa's story, for I had given it to him with all my heart, and I did copy it; so you see it was the truth, after all. And I asked them to please send the money or the manuscript back by post next week."

"You'll probably never hear of it again," said Bessie. "I don't say so to be ill-natured, mind, but because I really think so."

The editors of the 'Burlington Magazine' read over the story which had cost poor little Ida so many tears and tribulations, with approval.

"The best thing Ward ever wrote," said Mr. Penn, nodding his Jove-like head.

"A very graceful, feeling little story," said Mr. Syzzer. "It'll be noticed in all the reviews. Write and tell him we want half a dozen more, in the same general vein. He has been a little dry and prosy of late, but I always knew the man had something in him."

"How much?" said Mr. Penn, with his quill suspended in mid-air above the inkstand.

"Oh, twelve guineas, I suppose," said Syzzer, who was the financial manager. "He'll be raising his prices after a while, and we must economize where we can."

Little Ida fluttered homeward from the post-office, and the bank one morning, as if her shabby little shoes had been the swift wings of a feminine Mercury.

"Papa," she cried, bursting breathlessly into the fire-lit silence of the sick room, "papa, I've written your story for the 'Burlington Magazine,' and showering down the twelve shillings on the bed."

"Here's the money—they sent a check, which I got cashed—and they want some more in the same style—and—"

And Ida, failing in words for lack of breath, finished her sentence by an avalanche of kisses and tears. While Bessie, who had followed her excited little sister into the room, told the story all over again, and answered the questions that were raised from every quarter.

"Oh, isn't it nice?" cried Nell.

"Twelve guineas! and all Ida's own earning!"

"We can pay the grocer now, and have a nice little sum left, to buy wine for papa," said Mrs. Ward, gratefully.

And no household fairy, bringing gifts of good to a desolate fireside, was ever more popular than Ida Ward, that evening, in the home circle, where she had always been such a mere cipher.

"Have we a genius among us?" quoted Bessie, with a laugh. "My little photographs are entirely thrown in the shade."

"I can take my own time about getting well now," said Mr. Ward, stroking the bright head bowed down on his pillow, "since my little girl can fill my literary chair so well."

"I say, papa and mamma, and all of you," laughed Bessie, "we've made a discovery to-night; we've found out, at last, what Ida is good for."

Years afterwards the successful young authoress remembered the words, as she stood on the lawn of the lovely country house she herself had purchased, and looked back at the picturesque cottage where her father and mother were peacefully ending their days under her loving care. The buried talent had come to light; the hidden seed had germinated into blossom. The world had discovered what Ida Ward was good for.

The Primary Schools of Quincy. [The following interesting letter, giving a sketch of our public schools, written by a gentleman of this town, we copy from the Milford Journal—Eds.]

I desire in the first place to give as vivid an idea as possible of the method of conducting an exercise in one of these schools. A class is called into the room, and each scholar given a book. Books that are illustrated are always chosen. A picture is turned to, and the pupils are asked to tell what they can see in it. They are encouraged each to find something that others do not. After everything has been noted, the teacher writes, not prints, upon the blackboard all the words not already familiar to the class.

The pupils are then asked to make up sentences containing these words, so that the teachers may be assured that the pupils know the use of each word. Then the sentences descriptive of the picture found with it in the book, are read. Sometimes this exercise is varied by using a blackboard drawing as a basis, instead of a picture in a book.

Children are set to writing, among the first things. It is wonderful how soon they learn to write a legible hand. In each primary school is at least one large table, on which are many wooden blocks of many shapes and sizes. These are used in various ways. The children may use them as playthings. They are especially useful in teaching the elements of arithmetic, etc. The rooms are made as pleasant and attractive as possible, by means of pictures, decorations, and the like. For the primary schools, the best, most successful, most lovable and loving teachers are selected.

Singing and marching occupy considerable of the time each day, so as to relieve the children of that weariness so often found in the schoolroom. In one school I found what the teacher called a band. She found many of the boys were playing upon "clappers;" so procuring a triangle, she formed several of these boys into a line, herself at the head, and sang, accompanying herself upon the triangle while the boys beat time with the "clappers;" the rest of school meanwhile keeping step in marching. By this she was enabled to control and discipline some unruly spirits.

Several things are to be said about these ideas. In the first place, the method does not differ materially from that of all really successful teachers; but in most towns it is only tolerated. Each teacher must originate and carry forward the work without the assistance and support of public opinion, and furnish the needful apparatus. Here it has been elaborated into a system, and all apparatus is furnished by the town. Some will say that time is wasted in these marchings, etc. But it is true that young minds cannot be kept on the rack all the time. Beside that, all these things help to train either mind or body.

The fundamental idea of this system is that words are signs for things, and unless the thing is known, the word, its name or sign, is meaningless; hence, that it cannot be used nor remembered. This is strictly in accordance with the principle of human thought, and is the only correct principle in developing the mind.

As an important factor of instruction, the powers of apprehension are developed. Not only are the pupils taught to see all a picture contains, but to draw inferences from the things seen. If, for instance, the trees are bare of leaves, and snow and ice can be seen, the scholar is led to the inference that it is winter time. This leads him to look upon nature in the same way, and learn her lessons.

In Quincy, and under Col. Parker's theory, the primary schools are relatively more important than they are held elsewhere to be. In the first place, teachers fitted for them are selected with great care and kept there from year to year. In many towns new beginners are put in charge of the primary schools and promoted as they prove to be efficient. It is not so here. No teacher has more consideration or honor than the teachers of the primary departments. Some of those longest in service—in some cases for nearly a quarter of a century—are still teachers of the youngest scholars. The claim is made, and is a just one, that if a pupil be started rightly up he will go through the higher grades with more success and with less trouble to the teachers than otherwise. As a consequence of all this care and wisdom, school life is a delight and not drudgery as it used to be to little folks. Another result, which some will doubtless deem more practical, is this: the younger children of Quincy are several years in advance of those in other towns, in both reading and writing; and what is more their reading is not by rote, but from a knowledge of the real use and meaning of words.

Just how far this system of primary school instruction will modify the instruction in the upper grades, remains to be seen. The schools have been under the care of Col. Parker but four years, and the time has not been sufficient to test it. But any one who has any knowledge of these things, will see that the upper grades will be greatly benefited.

This system is being adopted in the cities and towns of the Commonwealth. Boston, Springfield, Canton, Milton, and many other both larger and smaller than Milford have adopted it. Quite a number have borrowed the system from Quincy. Some towns have hired Quincy teachers to be their superintendents; others have called away our teachers to take charge of prominent schools, and thus introduce the system. One thing is sure: for the present this is the system. Towns that are enterprising, will adopt it. The system is not a hobby with a mushroom life, like all hobbies. Col. Parker spent some time in Germany studying the kindergarten system in vogue there, and has used his genius to adapt it to our needs and peculiarities as a people.

Quincy, March 28th, 1879.

The Double Postal Card. A clause in the Post Office appropriation bill enacted by the last Congress, provides for the double postal card, also for a letter-sheet envelope, which is to be stamped as envelopes are now stamped and a double-letter envelope. The double postal card is in size similar to the present one-cent card. It bears at both upper corners a one-cent stamp, and lines are drawn from the center, sloping downwards to each lower corner, to be written upon. The writer of the card uses the right-hand side and the receiver uses the left-hand side for his reply. The double letter envelope is stamped twice, and the sender uses the right and the receiver the left-hand side in writing the address. At the back of this envelope is a double-gummed flap divided by a perforated line. The lower one is used for sealing by the sender, and the receiver uses his knife along the perforated line and has a new gummed flap ready for use. The letter-sheet envelope is designed to do away with outer envelopes. Its patentee claims great merit for it for the reason that it often occurs that the date at which a writing has been mailed cannot be ascertained because the envelope has been lost. Here the law does not direct the Postmaster General to issue these patented conveniences. It only allows him the discretion to do so. The Post Office Department had nothing to do with having this clause inserted in the bill.

Keeping Them Awake. A sense of duty often causes some ludicrous mistakes, as the following story will illustrate:

Near Dumfries, Scotland, lived a family who had adopted an orphan who was regarded as half-witted. He had imbibed strict views on religious matters, however, and once asked his adopted mother if she did not think it wrong for the people to come to church and fall asleep, paying no better regard to the service. She replied she did. Accordingly, before going to church the next Sunday he filled his pockets with apples.

One bald-headed old man, who invariably went to sleep during the sermon, particularly attracted his attention. Seeing him at last nodding and giving usual evidence of being in the "land of dreams," he struck the astonished sleeper a blow with an apple on the top of his bald pate. The minister and aroused congregation at once turned round and gazed indignantly at the boy, who exclaimed to the preacher, with a sober, honest expression, "You preach; I'll keep 'em awake."

A New York paper gives the following story in illustration of the absent-mindedness of the great Jonathan Edwards. When out riding one day a little boy respectfully bowed and opened the gate for him.

"Whose boy are you, my little man?" he asked.

"Noah Clark's boy, sir," was the answer.

On the return of Edwards the same boy appeared and opened the gate for him. He hailed the little fellow and again asked:

"Whose boy are you?"

"Noah Clark's boy, sir; the same man's boy I was quarter of an hour ago, sir."

UNITARIAN SOCIETY. At the adjourned parish meeting held at the Lyceum Room, on Monday evening last, the Rev. Daniel M. Wilson, of Boston, was invited by a nearly unanimous vote to be the pastor of the parish until March 1st, 1880, at a salary of two thousand dollars per year. Mr. Wilson's pulpit services have made a very favorable impression, and he has credentials of the highest character as to his piety and pastoral ability and efficiency. It is said he also has a call to the First Church in Bridgewater, which he will decline for the position here.

At the annual meeting held recently, Hon. Charles Marsh was chosen moderator, and the following gentlemen were elected officers for the ensuing year:—
Clerk.—Warren W. Adams.
Treasurer.—Chas. H. Porter.
Collector.—John Q. A. Field.
Parish Assessors.—Charles H. Porter, John Q. A. Field and Horace B. Spear.
The society voted to raise $3500 for parish purposes for the ensuing year.

CANTATA OF PILGRIM FATHERS.—This beautiful Cantata will be repeated on Monday evening next, at Reform Club Hall, and those who failed to secure seats to the first representation are referred to the notice in another column. The Cantata will be given with better effect than before, as much of the singing which was done at the rear of the stage will be brought forward to the main stage. Only 300 tickets will be sold, and as the hall will seat 350, all may be sure of a good seat. The members of the Musical Union are determined that in all respects the repetition shall exceed the first representation.

MAY FESTIVAL. There will be a pleasant time at the Town Hall on May day and evening. The doors will be opened at 2 o'clock. A table loaded with useful and fancy articles on sale will be one of the attractions. At 6 o'clock an antiquarian supper will be served. A lot of white slaves, whose pretty faces will be carefully concealed from the bidders, will be sold at auction. Mr. George Monk will furnish music for the occasion, and after the auction there will be social dancing.

A FINE ENTERTAINMENT. A large and appreciative audience assembled at the Town Hall, on Wednesday evening, to enjoy one of G. Swaine Buckley's entertainments, and no one went away disappointed. It was all that it was advertised to be, and kept the large gathering in a continual applause. Mr. Buckley alone can give an excellent entertainment, but when he adds such a talented troupe as the Weber Quartette, Master William H. Lee, the wonderful soprano, and Frank Gilder, the pianist, he has a host that is difficult to surpass. Their labors here were not in vain.

ENTERPRISING. Mr. F. J. Fuller, of West Quincy, has just put in operation at his new shed, near the depot in that part of the town, a ten-ton travelling crane. The hoisting as well as the travelling arrangements are decided improvements over the usual method. He is now cutting the stone for the Duncan manse, which is to be erected at Alleghany City, Pa. Found Guilty of Manslaughter.

Charles H. Hartwell was brought up for trial before Judge Pitman in the Superior Court for Norfolk County at Dedham, this week on a charge of manslaughter in causing the death of Patrick J. Reagan, Oct. 8th, 1878.

The case is too well known to our readers to need an extended notice.—The sad railroad accident at Wollaston, which aroused all of our citizens with a sense of horror is still vivid in our minds. The inquest of Hartwell, the conductor of the local freight train which caused the accident, before Judge Bumpus of the District Court in this place, last October, is still fresh in our memories. At that time he was bound over in $10,000 for his appearance before the Grand Jury in April. The jury found an indictment, and on Tuesday last his trial for manslaughter commenced before Judge Pitman.

The case involving, as it did the personal responsibility of railroad employees for the faithful performance of duty, was one of the most important and interesting in criminal jurisprudence that has occupied the attention of court or public in a long time. There was a large attendance of spectators in the court room, including a number of railroad officials.

The indictment was quite a lengthy document, and alleged that Charles H. Hartwell, at Quincy, in the County of Norfolk, with force and arms in and upon one Patrick J. Reagan, feloniously and wilfully an assault did make. He was charged with having violated the rules of the corporation in making a crossing from one track to another without putting out the necessary signals. It was further alleged that Hartwell knew that a train was lawfully traveling over said track, that it was then due at that point, and that he in a wanton, negligent and improper manner ran his train from one track to the other. The details of the disaster and the death of Reagan were then given at great length.

District Attorney French appeared for the Government, and Daniel S. Richardson, Esq., of Lowell, for the defendant. The case occupied the attention of the Court for over two days. On Thursday, about 12 o'clock the case was given to the jury. The following was the substance of Judge Pitman's charge:

He said he had some hesitation in instructing the jury in some points, as it was almost impossible for him not to consider the question of law involved in coming to a decision. They are of course obliged to accept the construction put upon the law by the Court, but that is not final, as the defendant has the right of appeal to the Supreme Court.

The charge of manslaughter brought against the defendant is one of great grade of criminality. The penalty may be a fine of one dollar or twenty years' imprisonment in the State Prison. Criminal negligence resulting in death constitutes manslaughter under the law. After explaining that the defendant cannot be found guilty on any allegation not contained in the indictment, the Court instructed the jury that it is not necessary for the Government to prove more than the material charges in the indictment. It is often alleged in an indictment for murder that the deed was committed at the instigation of the devil, but it is hardly necessary to prove this allegation.

The Court ruled in regard to the rules of the railroad that the defendant must be tried only upon the printed rules of the road, as he was governed by no others, and the Government do not endeavor to bring forward any verbal rule or understood custom. If, under the rules requiring employees to "use the greatest care and watchfulness, and in cases of doubt to take the course of safety," the jury be convinced that it was the defendant's duty to send out a signal, the question to be determined from the other rules was what that signal should be. The Court then read from Hartwell's testimony at the inquest as to what he thought his duty was in the premises.

The jury after being out ninety minutes brought in a verdict of guilty. Exceptions were taken.

Our readers will find interesting letters from New York, Washington and Georgia in to-day's supplement; besides a large amount of pleasing news items.

Have all our citizens seen the great apostolic clock at the Reform Club Hall. It is a great curiosity, that is well worth seeing.

An exchange says, "In the race for matrimony it isn't always the girl that covers the most laps that wins."

GENERAL COURT. The Legislature has nearly completed its labors for this year and it is expected that it will finish its work this week or the first of next.

The Old Colony Railroad are to erect granite mile posts along the line; they will be about eight feet long, one foot square and dressed at the top for figures.

The trouble that has been brewing for the past year or two in a large number of lodges of Good Templars in this state, has culminated in the withdrawal of nine lodges from the grand lodge.

GOOD TIME. Two young men from Boston, on bicycles, glided rapidly by this office, last Monday forenoon on their way to Brockton. They made the run from the city to the point of destination, a distance of twenty-three and one-half miles, in three hours and thirty minutes.

NO LICENSES. The Old Colony Memorial says, "The Selectmen of Plymouth have refused licenses to two of our druggists who have applied for leave to sell liquors for medicinal purposes, a distance of twenty-three and one-half miles, in three hours and thirty minutes. The vote at the annual meeting, requesting the Selectmen to grant no licenses, is evidently regarded by the Board as an expression of public sentiment which should guide them in this matter, and it appears now that after the first day of May, when the present licenses expire, not a drop of liquor can be obtained in this town for any purpose whatever, in a legitimate way."

Walking Match.

The great struggle for the ten-mile championship of this town occurred at the Town Hall, on Saturday evening last, and was very successful, financially. A very large audience was present to witness the struggle between the two contestants for the title. About 8 o'clock Mr. Wm. H. Garvin made his appearance on the track dressed in a handsome walking costume and was received with loud cheers from his many friends. He had not long to wait for his competitor, Mr. Denis Ford, who soon put in an appearance, looking as nimble as an eel and straight as an arrow, which called forth from his many friends and admirers rounds of applause.

Shortly after eight o'clock the word "go" was given, and both men started off at a rattling pace, which they kept up for the first mile, at the end of which Garvin was leading Ford a few feet.—On the next mile Ford made several attempts to pass Garvin, but found it impossible, owing to the narrowness of the track. Garvin then thought it was about time to walk away from his companion, but his efforts in this respect were fruitless, as Ford did not allow him to gain any advantage. In this manner both men walked, until they commenced the last half of the tenth mile, when Ford commenced to spurt, and also did Garvin, but the positions were not changed, and Garvin came in the winner with about one foot to spare. Time, 1 hour and 45 minutes and 28 seconds.

So joyous were his friends, that they took him on their shoulders and carried him to the platform where he entertained the audience with a "breakdown." Gilcher's German Band of Boston, furnished music during the walk. The affair was under the management of Messrs. A. G. Dolliver and John E. Conner, to whom all thanks are due.

Michael J. Curtis of Boston, and Judge for Dedham, F. A. Chapman for Garvin, and Robert Fair filled the office of referee.

The track was a poor one, but under the circumstances was laid out in the best way possible. No doubt both men will soon meet again, as Ford's friends are confident that he is the best man, while Garvin's friends say he is ready at any time.

Professional Courtesy.

The following timely hints upon this subject we find in the Dedham Transcript on Saturday last. Brother Cox no doubt has often seen these cowardly sneers in the Superior Court held at Dedham, as we have in the District Court, held in this place.

The offences against decency and good manners perpetrated by some lawyers in their examination of witnesses, would seem to justify some remarks on the progress of civilization as indicated by the tone of proceedings in our tribunals of justice, and we think the fact worth while recording that the District Attorney recently took occasion to rebuke the bulldozing demeanor of a defending counsel. It requires no talent, as another says, and certainly no courage to conduct an abusive and slanderous cross-examination, as when a lawyer bullies and intimidates a witness, he is protected by his professional privileges. He can give way to the meanest impulses of a bad heart without fear of personal consequences. A bully is generally a coward, and a lawyer who shielded by his professional privilege, plies an unrelenting witness with all sorts of insults and degrading insinuations, would shrink from such insolence in any place where he could be held personally responsible. This kind of torture is frequently resorted to upon witnesses who become disconcerted or lose their wits. Such attacks when they are wanton are uncalled for, and are every way cowardly and disgraceful as firing a pistol upon an unarmed person from behind a stone wall. Our only purpose in this article (for we mean to write another) is to show how contemptible is such action, and it is quite time that the cross-examination insolence should now and forever cease.

They tell of an old clock in Canaan, Ct., which had not run or been wound up for 20 years, that recently took to striking 11 exactly 7:10 o'clock every evening, and the removal of the works by the started owner has not silenced it.

No Available Assets.

Frank W. Hayden announces that he has finished his labors on the Independent, a small weekly sheet that was started in this place last November,—soon after the Free Press ceased its issues. We have refrained from publishing a word against this new sheet during its existence, although many amusing editorials have appeared. Now that Mr. H. has ceased his laborious undertakings, and whatever we may say will not injure the sheet or its editor, we cannot help laughing when we read "Our Bow," in the first number of the Independent, and then glance at the "Farewell" in the last number. That our readers may enjoy the comparison, we clip a few paragraphs. In the first number appeared the following:—

"Having canvassed the field in which we propose to operate, and becoming convinced of the feasibility of publishing a paper which will at once prove a drug investment to advertisers, subscribers and ourselves, we have established the Independent."

"We would say that our paper will be backed up by both money and experience. We have plenty of capital to publish our paper, and it will be issued every Wednesday. Even if we receive not one cent in return for what we expend, we shall continue the publication of our sheet for at least one year, before we give up."

"We do not wish to be understood as starting in opposition to other papers that may be established at present in Quincy, as we believe the field is wide enough for two publications."

"As soon as our patronage warrants, our paper will be enlarged, as we believe it better to begin small and enlarge our paper on its own merits, than to begin with a larger paper and be obliged to contract it to make it pay expenses. As we have above stated, we shall publish the Independent at least one year with no income whatever, before we shall become convinced that a second newspaper in Quincy will not pay."

After a short career of less than six months, we find in his "Farewell" the following:—

"With this issue our connection with the Independent ceases. At a great expense the paper has been placed on its present basis, and its publication will probably continue, though this is not certain. If I had the capital, or could procure it at a reasonable rate of interest, I should not allow it to go out of my hands. I shall endeavor to sell the office at a reasonable price, and if I fail to do so, I shall discontinue the publication."

The following circular was issued by Mr. Hayden, to his creditors last Saturday:—

"Dear Sir:—Owing to a force of circumstances over which I have had no control, I have been forced to suspend payment. The reason for such suspension is a lack of sufficient capital to properly conduct my business. The larger amount of indebtedness was incurred in starting the paper. At present the business almost pays expenses, and arrangements are now pending which will probably result in the continuation of the publication of the paper, in which case the liabilities given below will be greatly reduced. As is well known, to most my creditors, I have worked with borrowed capital almost from the start, consequently being unable to procure any further reduction from any quarter, this failure is inevitable."

"All business connected with adjusting my affairs will be attended to by J. B. Chaffin, Esq., Temple Block, Quincy, to whom you can respectively refer."

"By balancing the books, the following figures are obtained. Total Liabilities, $331.87. Secured, $250.00; unsecured, $81.87. No available assets."

For the Patriot.

Braintree.
Rev. S. S. Cummings, missionary agent from the Baldwin Place Home for little wanderers spoke in behalf of the Home to a large and attentive audience at the Methodist Church on Sunday afternoon. A choir of children from the Home were present and sang some very fine selections. The audience showed their interest in a truly good cause by giving the speaker a generous sum to aid in the work.

Rev. M. F. Colburn from Easton will preach his first sermon as pastor on Sunday next at the Methodist Church. Rev. E. M. Taylor after a three years' pastorate here is to take charge of the East Main Street Church, Norwich, Conn.

Rev. R. B. Moody, once of this place, but now of Milford, N. H., is to be the orator for Decoration Day.

Our town treasurer, Jonathan French has so far recovered from his late accident as to be able to ride out and will soon be as good as new.

The South Congregational Church now rejoice in a new pastor, Rev. Mr. Smith formerly of Barre, Mass. D.

The retrenchment at the State House will foot up about $200,000. Not so bad, considering the number of men whose interests made them opponents of the retrenchers.

ACCIDENT. A serious accident occurred on Saturday last, on the Kansas City branch of the Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroad. As a freight train, bound west, was running down a heavy grade, a trestle bridge was discovered to be on fire, and in spite of all efforts to check the train, it ran on the trestle, the engine passing nearly over, fourteen cars breaking through one after another and piling in an immense wreck in the creek below.

All the cars were soon in flames, and with their contents were consumed.—The engineer stood at his post until the last, only saving himself by jumping as the engine turned over. The fireman jumped before reaching the trestle. Conductor Murray had his leg broken, and two men who were sleeping in a car with household goods, were buried in the wreck; one, a Mr. Bailey, badly injured, was rescued; the other was burned in the ruins.

DEATH BY DROWNING. Medical Examiner Tower, after a thorough examination, has come to the conclusion that Michael Ahearn, whose body was found on the 18th inst., on the bank of the Monaquot river, at East Braintree, came to his death by drowning. Deceased was 41 years old, and lived with George Bennett, a brother-in-law, at North Weymouth. On Thursday evening he was intoxicated, and probably while in that condition wandered down to the river and met his death. An examination of his trunk showed his bank books all right, but $50 in cash, which he was known to have had, could not be found.

The Old Colony Railroad Company has placed in its depot for exhibition a beautiful new car, constructed at its shops, which has one peculiar merit. It can be perfectly ventilated by the windows, which swing outwards and can be regulated by any person in the seat.—The passenger can sit by the open window without exposure to a draft, and is perfectly protected from smoke, cinders and dust. The car, which will seat seventy-four persons, should be seen to be appreciated. Four others will soon be built, and the whole of them placed on the steamboat train.

THE NEGRO EXODUS. Some Southern Congressmen are of opinion that cotton speculators are endeavoring to advance the price of cotton, on the assumption that the colored exodus will naturally tend to enhance its value.—Other Southern Congressmen insist, however, that if the exodus does not extend beyond its present proportions it will have no effect upon the production of cotton, except possibly in a very narrow limit of country.

HEAVY DEBT. The debt of the town of Wiscasset, Maine, now amounts to 50 per cent. of the valuation. In round numbers it is $262,300. $160,300 of which is on account of the Knox and Lincoln Railroad. The last valuation placed the taxable property at $573,000, and since then shipping property, a good deal of which is owned in town, has greatly depreciated. The rate of taxation last year was $44 on $1000.

Recently in one of the Lowell Baptist churches, the Bell telephone apparatus was placed in the pulpit Sunday, and the services were heard distinctly by people having connection with it in all parts of the city. The singing, both tune and words, was heard at Foxborough, fifty-five miles distant, and via Foxborough, in Boston, eighty miles away.

There will be a third more bulbs and plants on the Boston Public Garden and square this year than last. About 80,000 tulip and crocus bulbs were put in the ground on the Public Garden last fall, and 75,000 bedding plants have been grown by the city to ornament the garden in the summer and fall.

PRAYING BANDS. Quite an excitement was created at Portsmouth, N. H., last Saturday evening by a praying band consisting of Rev. Mr. Pittblado's wife and five recent converts of Elder Waite, visiting the liquor saloons, followed by a large, heterogeneous crowd.

A Japan woman has followed the example of the famous Smith sisters of Glastonbury, Conn., and has entered her emphatic protest against taxation without representation. The sex are alive to their rights even in Japan.

The proposition has been made in the Illinois legislature to have sessions of that body only once in six years for general legislation, but to hold sessions once in two years for levying taxes and passing appropriation bills.

The experiment of lighting the reading room of the British Museum by electricity, seems to be perfectly successful. The smallest print was as legible as by daylight. The room is a vast circular apartment.

Some of the Adventists have determined that July 11th, of the present year, will be the date of the general ascension day of the righteous.

The Florida cedar is used by all of the principal pencil makers in the world, on account of its fine grain, softness and strength combined.

An eccentric property-holder of Westfield, Mass., says that he shall embody a provision in his will giving $1 to every man, woman and child who will attend his funeral after his demise. All the small boys are anxious for a funeral.

Budget of Fun.

What is to be? A verb.

The lash that one doesn't object to having laid on his shoulders—the eyelash of a pretty girl.

Lady:—Are you sure she's not at home? Bridget:—Indade an' she ain't. If yez don't believe me, ye can ax her—she's up stair, so she is.

Is that your off-spring, madam? said a Missouri judge to an elderly female. "No sir," said she, "it's my oldest boy."

Daughter, has George proposed to you yet? "Yes, ma, he proposes that we go out this evening and get some ice cream."

The provisions in the ark did not give out. They had as much Ham at the end of the voyage as when they started.

"Doctor," said a gentleman to his pastor, "how can I best train up my boy in the way he should go?" "By going that way yourself," blandly replied the pastor.

First swell:—"Look here, Fred, you shouldn't wear so many big diamonds. It's awfully bad form." Second swell:—"Bless your soul dear boy, they ain't real."

"What are you trying to read?" asked a visitor of an old gentleman who was nodding over the evening journal. "Oh," replied his wife, "That's his snooze paper."

"My dear," said a husband, in startling tones, after waking his wife in the night, "I have swallowed a dose of strychnine!" "Well then, do for goodness sake be still, or it may come up."

"We all know," said a cockney school committeeman to a new teacher he was examining for her position, "that A B and C is wowsels; but what he wants to know is vy they is so."

"My dear," said a husband to his wife, on observing new red-striped stockings on his only heir, "why have you made barber's poles of our child's legs?" "Because he is a little shaver," was the neat reply.

Is there any danger of the boa constrictor biting me? asked a lady visitor at the Zoological gardens. "Not the least, marm," replied the showman. "He never bites; he swallows his wittles whole."

A facetious boy asked one of his playmates why a hardware dealer was like a bootmaker. The latter somewhat puzzled gave it up. "Why," said the former, "because the one sold the nails, and the other nailed the soles."

A bright little boy, hearing his father say that a man "ought to stick to his business," emptied a bottle of muckilage in the old gentleman's office-chair. The old man says he has not been stuck so badly since 1837, and rewarded him by taking him on a whaling trip to the back cellar.

A little five-year-old studying her lesson last Sunday morning got along nicely until she came to the "heart questions." "Does mother ever tell you to do things you had rather not?" when she exclaimed, "Mamma, those are horrid questions; I hope every one will come to somebody else in the class."

An old lady in Lockport carried a quart of popcorn to a donation party, and after eating two dozen fried oysters, a pound of crackers, three slices of fruit cake, half a mince pie, and some apples, was threatened with "spasms," and in the effort to prevent it, sacrificed all the wine in the house. She attends donations regularly.

She was trimming the lamps, and just as a wick dropped down out of reach, her mother heard her exclaim, "Oh, the Dickens!" "There, there! my child, why will you indulge in such expressions?" Then she fingered for the lost wick, and exclaimed,—"Why ma, isn't that a natural suggestion of Pickwick?"

A physician in a country town, who had been annoyed by numerous questions concerning the condition of a patient, was stopped, while on his busy rounds, by a man with the old question. "How's M—?" "Ill," replied the physician. "Does he keep his bed?" "Of course he does. You don't suppose he's fool enough to sell his bed, when he's so ill, do you?"

A Yankee who had never paid more than twenty-five cents to see an exhibition, went to a New York theatre one night to see the "Forty Thieves." The ticket-seller charged him seventy-five cents for a ticket. Passing the pasteboard back, he quietly remarked, "Keep it, Mister, I don't want to see the other thirty-nine," and out he marched.

Where it is going to stop no one knows. Before "Grandfather's Clock" is fairly run down, a musical publisher advertises "Grandmother's Chair," and no doubt these will be followed by "Grandmother's Spectacles," "Grandmother's Sun-bonnet," "Grandfather's Boot-jack," "Grandmother's Candle-stick," and all the other rubbish that once belonged to the old folks and was not disposed of at public sale thirty years ago.

Poetry.

I'll Try.

You will? Well, that's a good resolve.
Now keep it, little man;
In everything you undertake,
Just do the best you can.
One never knows what he can do
Until he sets to work;
If you should try and sometimes fail,
'Tis better than to shrink.

All honor to the earnest boy
Who tries to do his best;
A heart of principle may beat Beneath a time-worn vest.
Not always does the outward man
Reveal the hidden worth
That goes to make up character,
And forms the brave of earth.

The world has need of heroes
Who will struggle for the truth,
And you, my boy, may find a place—
There's a room for age and youth.
Yes, always room for those who try
To speed the glorious day.
When evil, overcome by good,
Shall yield to right the way.

"I'll try," has conquered many a time,
And conquer yet it will;
Though hard the task and slow the work,
The brave will struggle still.
For God, whose word is ever sure,
Directs the power of right,
And those who look to Him for aid Shall conquer through his might.

Receipts, &c.

GINGER SNAPS. Two tablespoonsful boiling water, three of hot shortening,
one heaping of ginger, one teaspoon saleratus;
put all in a cup and fill up with molasses; repeat this as often as desired to make sufficient quantity; when all mixed, put in an extra spoonful of shortening and one-half cup brown sugar;
mix rather stiffly with flour; bake quickly.

JELLY-CAKE FRITTERS. Cut a stale sponge or very plain cake into rounds with a cake-cutter. Fry to a nice brown in sweet lard. Dip each round in boiling milk, to soften it and get rid of the grease. Lay upon a hot dish and spread with sweet jelly or jam. Pie neatly one upon another, send around hot, sweetened cream to pour over them.

TO WASH BLANKETS. One pint soft soap, two heaping tablespoonsful borax, beat up thin with cold water; soak the blankets over night in cold water enough to cover them, with the mixture well stirred in. Rinse in the morning in four or five waters, all cold. Hang up without wringing. They will look like new.

A GREAT THING. A loving heart and a pleasant countenance are commodities which a man should never fail to take home with him. They will best season his food and soften his pillow.
It were a great thing for a man that his wife and children could truly say of him,
"He never brought a frown or unhappiness across his threshold."

An old darkey caught a two-pound sucker one day and was so well satisfied with his work that he lay down for a nap with the fish beside him on the grass. Another darkey came along presently, picked up the sucker and left a first-pound one in its place. When the first man and brother woke up, the first thing his eyes sought was the fish, and it took him some seconds to realize that something had happened. Then turning his prize over and examining it all round, he simply said, "Golly, how dat fish am shwunked!"

We have often been told that there was a future in store for us, but we never found the store where it was kept. It must be one of those establishments that do not advertise.

Oh! gentle spring—
"Though lost to sight, to memory dear."
"Can love die?" inquires Mary
E. Nearly, in a recently-published poem.
It cannot, though it gets dreadfully adjourned occasionally.

Write your name by kindness, love and mercy, on the hearts of the people you come in contact with, and you will never be forgotten.

Most of the shadows that cross our path through life are caused by standing in our own light.

"Speaking of razors," said the obsequious barber, as he tendered change for a quarter, "I believe Adam and Eve were the first raisers, were they not?"

"How greedily you are!" said one little girl to another, who had just taken the largest apple in the dish; "I was going to take that."

Small pieces of sponge soaked in creosote will keep away black ants.

A farmer residing near Utica, N.
Y., while being run away with by a pair of frightened horses, shouted: "I leave my wife $10,000; no time to make a will." He is still living.

In a letter to a friend, a Springfield young lady states that she is not engaged, but she sees a cloud above the horizon about as large as a man's hand.

A ladies' school and a sugar-nouse are kindred institutions, inasmuch as both refine what is already sweet.

A music dealer who had marked down his stock, to ensure rapid sales, displayed the following announcement:
"Thou hast loved me and left me—for twenty-five cents."

Miscellany.

MR. BELLAIR'S WIDOW.

"You know," said the widow in a voice, smothered with sobs, "the misfortune"—here she applied a delicate cambric handkerchief to her eyes—"the loss"—she could get no further.
Her visitor bowed, with an air of respectful condolence.

"I wish," continued the widow—"I wish to erect a monument to the memory of my poor husband. I have chosen you to execute the order." She had become somewhat calmer.

The sculptor bowed again.
"I wish this monument to be superb —worthy of the dear companion whom I have lost; proportioned to my—" She was getting hysterical. Her visitor handed her a bottle of salts that stood convenient on the little worktable.

The widow resumed. "Spare no expense, I would willingly consecrate my whole fortune to honor his memory."
A pause, which the sculptor hesitated to break.

"I should like," said the widow again, coming to the point, "a temple with marble columns, and in the middle, upon a pedestal, his statue. Here she swallowed a salt."

"I shall do my best to fulfil your wishes, ma'am," replied the man of art.
"I had not, however, the honor of personally knowing the late Mr. Bellair, and his likeness is indispensable to the completion of the design. Doubtless you have a portrait of him."

The widow raised her rounded arm, and pointed to a magnificent portrait, by one of our first artists.

"An admirable painting!" said the visitor. "I need not ask you if the resemblance be striking."
"It is himself! Life is all that is needed. Ah! if I could have given him for his likeness!" The handkerchief was again in requisition.

"I will send for the portrait, ma'am, and I guarantee that the likeness shall be exact."

"Send for the portrait!" cried the widow, with a stifled shriek; "take from me my only consolation, my only happiness! Never!"

"But, ma'am, it will only be for a little while!"
"A little while! An age! How would I live without this dear image? It quits me neither day nor night; I contemplate it without ceasing, through my tears. It will never be removed out of this room, where I shall pass the remainder of a miserable existence!"

The widow had worked herself up to such a pitch of feeling, that the sculptor rose to ring the bell for assistance. But she laid a white hand upon his coat-sleeve, and he sat down again.

"Then you will allow me, ma'am, to come here to take a copy of it. Be not alarmed; I shall not long invade your solitude. A single sitting will suffice."

The widow agreed to this arrangement, and requested the sculptor to commence the next day. But he had a previous order to execute. She would have levelled the difficulty with gold; but he stood firm.

"My word is pledged," he said; "do not, however, be troubled about the delay. I will work so diligently that the monument shall be finished within the time that another artist would have requested for consideration."

"You have been a witness of my sorrow," were the widow's parting words;
"you may imagine my impatience to see the work completed. Make your best haste; spare no expense, and let me have a masterpiece."

He had afterwards several letters, respecting these injunctions.
At the end of three months the sculptor returned. He found the widow still in the deepest mourning, but her cheek was less pale, and there was a slight tinge of cheeriness in the arrangement of her weeds.

"Now, ma'am," said the visitor, "I am at your disposal."

"Ah! well, I am glad to hear it," replied the widow, with a gracious smile.
"I have sketched the statue, and shall only need one sitting to transfer the resemblance. Permit me to enter your boudoir."

"And wherefore?" inquired the widow, with an air of surprise.
"To see the portrait."

"Oh! will you walk into the drawing-room? It is there that you will find it now."

"Indeed!"
"Yes; there is a much better light than in the boudoir, where you first saw it."

"Would you like to look at the sketch of the monument, ma'am?"
"Willingly! How grand! What exquisite ornaments! Why, it is a palace, this tomb!" exclaimed the widow.

"You told me, ma'am, that it could not be too magnificent. I have spared no expense; and here is an estimate of what the monument will cost you."

"Dear me!" cried the widow, after having glanced at the sum total. "It is enormous!"
"You begged me to spare nothing—"
"Certainly! I wish to do the thing handsomely. Still we ought to be rational."
"Well, this is only the first sketch;
there is yet time to alter your intentions."

press the temple, the columns—all the architecture, in short—and content ourselves with the statue? I was too ambitious; it will be sufficient."
"You shall be obeyed."

"It is decided then. Nothing but the statue!"
A short time after this second visit, the sculptor fell dangerously ill. He was brought to the new settlers, which he followed the recommendation of his physician, and made a tour on the Continent, he presented himself anew before the widow, who was now in the tenth month of her bereavement. This time, there were some roses among the cypress; the weeds were disappearing. The sculptor brought with him a little plaster model of his statue, which promised to be a masterpiece.

"What do you think of the resemblance?" he said to the widow.
She gazed upon it for a moment, and then carelessly replied:

"Is it not a little flattered?" My poor husband was tolerably good-looking; but you make him actually handsome!"

"Indeed! Well, I will rectify my work by the portrait."

"It is scarcely worth your while," observed the widow. "A little more, or a little less resemblance, what does it signify?"

"Pardon me, ma'am, but I plume myself upon my exactness."
"If you really wish to take the trouble—"

"The portrait is in the drawing-room, is it not? I will go there."

"It is not there now," replied the widow, ringing the bell. "Robert," continued she, addressing the servant who answered her summons, "bring down the portrait of your late master."

"The one that was taken up into the garret last week, ma'am?"
"Yes, the same."

Just then the door opened, and an elgant young gentleman presented himself with a jaunty air, kissed the lady's hand, and inquired after her health, with the most gallant solicitude.

"What is this little plaster man?"
asked he, pointing to the statuette, which the artist had placed upon the chimney-piece.

"It is the model of the statue for the tomb of my late husband."

"You intend to erect a statue to his memory? Upon my word, that is very magnificent!"

"You think so?"
"Great men are sculptured in marble, and in marble, too, it appears to me,
—pardon my frankness—that the late
Mr. Bellair was a very ordinary man.
In fact, his bust would suffice."

"As you please, ma'am," said the sculptor, turning to the lady.

"Then we will decide on the bust,"
said she bowing him out.

Two months later the bust arrived, just as a gay procession descended the hall-steps, and got into the carriages that waited their approach. The widow was on her way to the altar, with the elgant dandy who had caused the suppression of her husband's statue, there to take upon herself a second vow of conjugal fidelity.

Scandal adds, that the bust itself would willingly have been returned; and the newly-married couple considered the sculptor's demand enormous; and that it was only with considerable difficulty, and after a threat of further proceedings, that he was at length reimbursed for the time and trouble spent upon the "widow's whim."

Taking Out the Temper.

A certain resident of a Western town, who, although of Quaker extraction, was not only unpossessed of the peculiar thrill of that sober people, but was given to an over free indulgence in the ardent, his habits had the effect of sharpening his wife's already sharp temper.

As a consequence there were frequent quarrels, which attracted no more attention than quarrels usually do. On one occasion, however, the wife was heard to make such an outcry that the neighbors thought investigation necessary, and the domestic of the couple was entered accordingly, the old man being found holding his wife in unbecomingly proximity to the fire. On being asked why he was acting in that manner he replied,

"The old woman is getting too sharp, and I want to take the temper out of her a little."

Diphtheria.

Diphtheria, says the London Engineer held by the best authorities to be an old disease. It is said that the Empress Josephine died of it, and it is not improbable that what some years ago in country districts, more especially in Ireland, was called putrid fever, was nothing but diphtheria. Diphtheria first attracted notice when a few years since it broke out at Boulogne and ravaged the north of France and south of England.

A lady on Cumberland street, Portland, Me., has a canary bird that will faint away and fall over as gracefully as any lady. The bird is a very fine singer, but (like some of the fair sex) when the least bit frightened, will stop singing and fall from its perch in a faint of the most approved sort. It remains in an apparently unconscious condition for some ten or fifteen minutes, then rouses up and commences to warble
as though nothing had occurred.

Letter from the West.

SIOUX VALLEY HOUSE,

Flandreau, D. T., March 29th, 1879.

Dear Friends:—Having had the privilege of spending a week at the hotel in this place, perhaps it may be interesting to some of the people, away "down east," to hear a little about this western city. It is situated on the Sioux river, which at this point is narrow, but very winding and swift, and is bordered by elm trees, which may have been growing for half a century. The land is nearly all taken up; the civilized Indians having secured many of the best locations.

They cultivate their grounds and sell their produce to the new settlers, which are coming in very fast this spring.
Three thousand people settled in Moody county last year. The land is very undulating and is beautifully situated for homes. Many enterprising go-ahead people who prefer making new homes in the far west should come here.

About eight thousand acres of rich arable soil was broken last year, which had lain dormant ever since the creation, as far as we know, and will be cultivated to wheat this year. Four hundred square miles can be seen from this place;
the atmosphere is very clear, and with the exception of the bordering of trees on the river, there is not a tree, shrub nor bush to obstruct the view. The land is in the finest state for cultivation, and emigrants are coming in by hundreds all through Dakota. One hundred and thirty-five people took dinner at this house one day last week. People who go to our beach houses and live for health and happiness through the summer months, where style and ceremony can easily be dispensed with, can imagine something of the freedom of this western people. They are courteous, friendly and unostentatious; all working and striving for independent homes, which stretch out in every direction on this vast open space. Invitations to come out and settle here are extended to all.
The small sum of fourteen dollars will provide a farm. This only covers the expenses of taking out government papers of title; after spending five years on 160 acres, it is yours. How many young men could make themselves independent homes, if they would club together and form themselves into small colonies and come here. If the year's crop proves successful, every farmer will have enough and a surplus which can be sold at a good price; for bread is the staff of life, and it will always command a fair price.

Many of the claim shanties are made of sods, ploughed up from the ground and plastered inside and out, which make them habitable. Hay is the principal fuel, since wood has to be hauled from forty miles; but the great iron horse of civilization is about stepping in upon us, and tracks from different points in Minnesota are already begun to open a quicker way to penetrate into this vast garden. The ties and rails are steadily gathered for in Chicago, and the chief engineers were here last week surveying; we hardly know the exact course the two roads will take, but whatever way they come, new land will be approachable.

These pioneers have made the demand and the railroad will soon connect us with the east. By that time all kinds of workmen will be required here. Carpenters, masons, manufacturers, all will have

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, MAY 3, 1879.

Modern Science.

Rev. E. A. Perry invited the attention of his audience last Sabbath evening, to a very interesting discourse upon Modern Science and God; taking his text from Job, eleventh chapter and seventh verse:—

If two men climb a mountain on different sides neither will see all; both will make mistakes; they will differ in many things. They will not agree as they stand side by side on the mountain top, yet will they come nearer to an agreement. So of Science and Religion. We must expect there will be differences of opinion between them. They start from different points and pursue different lines of investigation. Each sees in part, each doubtless makes mistakes. In fact there can be no complete agreement until ultimate truth is found.

In its conclusions, science has been far more changeable than Religion, and naturally so, for it was far more wrong at first. Metaphysics, or science of mind, theology, or science of God, and ethics, or science of morals, have been subjects for human study for many ages, but natural science has only within the last century attracted much attention. I, for one, am glad that the study of natural science is coming to the front. Will Faith and Religion thereby be destroyed?

What is the present position of natural science? What are its claims, and what has it really proven? We speak of the modern theory of the universe as Darwinism. This is a misnomer. Darwin is not the author of the theory, for it is more than two thousand years old. By his investigations he placed it on a more scientific basis. He does not declare that the theory fits the facts in every particular, but that it best accords with them. Younger scientists have gone much further than he, hence his name should not be given to the theory as now held.

According to this theory at the beginning, space was occupied with vaporized matter. This cooling, contracted and developed motion. This motion under well known laws was rotary. As a result, space was dotted over with vast aggregations of matter, more or less dense and rapidly whirling. From time to time these threw off smaller aggregations, which flying far into space, threw off smaller masses. Thus has our planetary system come into existence. After the earth became sufficiently cool, life was developed by some "formative concourse of atoms," and from this the life of to-day has been developed. There are found in the molecular spaces masses of vaporized matter, as is proven by the spectroscope. Some of these seem to be in motion. But the fact that Jupiter's moons have a motion, relative to one another, is a fact to explain.

We see a regular gradation in animals. Is it because our Creator has seen fit to order all made after one pattern with variations to the needs of each? Or is it that the higher were developed from the lower and modified from generation to generation by circumstance? The latter is the modern theory. Two creatures are built of equal powers. One is placed in circumstances that demand the constant use of a certain power. The other has no demand to use the power. In one this power will be enlarged and passed to his descendants; in the other, it will be lessened and absorbed in the descendants. This agrees with well known facts. The arm of the smith, the eye of the sailor are strengthened by exercise. The fact is, it is claimed that this will account for wide differences in form and function. This is known as the influence of environment.

It is well known that we would be coming, size, strength, brilliancy of color, &c., of any species may be increased. The same thing is carried forward by nature. The largest and strongest males will have most descendants; hence the race will be developed in these regards. Among animals there is a fierce struggle for existence, and the struggle frequently on the possession of slight differences. A grackle with a beak an inch or two longer, or a lion with stronger right will be likely to survive a season of short food and better able to compete with the same power.

Again color has much to do with the safety of those animals that serve as food for others. If a mouse is the color of his surroundings he will escape observation while his comrades not so favored will be captured. Thus a certain race of animals may become all of a certain protective color.

These things have something to do with the various forms, colors, powers, &c., of the inhabitants of the earth. But will these things explain all differences?

We are told that life began in simplest forms, but it is a fact that the oldest fossil yet discovered is of the highest type. Prof. Tyndal's very elaborate experiments go to show that life is not now spontaneously developed. The scientist is met then by a series of obstacles. If we grant that the material universe was developed according to his theory, he cannot tell how life came, much less how mind and soul came. To explain these is the scientific problem of the hour. The charge is frequently made by scientists against religious people that they assume much and pile theory upon theory. The charge can readily be retorted for much of the claims of science is based upon hypotheses, and theory is built on theory in a most startling way, as for instance the propping up of the undulatory theory of light by theory of luminiferous ether.

We may grant all that modern scientists claim and then ask who created this vaporized matter and placed it under the guidance of law? We find here, if no where else, the need of a creating mind. Many prominent scientists are believers in a Creator. It is the "little" scientist who knows so much more that do not. The tendency of modern science is towards practical atheism, for it puts God afar off. The time of His activities was hundreds of millions of years ago. He is little or nothing to us now. But in spite of this I believe that the deduction of science and human faith will adjust themselves each to the other.

Weights and Measures.

All families are not supplied with scales and weights, and therefore the measures given below will be found convenient:

About sixty drops of any thin liquid will fill a common sized teaspoon.

Four tablespoonfuls, or half a gill, will fill a common sized wine-glass.

Four wine-glasses will fill a half pint measure, a common tumbler, or a large coffee-cup.

Ten eggs usually weigh one pound before they are broken. Eight large ones will weigh one pound.

A tablespoonful of salt will weigh about an ounce.

One pint of water or milk will weigh one pound.

One pint of molasses will weigh one and one-quarter pounds.

Three tablespoonfuls of baking powder should weigh one ounce.

One quart of flour weighs one pound.

One quart of Indian-meal weighs one and a quarter pounds.

An Englishman travelling in Galway saw a pig in a peasant's house, and said:

"Why do you have the pig in here?"

"Shure," says he of Galway, "the house has all the conveniences that a reasonable pig requires."

WAGES.

A table of wages and the cost of living with the price of staple articles of commerce, going back as far as the year 1200, has been published lately. It shows that wages during the thirteenth century were about 50 cents a week. In the next century they advanced some 15 cents, and continued to advance slowly until, in the last century, they had reached $1.87. The average for farm labor in the same countries at present is $3.80 per week. Wheat in the thirteenth century averaged 71 cents, or eight and a half day's labor, a bushel. Now wheat is worth, wholesale, in Europe, about $1.46 a bushel, or two and a half days' labor. In six centuries meat has nearly trebled in price; but wages have increased more than sevenfold.—Exchange.

Cow Bells.

A clerk who had a mind for logic, applied it to a farmer with advantage, thus: Farmer.—"Got any cow-bells?" Clerk.—"Yes; step this way." Farmer.—"Those are too small; haven't you got any larger?" Clerk.—"No, sir; the large ones are all sold."

Rusticus started off and got as far as the door, when the clerk called him back. "Look here stranger; take one of these small bells for your cow, and you won't have half the trouble in finding her; for when you hear her bell, you will know that she can't be far off." The logic was irresistible, and the farmer bought the bell.

"My Own Personal Security."

Old John Walsh was a banker and also a money-lender. He was accounted a greedy, close-fisted old chap, yet he possessed a grim, rigid humor, which in some cases was really funny. One day, a dashing, reckless young man of the period called upon him.

"Mr. Walsh," said he, "I want to borrow five hundred."

"For how long?"

"Six months."

"What security can you give me?"

The young fellow drew himself proudly up.

"My own personal security, sir," said he, with a flourish.

Old John turned and opened a door, from which he called out:

"Get in here, sir," said he.

The young blade looked first at the door and then at Walsh.

"What for," asked he.

"Because, here is where I always keep my personal securities."

BANGED HEAD. The present excellent English Queen is extremely sensible in her domestic notions. She cannot endure the modern idiotic habit of women and children wearing a low fringe of hair around their foreheads. An English exchange says that her Majesty sent special instructions to the bridegroom at the late wedding of her son, the Duke of Connaught, that they would not be permitted to wear their hair, or high heels to their boots, nor to tie their dresses back in the present most uncomfortable and indecorous fashion. Victoria governs the fashions of every intelligent mother in the land. The same paper says, "Last year one lady appeared at a Drawing Room with her hair over her eyes. The next day she received a message from Lord Chamberlain informing her that until her hair had grown she would not be required to attend any more Drawing Rooms."

CROWD OF A SPREE. In Wilton, Conn., a few days ago the family of Dr. Turner threw away a lot of wild cherry pits which had been working in brandy since last fall. One day a large flock of crows came along and made a hearty meal of the pits, and the consequence was that nearly every crow became so drunk as a fiddler. Some would stagger around the field and finally be down apparently insensible, while others would fly up in the air and then, losing all control of their wing would fall to the ground. About fifty of the birds were killed or captured and the people had a great deal of fun out of the affair.

"Blind poverty may compel, but it can never reconcile a beggar to wearing a yellow patch on a pair of black pants."

"Always pay as you go," said an old man to his nephew. "But, uncle, suppose I haven't anything to pay with?" "Then don't go."

"It makes a body feel prettier, upon turning a pleasantly inside out to get at the clean side. So find that the laundry has already discharged that pretentious duty."

The Quincy Patriot.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, MAY 3, 1879.

Stone Planing Machine.

A machine for planing granite and other hard stones has been brought out that promises to prove of value in reducing the cost of preparing building stones. It consists of an oblong frame of iron, supported at the corners, and carrying a movable platen, somewhat after the manner of iron-planing machines. On this is placed a strong head-piece or tool-holder, and by means of a system of long pulleys and corresponding belts, power may be brought to the tool whatever its position during the work. The block of granite to be planed is placed on a hand-truck and rolled under the machine and raised by means of jackscrews to the proper level for the work. The revolution of the cutting tool, planes down the stone at about the pace of the iron planers, and performs the work in a manner fully equal to hand labor. The tool is fed to the work by hand, one man being sufficient for all the work.—Scribner for April.

Rev. Dr. Richard Salter Storrs was born in Braintree, Mass., August 21st, 1821. He graduated at Amherst College, 1839, at Andover Theological Seminary, 1845, and was first ordained as pastor of the Harvard Congregational Church in Brookline, Mass. In 1846 he became pastor of the Church of the Pilgrims, in Brooklyn, which represents more wealth than any other church in that city. He preaches without notes, and his manner is dignified and stately. In the pulpit he wears the clerical black surplice, and he has introduced the responsive reading of the Psalms into the service.—Brookline Chronicle.

A child in North Berwick, Me., has a kitten which has been instructed in table manners. When called by name she runs quickly to the side of her mistress and demurely waits while a tiny bib, made expressly for her, is tied around her neck. A two-ounce vial filled with milk is then laid on the floor beside her, and taking it between her paws, she raises herself on her hind feet, puts the bottle to her mouth, and remaining in that position drinks the milk; then, laying the bottle gently down, she patiently waits for her mouth to be wiped, and for the bib to be removed, after which she usually indulges in a nap.

There are deserted towns in Nevada, but they are not old ones. A few years ago the population of Hamilton is said to have been nearly 8000; of Treasure Hill, 6000; of Shermantown, 7000; of Swansea, 3000. All were incorporated, with Mayor, Council, fire departments and daily newspapers. Hamilton has now about 100 inhabitants, most of whom are merely waiting in dreary inaction for something to turn up. Treasure Hill has about half as many, Shermantown one family, and Swansea none. In one canon of the Tolyabe range, near Austin, are five dead towns without a single inhabitant. The streets and blocks graded on the hillsides are rapidly falling back into the wilderness.

A scheme is on foot to collect all the articles of value which the bed of the Tiber is supposed to contain. The golden candle-stick taken from the Temple at Jerusalem, and the gold and silver cups and ornaments which once decorated the palaces of Roman emperors, are imagined to lie beneath the Tiber's yellow mud. By means of drags it is thought all this buried wealth may be recovered and restored, to form a national museum of extraordinary value. A committee of archaeologists has been appointed to consider the best means of fishing up the legendary statues, coins and other articles.

Queen Victoria's palace at Windsor contains $9,000,000 worth of royal plate. The collection includes a gold service for 140 persons, ordered by George IV; a shield formed of snuff-boxes, worth $45,000; 30 dozen plates worth $50,000; an Indian peacock of precious stones, valued at $150,000, and Tippoo's foot-stool, a tiger's head with a solid ingot of gold for his tongue.

David Bailey, who died at Cambridge, Me., recently, at the age of 80 years, was probably one of the oldest postmasters in the United States. He was appointed by Adams in 1828 and held the place continuously until his death, over half a century.

Dogs ! Dogs !

OWNERS of Dogs in this town are hereby reminded that said dogs must be registered in the Clerk's Office during the present month. Dogs which were numbered and registered in 1878, can retain the same numbers the present year, if their owners make application therefor before the first of May next. The fee in all cases to be paid in advance.

GEORGE L. GILL, Town Clerk.
Quincy, April 19, 1879.

Extract from the Statutes of 1867.

CHAPTER 130.
SECT. 1. Every owner or keeper of a dog, shall annually, on or before the thirtieth day of April, cause it to be registered, numbered, described and licensed for one year from the first day of the ensuing May, in the office of the clerk in the city or town wherein said dog is kept, and shall cause it to wear around its neck a collar, distinctly marked with its owner's name and its registered number, and shall pay for such license for a male dog two dollars, and for a female dog five dollars.

SECT. 5. Any person keeping a dog contrary to the provision of this act shall forfeit fifteen dollars, to be recovered by complaint or indictment; and of said fine or forfeiture five dollars shall be paid to the complainant, and ten dollars shall be paid to the treasurer of the county in which the dog is kept, except that in the County of Suffolk, the ten dollars shall be paid to the treasurer of the city or town wherein said dog is kept. A license from the Clerk of any city or town shall be valid in any part of the Commonwealth and may be transferred with the dog licensed.—Provided said license be recorded by the Clerk of the city or town where such dog is kept.

Quincy, Sept. 22.

It is but a few years since the idea of bridging the Mississippi and Missouri rivers was held to be both impracticable and undesirable, and as contemplating an infringement on the rights of navigation. There have been built since 1865 no less than eleven bridges across the father of waters between Winona and St. Louis. Ten are on piers and one is a pontoon bridge. The longest are at Winona and Quincy, 3840 feet each.

It has lately come to light that parties employed by the authorities of Plymouth have been using some of the old grave-stones on Burial Hill as covers for drains. The fact came to the notice of a resident lately, who looking into the matter a little further found a stone thus used that on the lettered side bore an inscription to the memory of his own mother.

A codfish has been caught in Ipswich bay weighing ninety-nine pounds. Anywhere else but in Massachusetts they would have said that fish weighed one hundred pounds, but a Massachusetts fisherman won't lie for a pound of codfish. They know the value of line better.

Mr. James Kent of Byfield, who recently celebrated his diamond wedding is now engaged with four generations of his descendants in chopping wood. The youngest of his assistants is a boy who represents the fifth generation and has two great-grandmothers living.

We learn from one of our exchanges, that the friends of Mr. E. E. Williamson have tendered to him their warmest congratulations upon the occasion of his recent marriage to Mrs. Sarah J. Tanner of North Abington.

There are about one hundred and twenty Chinamen in Boston, engaged mostly in the laundry business. While San Francisco is mobbing her Orientals in the streets, Boston, true to her traditions, has begun to teach hers.

IMMENSE PEACH CROP PREDICTED. Everything so far indicates that the peach crop on the Maryland and Delaware peninsula, will be unprecedented this year, both as to quality and quantity.

It is computed that more money was paid into insurance offices in Boston last year, than in either the entire States of Michigan, Kansas, Iowa, Minnesota or Wisconsin.

The late Duke of Newcastle is said to have had his life insured in various offices to the amount of $2,500,000, probably the largest sum ever written on the life of one person.

Summary of News.

A lady in Templeton recently dissected a pin-cushion which she had used about twenty-five years, and among other things found 555 needles in it.

The English language is spoken by 87,000,000 of people, the Spanish by about 4,000,000, the German by 53,000,000, and the French by 43,000,000.

The consumption of beer in the whole German empire last year was 841,058,798 gallons, or nearly twenty gallons per mouth of population.

A hen twenty-five year old is a Western curiosity. Never used tobacco in any form.

A velvet mill in Patterson, N. J., has recently completed a piece of tartan-finish silk velvet, which is said to be the finest ever made in America.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE. The May Scribner opens with a frontispiece portrait of Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes. It is thought to be, in some respects, the most excellent portrait of the series. An entertaining biographical sketch of Dr. Holmes, by F. H. Underwood, Esq., is also given.

The opening paper is by Sofia Bompiani, on the "New Museum in Rome," which has become the centre of the enthusiastic interest of "New Italy," and which has not before had a hearing in the magazines.

An unhackneyed account of the varied and peculiar phases of New York wharf life is given in "A Day on the Docks," by Charles H. Farnham, a new writer, with noteworthy illustrations by Vanderhoof and Muhman.

A paper on "The Pastoral Bees," by John Burroughs, contains much original observation conveyed in that writer's delightful style. It is illustrated.

Among the summer announcements of Scribner's Monthly are, a new serial of four to six numbers by Henry James, Jr., and a number of authoritative papers on the inventions of Mr. Edison, including a full account of his Electro-Motograph and its applications; a paper on his Electric Light, another on his unapplied inventions (composed of material entirely new to the public), etc., etc. The first of these will appear in the June number.

St. NICHOLAS FOR MAY has a May-song in it, and a coronation, of course, but no May Queen. It is a sort of story number, and has nearly forty pictures.

A stirring account is given of how "The Big Bear of Wamnetola" was hunted and slain—the closing struggle being shown in a striking picture by W. L. Sheppard.

Harriet Prescott Spofford's story of "The Boy Astronomer" concludes by carrying him to the observatory and telling what he there did and saw. Kate Gannett Wells, in "She Couldn't," a narrative of girl-life, warns all whom it may concern to find out what they cannot do, as well as what they can do.

Mary Mapes Dodge, the editor, contributes a poem for May Day; and Mrs. E. T. Corbett, in some comical verses entitled, "The Three Wise Couples," winds up the adventures of the Three Wise Women and the Three Wise Men, their absurd doings being shown in two full-page pictures by L. Hopkins.

Hurrah! for the time that is coming! Ooh, won't the people be blooming! With flowers and sunshine then! Election day this I am thinking! Will be the great day of the year, With lassies an' lads will be drinking! Together the candidate cheer.

An' thin when we make in convention, The ladies of course will be there, An' may be somebody will mention Me Biddy to sit in the chair; With four or five dollars a day, His merril' 'twould vote to elect her An' put in me pocket the pay.

What's the use to wrangle with Biddy About who's the living shall be? An' sure, if 'twill please her I'm ridly To give up the lod for her sake; An' be stayin' all day at the shanty, To find to domestic affairs, A bottle the half an' pettings, An' mendin' the rips an' the tairs.

Thin when election approaches, An' the lassies are marchin' the strait With big hands of music an' torches, An' Biddy a shanlin' the trait, I'll be on the sidewalk a hurrahin' For me own darlin' Biddy McFlinn, With a child in me arms, an' drawin' A cab with another one in.

An' when she is makin' her spaches Before the great min of the land, Sure thin I will find her me braches, An' sit by her side on the stand. An' after she's done with her talkin' Ooh, thin how the people will cheer, An' strain to the polls we'll be walkin' An' be votin' for Biddy Mc dear.

An' when all the votin' is over, An' Biddy's elected, sure thin I'll live like a pig in the clover, With honorable Misses McFlinn. The shanty I'll quickly be leavin' An' living with elegant taste, With a horse an' shay for me drivin' An' a nager to wait on the baste.

It's niver a lie I'm speakin' But thus every word that I say, It's merril', 'twould never be takin' The rights of the ladies away. If a lassie thinkin' it proper, To shoulder the mortar an' brick, Bad luck to the thief that would shop her, I'd black his two eyes purty quick.

The way is for all to kape aye, An' give to the ladies their way— They'll step up an' vote like a daisy, No matter what blackguards may say. An' then, should they office be sakin', Or twirlin' the pick or the spade, An' for us the livin' be makin', Who cairn, so the livin' is made.

New York Fashions.

COSTUMES.

No woman need be very tired or very busy, for we find ready-made garments at such reasonable figures that persons of the most moderate means can afford to purchase. Linen suits are, of course, a thing of the past, but in their place, for general wear, we find neat wash costumes made half-tight jacket, overskirt and underskirt, marked as low as six or seven dollars. The patterns are in great variety,—checks, plaids, stripes, polka dots, and small floral figures. Colors are equally diversified; both grave and gay, and ground works, dark as well as light. Soft, thin wool costumes commence at about $14. Ulsters in thin, mixed wool are excellent for hard usage, consequent upon summer traveling, etc., and these commence at $6, a very nice one costing $10. Mohair ulsters begin at $4.50; linen ulsters at $3. Nevertheless there are many ladies who wish to make their dresses at home or have them made, so I will add a word or two in regard to new and desirable designs. The Deoria princess dress may be mentioned among these as quite elegant and having the advantage of being adapted both to silk, wool and wash material. Trimmed skirts are very fashionable, and here we find the Florimel train, especially suited to handsome fabrics. The Nidula-basquine or Valerie basquine would give a distinguished finish. The Birena is an excellent model for an overskirt of wash material, while in the way of a half-tight jacket, the Serena can be recommended.

OUT-DOOR GARMENTS.

There is quite a rage for beige and the pale yellow shades—especially the former. The fancy crops out everywhere in millinery costumes, and in out-door garments, for there is a run on beige colored cloth saques and mantlets commencing at about six dollars and going up to twenty. They are worn with costumes of any kind. These ideas however do not preclude the sale of black silk and cashmere garments more or less richly trimmed with French or black Breton lace, fringe and jet. Leading stores are enormous prices for these latter styles, but they can be made to order at comparatively moderate figures.

BEWARE OF WIGS.

Should an innocent-minded individual (a country merchant for example) visit our city, let him not fall a victim to the charms of some fair lady who, apparently, is endowed beyond her sisters, with an abundant mass of Titian hair. I feel it my duty to state plainly that that unsophisticated looking creature wears a cork starch; add this to the boiling milk and let it cool until it thickens like soft custard; flavor with vanilla; use more chocolate, eggs and sugar, if you want the custard richer.

FRITTERS. One pint of sour milk, one egg, a little salt, half a teaspoonful of soda, and flour enough to make a thin batter.

PASTE FOR ONE PIE. Two large handfuls of flour—or half a pint, two tablespoonfuls of lard, half a tablespoonful of butter; rub in the lard; roll in the butter; a little salt; cold water.

A lady who was urging some friends to dinner, felt disgusted when her eight-year-old son came in and said, "Mrs Jones says she can't spare no bread, and Mrs Fox can't to home, so I didn't get any butter." The friends thought they had better dine elsewhere, and the lady thought so, too, but she taught that boy that the way of the transgressor was hard.

"There is nothing impossible," exclaimed a man who was discoursing on Edison's achievement. "That man, to find out how egregiously he is mistaken, has only to attempt to cut his own hair."

"Man can do many things, but there is one thing he can't do—he can't button on a new collar just after cutting his thumb nails, without looking up in the air."

"There is one good thing about babies," says a late traveler; "they never change. We have girls of the period, of the world, but the baby is the same self-possessed, fearless, laughing, voracious little heathen in all ages and in all countries."

A free lunch lunch walked up to a hotel clerk yesterday, and offered to bet five to one and half of the gate money that he could eat 999 square meals in 300 consecutive days, the hotel to furnish the meals. The clerk reserved his decision and remanded the fend to the sidewalk.

A justice of the peace in Cincinnati had become so imbued with the routine of his office, that in concluding a marriage ceremony the other evening, he had substituted for the usual formula, "You will now stand committed until fine and costs are paid."

An old negro, returning one night from a dancing frolic, when crossing the river, lost both his eyes, and came near being swamped. Determined to do what he had never done before, he dropped on his knees, and exclaimed, "Oh, Massa Lord, if eber give to help old Ira, now is de time!"

Evolution.

For the Patriot.

In the remarks I have now to offer upon this subject, I beg to premise that if I had any advice for the reader, it would be, that he should do his own thinking upon all subjects, untrammelled by any bias, in theology, or in science. Why not? By science we mean a knowledge of nature's order and laws; and by theology, simply a theory of the unknown. Whereas, religion correctly understood, is neither dependent upon science nor theology, as it is that sense of obligation that binds and rebands, to excel in goodness, justice and truthfulness, in the fulfillment of the social relations of humanity.

When it is affirmed, therefore, that "Science has been far more changeable than religion," it is because the social relations, which are the living source, and the permanent foundation, of virtue, never change, while theology has been far more kaleidoscopic than science; and both have been only what the developments of the human mind have made them. At first, in the earlier ages, both science and theology depended wholly upon "faith" in theories; and to this day, the latter has nothing else to depend upon, while, but a few years ago, science took a "new departure," and abandoned theory for experiment; and at the present time, the whole scientific world are unanimously agreed that nothing can be admitted into the sum total of valid knowledge, that has not been demonstrated by actual experiment.

Bear in mind, that it is not science, but it is theology, that is responsible for the fanaticism and the horrible murder that was perpetrated in Pocatelli, only Wednesday night of last week, by Chas. F. Freeman and his wife; nor by them alone, for what but fanaticism and utter infatuation was that spell-bound some twenty of his brethren, victimized by the same "faith," in a theory of the unknown, to the horrible murder he had perpetrated and still conceal it from the legal authorities?

Science is demonstration, mathematical and certain, and it has done for theology what theology never could do for itself. It has proved by actual experiment the true idea of self-induction, which implies self-control, and that the law of self-induction is supreme in each mind. It has proved that this law of self-induction is the greatest power, purely human, of which the mind of man can have any knowledge, inducing as it often does, instant death, when suddenly excited by faith, fear, love, hope or joy. Is not the would always self-induced; and precisely so is sleep, laughter, weeping, the trance and revival phenomena, self-induced.

Who could not attempt to show from theology, that the "faith" and the infatuation that have so recently shocked the people of Pocatelli, were not self-induced? Yes, self-induced, and by a law which is in the order of things. Is not the central sun self-inducting? And in our planet we find all the elementary forces for the evolution of all its phenomena. Are not all of its living organisms self-controlling? Hence in the human body and the mind, we have all the instincts and susceptibilities for the evolution of all the nervous and mental phenomena that occur in each person; and we say they are self-induced, whatever the remote or suggestive cause may be. Ideas may be set to work in the mind by any one of unnumbered suggestive causes, by associations, relations and as in mental epidemics, by sympathetic imitation.

We are constantly seeing cases reported where persons have been instantly killed by a sudden shock of fear, or faith, or joy. Yes, killed "by faith," like the prisoner upon whom the doctors obtained the liberty of experimenting. They made him, falsely, to think he was bleeding to death, and he suddenly died by this law of self-induction, when not one drop of his blood had been shed.

I have seen and assisted in hundreds of cases of surgical operations, performed without any consciousness of pain, on patients in a state of self-induced trance—for somnambulism and mesmerism are always self-induced. It may be suggested in a thousand ways, but it is never produced by the mere volition of another, as taught by Mesmer.

What science has proved by experiment is, that faith in a myth equally excites this supreme law of self-induction in each mind; an important fact, which to this day, theology has never found out. Albeit, this discovery was made forty years ago, by one, who for twenty years had been recognized as one of the electrical profession.

It has been said (PATRIOT Supplement, May 3d), that—"We may grant that all modern scientists claim and then ask that which created this vaporized matter and placed it under the guidance of law?"

Nothing but forms are ever created. And for these, one persistent, self-contrasting, progressive force, is sufficient to account. When it is first proved, that matter was ever created, it will be in time for science to answer this query as to who "created" it. Again, the same criticism of the Darwinian theory says that—"If we grant that the material universe was developed according to the theory of evolution, we cannot tell how life came, much less how mind and soul came. To explain these is the scientific problem of the hour."

But it seems not to have occurred to the friend who makes this objection to the theory of evolution, how damaging it is to his logic, when he admits this theory, in part, for the sake of his argument. For if true, in one fact, true in one drop of water, and it is true in the whole of things! As the solar system results from evolution, so does all the phenomena of this world result from this supreme order in the whole of things! Life—vegetable, animal, nervous and mental, all from evolution—Human life itself, from first to last, is a succession of evolutions. The human brains could not, at first, be distinguished from the brains of a fish; but, from one degree evolved into another, like the brains of a reptile, then a bird, next a dog, and then an infant and childhood; and, during a period of years, finally reaching maturity and manhood. And, as this doctrine is true, it is well for those whom this critic calls "little scientists," to believe it. Albeit, I do not, myself, perceive by what sense of courtesy such men as Joel, Spencer, Tyndal, Faraday, Gove, Goumans, and a host of others I could name, could or should, be called "little."

Both in the vegetable and the animal kingdoms when the living organism is once matured, it thus acquires the power of reproduction. And, while I can admit that vegetable seeds may retain their vitality in the ground, for a series of years, yet I affirm what I know when I say, that in my own garden I have dug up weeds that have been evolved from the condition of the soil, as they could not have grown from any seed. And I have often noticed certain weeds that start in the spring, and have the summer to mature in, grow from three to four feet high. But, when they do not happen to germinate till October, and there is not sufficient time for their normal development, I have found them "gone to seed," when not one inch above the ground. And it is well known that cutting off the roots of a tree will increase its reproductive power in the evolution of fruit.

And so of insect life. The same sunbeam that unfolds the tender fruit-buds thaws into vigor the frozen current and creaks worms to devour them. And the same "conditions" that are "favorable" for the evolution of the potato, evolve the potato-bug, to feed upon it. And all forms of theology are at fault, when asked to trace the potato-bug back a few years.

This theory of evolution is no longer problematical. The leading scientific men and women of all nations, over the globe, admit it to be only a woman coming to the arch. And the great unanimity with which the foremost, thoughtful and scholarly men have everywhere received the truthfulness of Darwin's theory, is encouraging to hope, for the human race.

A Trip to Tehuantepec.

ACAPULCO, MEXICO, APR. 15, '79.

Tehuantepec, the oldest, and at one time the most important city of Old Mexico, is situated about fifteen miles to the northward of the port of Salina Cruz, through which its exports and imports pass; (the former consist chiefly of cotton and coffee. It has a population about sixteen thousand,—ten thousand of whom are pure Indians, the remainder being Spaniards, or of mixed blood. The road which connects the port and city is the best I have seen in Mexico, which, however, is not saying very much in its praise.

At 3 o'clock on Monday morning, three companions and myself, having obtained forty-eight hours leave, landed on the beach at Salina Cruz. By 4 o'clock we had secured three of the best Mustangs the place afforded, and with the full determination to see whatever was worth seeing in Tehuantepec, off we started. I believe it is generally conceded that the best representation of unalloyed happiness, is a school boy out for a holiday, but in my opinion he does not begin to compare with the "shell-back," who after being cooped up on board a ship for three or four months at a stretch, finds himself on the beach with a well lined money bag and forty-eight hours liberty ahead of him, and I am sure that to find a merrier or jollier party than ours, would be no easy matter.

A three hours' easy trot brought us in sight of the city, and not at all sorry were we to get there, for the effects of the, to us, rather unusual mode of locomotion, were beginning to make themselves felt; besides which, the scenery through which our road led us, was far too monotonous to be interesting; there was scarce a vestige of cultivation to be seen approaching the city from the port, nothing but low, barren, dried up shrub and cactus thickets, but this only made the scene which greeted our vision, after we had crossed the side of the hill upon which the town is built, the more welcome and refreshing.

Before us lay a beautiful valley about two miles in width, down the centre of which ran a broad, shallow stream, in whose cool waters many hundreds of natives are to be seen disporting themselves at almost any hour of the day. As far up the valley as the eye could distinguish, stretched grove after grove of coconut palms, orange, lemon, sappedilla, mango, tamarind and numerous other tropical fruit trees; diversified with here and there a corn, melon or cane patch and wonderfully brightened and enlivened by thousands of flowering shrubs and trees, and myriads of brilliantly plumaged birds, to say nothing of the bright colored costumes of the natives themselves. In truth this valley seemed to us a perfect paradise.

I have seldom met a more civilly disposed people than those of this part of the country. No one did we meet who failed to doff his sombrero, give us Buenos dias sonoras, and offer his water bottle or mezel flask for our use.

Our arrival created a perfect furor of excitement, and it appeared to us as though the entire population had turned out en masse to greet us. I'm sure a visit from Barnum himself could have created a greater fuss. Wherever we went the cry "Los Marineros, Los Marineros," brought everyone to their doors and it was with no little difficulty we declined the invitations which were freely showered upon us, and at last made our way to the hotel. After seeing our horses cared for, and ordering dinner, we went in search of the baths; they are well worthy of a description.

They are built of stone in the centre of a garden filled with beautiful flowers and fruit trees. They are perfectly open having no shelter over them but that of the palm trees, in the midst of a grove of trees they are built. After our long, hot, dusty ride, the pleasure we derived from them is too great to be described.—Whilst bathing the attendants cut us as much fruit as we could have eaten in a week, and the charges were only one real, (121-2 cents) each for the baths, and one medio (61-4 cents) for all the fruit that was cut.

After dinner we took a stroll through the town; it is crammed full of ancient churches, barracks and public buildings, now in ruins; in many of the churches are to be seen some fine old Spanish pictures. The women dress in a style entirely different from those I have seen in other parts of the country. In place of a dress they wear wrapped around the waist, a large square of soft, bright blue home-made cloth, called a sarros; above this is worn a scarlet cotton jacket; which, however, is so short that it does not meet the lower garment by six or eight inches; to cap all in lieu of the colored handkerchief, or turban, worn by the women of the seaport towns, they wear a whole mountain of stiff lace frills, rising in ridges to a height of six or eight inches above the forehead, and hanging in festoons down the back below the waist. It is the most comical looking head gear imaginable; a back view gives one the impression of a Sister of Mercy, and from the front, one would suppose all the women to be widows, wearing immense great widow's caps.

There seems to be little or nothing in the style or quality of the dress worn here, to distinguish the rich from the poor; for all seem to dress alike, and supremely picturesque their costume is.

For symmetry, both of form and feature, these Indian women almost equal the finest race I ever saw. The men are not to be compared with them. They are straight as young spars; lithe as whale bone and as beautifully proportionate as it is possible to imagine anything.—Their color varies almost as little as their dress,—all being of a peculiarly bright copper color.

In accordance with Indian custom the women do all the work, while the men do all the loafing and brutalizing. Should you be walking through the streets, you see ahead of you what appears to be at least a small cart load of corn-tops approaching but upon closer inspection it turns out to be only a woman coming to the place with a load of fodder on her head; but such a load as I for my part would rather be excused from lifting.—And yet they walk under it with a step as light and springy as though their burden was scarce felt at all.

The children, especially the girls, are the most handsome I ever set eyes on,—their eyes and teeth are simply splendid. They were at first very much inclined to be afraid of us and skeddaddled like so many hares at our approach, but finding that we did not bite and were inclined to be friendly they soon forgot their shyness and gave us considerably more of their attentions than we bargained for. We could not leave a house without being besieged by them. At first they were content with following us round the town at a safe distance, but soon they began to touch us and examine our uniforms, and finally finding we did not resent their approach they took entire possession of us. They pinched us, pulled us, dragged us, and rather to our surprise we found every thing in first rate style; that is to say, first rate for such an out of way place as this; and I must say I never knew a more obliging hostess than the one who entertained us at Tehuantepec. She procured all the stuff we wanted to take back to the ship, getting it at about half the price we ourselves would have had to pay; and her charges for board and accommodation were very moderate indeed.

On Tuesday afternoon we started back to Salina Cruz, but we found that the provisions, &c., with which we had loaded ourselves so incommode us, that we CHOCOLATE CUSTARD. Put one quart of milk into a tin pail and set it into a kettle of boiling water; then beat together one cup of sugar and three eggs; add to this a heaping tablespoonful of Baker's chocolate, shaved fine, and a spoonful of corn starch; add this to the boiling milk and let it cool until it thickens like soft custard; flavor with vanilla; use more chocolate, eggs and sugar, if you want the custard richer.

FRITTERS. One pint of sour milk, one egg, a little salt, half a teaspoonful of soda, and flour enough to make a thin batter.

PASTE FOR ONE PIE. Two large handfuls of flour—or half a pint, two tablespoonfuls of lard, half a tablespoonful of butter; rub in the lard; roll in the butter; a little salt; cold water.

A justice of the peace in Cincinnati had become so imbued with the routine of his office, that in concluding a marriage ceremony the other evening, he had substituted for the usual formula, "You will now stand committed until fine and costs are paid."

An old negro, returning one night from a dancing frolic, when crossing the river, lost both his eyes, and came near being swamped. Determined to do what he had never done before, he dropped on his knees, and exclaimed, "Oh, Massa Lord, if eber give to help old Ira, now is de time!"

Should an innocent-minded individual (a country merchant for example) visit our city, let him not fall a victim to the charms of some fair lady who, apparently, is endowed beyond her sisters, with an abundant mass of Titian hair. I feel it my duty to state plainly that that unsophisticated looking creature wears a cork starch; add this to the boiling milk and let it cool until it thickens like soft custard; flavor with vanilla; use more chocolate, eggs and sugar, if you want the custard richer.

FRITTERS. One pint of sour milk, one egg, a little salt, half a teaspoonful of soda, and flour enough to make a thin batter.

PASTE FOR ONE PIE. Two large handfuls of flour—or half a pint, two tablespoonfuls of lard, half a tablespoonful of butter; rub in the lard; roll in the butter; a little salt; cold water.

A lady who was urging some friends to dinner, felt disgusted when her eight-year-old son came in and said, "Mrs Jones says she can't spare no bread, and Mrs Fox can't to home, so I didn't get any butter." The friends thought they had better dine elsewhere, and the lady thought so, too, but she taught that boy that the way of the transgressor was hard.

"There is nothing impossible," exclaimed a man who was discoursing on Edison's achievement. "That man, to find out how egregiously he is mistaken, has only to attempt to cut his own hair."

"Man can do many things, but there is one thing he can't do—he can't button on a new collar just after cutting his thumb nails, without looking up in the air."

"There is one good thing about babies," says a late traveler; "they never change. We have girls of the period, of the world, but the baby is the same self-possessed, fearless, laughing, voracious little heathen in all ages and in all countries."

A free lunch lunch walked up to a hotel clerk yesterday, and offered to bet five to one and half of the gate money that he could eat 999 square meals in 300 consecutive days, the hotel to furnish the meals. The clerk reserved his decision and remanded the fend to the sidewalk.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, MAY 10, 1879.

The Mischief-Maker.

"Oh, Mr. Harris!"—and Willie Delevan's chubby fingers played restlessly with the gentleman's massive chain, while the childish face assumed an expression of wonderful importance—"you ought to have heard Mr. Matthews make love to sister yesterday."

Frank Harris wanted to be honorable; but the boy's prattle was terribly fascinating, and it was only after a hard struggle that he strove to divert the latter's attention from the subject in hand, to a curious seal-ring on his little finger.

"Yes, it's very pretty," said the child unconcernedly, after a hasty glance at the article in question. "But Mr. Matthews said lots of sweet things to Nell. He didn't know that I was listening in the shrubs," and the tiny tell-tale coughed with a triumphant chuckle.

"What did Nellie say?" asked his auditor, forgetting everything in his anxiety to know the reply of his betrothed.

"Well, they walked off just about then, so I didn't hear any more; but Miss Jones says that Nell's dead in love with him, and you ought to be man enough to make her have you. But you will make her, won't you? I hate Mr. Matthews, and don't want him for a brother."

Willie Delevan was certainly never intended for a diplomatist, for every word was a stab to the manly heart which, of all others, he least wished to wound, and each sentence a death-blow leveling his own desires; but unconscious of all this, he continued, perseveringly, "She cried last night, and kissed his picture. I saw her. May be she'll cry to-day; but don't you let her off, no matter what she does."

Just then the door opened and Nellie entered, with a winning blush and welcoming smile. Her brother slipped from his perch on his favorite's knee, and walked demurely out of the room.

"What's the matter, Frank? Are you getting ready for a funeral?" asked his lady-love, with a merry laugh, noticing the gloom which overspread his features.

"No, Miss Delevan," he answered, calmly thinking it best to settle the matter immediately. "But circumstances, unnecessary to explain, render the dissolving of our engagement expedient. Have I your permission to consider it at an end?"

Nellie, innocent of all wrong, and unconscious of her brother's misconstructions, turned very pale, and for a moment stood like one petrified; then summoning pride to her aid, replied coldly, "Assuredly, sir. Here is your ring," nervously removing the flashing solitaire.

"Your letters I will return as quickly as possible. May I request the same favor?"

"Certainly, Miss Delevan!" and with a courteous "Good morning," Frank Harris departed, striving, with all the might of a noble soul, to stifle his own anguish with thoughts of the happiness he had conferred upon one dearer far than self.

And Nellie! With an aching heart, which neither pride nor indignation could ease, but which both successfully endeavored to conceal, she resumed her undisturbed condition, attended different entertainments with her friends, and stowed in every way to show Frank Harris her indifference. But the gentleman was seldom present on these occasions; and Dame Rumor whose inquisitive mind continually manages to discover something, reported that his renouncement of society was owing entirely to Nell Delevan, who severed their engagement, and almost broke his heart. She, knowing how false were these explanations, fruitlessly wondered.

"Oh, Mr. Harris!" exclaimed the cause of all this perplexity to our hero one afternoon—some weeks after—while returning from school; "how glad I am to meet you! Where have you been all this time?"

Frank clasped the little fellow's hand cordially, and he continued, without waiting a reply: "I've got a tremendous Newfoundland pup, and was wishing you could see him. I asked sister Nell, last night, where I could send you word about it, but she snapped me up like a cat; and she said she should think Frank might come and see his mother's friend; but old women weren't of any account now-a-days, and—Well, you'll come and see her now, won't you?"

Frank was at first inclined to refuse; but the longing to see Nellie even though another's, was so intense that he decided to act according to the boy's pleasure.

Nellie was alone in the sitting-room, whither Willie ushered his friend.

"Nell, here's Mr. Harris, come to see my new dog and tux. Where is she?"

The blood rushed to her face in crimson torrents as she bowed to the gentleman, and informed her brother of Mrs. Delevan's absence.

"Well, it's no matter," hastily interrupted the incorrigible. "Just wait here a minute till I get Fido."

And before a word could be interposed, the estranged lovers were left alone.

Nellie determined not to be disconcerted, ventured a remark upon the weather, and an embarrassed conversation ensued, which, to their great satisfaction, was interrupted by Willie's entrance with his canine pet.

"Let me see," he began, musingly after the animal had been admired to his heart's content. "Why, Mr. Harris, I haven't seen you since—since—the day I told you not to let that hateful Mr. Matthews marry Nell!"

"Willie!" interrupted his sister, quite reprovingly, while the crimson dyed the very roots of her hair.

"Well, what are you Willy-ing me for? I did ask him not to, but might just as well have spared my breath. What do you think, Mr. Harris? Nellie told Miss Jones that she hated that horrid Mr. Matthews, and wouldn't marry him any way—I heard her."

Frank's face was one glow of joy; but Nellie fearing, she scarcely knew what, from her brother's loquacity, said, hastily, "Willie, you had better take Fido into his kennel."

"Yes, in a minute. But, Mr. Harris, that wasn't his picture at all she kissed—it was yours;" and, snatching up his pet, with a jubilant laugh, he skipped out of the room.

"Nellie," said Frank, advancing to where she stood, "is this so. Don't you love Mr. Matthews, and didn't you kiss his picture?"

She looked into his face, all aglow with hopeful love, and trembled.

"Mr. Harris, I consider your queries simply impertinent!"

"Before you condemn," he interrupted imploringly, "listen. Willie told me that he heard Mr. Matthews declare his love to you, and that evening saw you kiss his picture and cry over it. Could I, who loved you better than life, stand in the way of your happiness? No. So, without giving any reason, I broke off our engagement, and you were free—and I thought happy. Heaven knows my misery!"

Nellie was weeping, but her head was on his shoulder. Just then Willie entered, looked a moment, and, with a low, prolonged whistle left them to their restored happiness.

MARRIAGE.
Marriage places woman in the sphere where she may attain the greatest happiness; so does it advance her to a station of power and responsibility. Her power over her husband's happiness is almost absolute. By wisdom and steadiness, by forbearance and weakness, she may be to him a tower of strength, but no tongue can tell the way she may annoy him and render him wretched. Then cultivate and exhibit, with the greatest care and constancy, cheerfulness and good humor. They give beauty to the finest face and impart charms where beauty is not. On the contrary, a gloomy, dissatisfied manner is an antidote to affection; and though a man may not seem to notice it, it is chilling and repulsive to his feelings, and he will be very apt to seek elsewhere for those smiles and cheerfulness which he finds not in his own home. Endeavor to make your husband's habitation inviting and delightful to him. Let it be to him, a sanctuary to which his heart may always turn from the calamities of life. Make it a repose from his cares; a shelter from the world; a home, not for his person only, but for his heart. He may meet with pleasure in other houses, but let him find happiness in his own. Particularly shun what the world calls "curtain lectures." When you shut your door at night, endeavor to shut out at the same moment all discord and contention, and look on your chamber as a retreat from the vexation of the world, a shelter sacred to peace and affection.—How sweet is the society of a beloved when weary with the labors of the day. She shares his burdens and alleviates his sorrows, for there is no difficulty so heavy or insupportable in life which may not be surmounted by the mutual labors and the affectionate concord of that holy partnership.

A Schoolboy on Corns.
Corns are of two kinds—vegetable and animal. Vegetable corn grows on toes. There are several kinds of corn; there is the unicorn, capricorn, corn dodgers, field corn, and the corn which is the corn you feel most. It is said, I believe, that gophers do not like to "go fur," if they can help it. Corns have kernels, and some colonels have corns. Vegetable corn grows on ears, but animal corn grows on the feet at the other end of the body. Another kind of corn is the acorn; these grow on oaks, but there is no hoax about the acorn; The acorn is a corn with an indefinite article indeed. Try it and see. Many a man when he has a corn wishes it was an acorn. Folks that have corns sometimes send for a doctor, and if the doctor himself is corned he probably won't do so well as if he isn't. The doctor says corns are produced by tight boots and shoes, which is probably the reason why when a man is tight they say he is corned. If a farmer manages well he can get a good deal of corn on an acre, but I know of a farmer that has one corn that makes the biggest acher on his farm. The bigger crop of vegetable corn a man raises the better he does not like it. Another kind of corn is the corn dodger. The way it is made is very simple, and is as follows—that is if you want to know:—You go along the street and meet a man you know has a corn and a rough character; then you step on his toe that has a corn on it, and see if you don't have occasion to dodge. In that way you will find out what a corn dodger is.

A Wife's Own Letters.
"I want you to distinctly understand sir!" began a Third street wife as her husband came home and tossed into her lap an open letter addressed to her personally—"I want you to distinctly understand that I read the papers!"
"Do eh?" was the careless reply.
"Yes, sir, I do, and I know that the post-master-general has ruled that a husband has no control over his wife's correspondence. Here, sir, you have for the fifth or sixth time opened a letter addressed to me personally!"
"Yes, I know it," he demurely replied, "and for the fifth or sixth time I have written across the envelope: 'Opened by mistake!' If that doesn't cover the case you can appeal!"
She didn't appeal, but she is going to rent a lock-box.

The real wealth of a man is the number of things which he loves and blesses and by which he is loved and blessed.—Carlyle.
That was not bad in a country debating society where the subject considered was: "Is it wrong to cheat a lawyer?" After full discussion the decision was: "Not wrong, but too difficult to pay for the trouble."

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, MAY 10, 1879.

Something Worth Knowing.

Every little while, writes a correspondent, we read in the papers of some one who has stuck a rusty nail in his foot, or knees, or hand, or some other portion of his person, and that lock-jaw has resulted therefrom, of which the patient died. If every person in the world was aware of a perfect remedy for all such wounds, and would apply it, then all such reports must cease. But although we can give the remedy, we cannot enforce its application. Some will not employ it because they think it too simple; others will have no faith in it when they read it; while others often think such a wound of small account, and not worth fussing over, until it is too late to do any good. Yet all such wounds can be healed without the fatal consequences which follow them. The remedy is simple, almost always on hand, and can be applied by any one; and what is better, it is infallible. It is simply to smoke the wound, on any bruise or wound that is inflamed with burning wool or woolen cloth. Twenty minutes in the smoke of wool will take the pain out of the worst wound, and repeated once or twice, it will allay the worse case of inflammation arising from a wound we ever saw. People may sneer at the "old man's remedy" as much as they please but when they are afflicted just let them try it. It has saved many lives and much pain, and is worthy of being printed in letters of gold and put in every home.

Largest Music Box in the World.

An eminent Swiss mechanic has just finished, for the Khedive of Egypt certainly the biggest and finest, and probably the handsomest musical box ever made. Its beautiful ebony case is buffet-shaped, as large as a full-sized sideboard, and inlaid with zinc and brass work, and ornamented with bronze chasings and plates. The interior of this remarkable box is a perfect marvel of mechanical ingenuity; it includes all the latest improvements for selecting tunes, a patent moderator, etc., and is furnished with flute, flute-basso, drum-bells, and castanets. The repertoire consists of 132 tunes supplied by eleven cylinders—which can be exchanged at pleasure—each of them six inches in diameter and twenty-six inches long. Notwithstanding its Brobdingnagian dimensions, this instrument, like others of its kind, performs automatically; when the Khedive desires to treat himself to a concert he needs only to touch a spring, and if his highness should grow weary of the monotony of his 132 tunes, he has but to communicate with the maker, who can speedily supply him with the materials for a few additional hundreds. To complete our description we ought to mention that the box is the result of eighteen months of arduous labor.—London Weekly Journal.

Wooden Books.

A most interesting as well as novel collection of books is to be found in a library in the province of Cassel. These volumes appear like so many wooden blocks, but each block is a complete history of the tree it represents. For instance, an oak book is formed thus:—The bark is stripped from the back and the title inserted. One side—these books are all bound in "boards"—is formed from the split wood, showing the grain; the opposite side shows the varnished wood. Inside as one might expect, are the leaves; but the seed, fruit, the moss that grows upon the trunk, the insects that feed upon it, etc., are all represented as well. To these specimens is added a simple account of the tree, its usual location, and manner of growth, and no doubt other branches of its history.

A farmer who chews "the weed," sold a load of apples in Springfield, the other day, and rolled the proceeds up in a little wad and thrust it into his vest pocket. Presently he took "a chew" but after grinding it awhile, without the usual relish, discovered that he was chewing greenbacks. "I vum," expressed the intensity of his feelings, and he went off to a bank, where he got eighty cents on a dollar for what there was left.

"It does not take long," says an agricultural writer, "to fork over an acre." Which is gospel truth. Thousands of acres have been forked over to the mortgagees the past year or two, in double-quick order.

"Sambo, whar you get dat watch you wear to meetin' last Sunday?"
"How do you know I hab a watch?"
"Kase I seed the chain hang out ob your pocket in the front."
"Go 'way, nigger, s'pose you see a halter round my neck, you think dar is a hoss inside ob me?"

"I say, Sambo, does you know what makes de corn grow so fast when you put de manure on it?"

"No, I don't hardly, 'cept it makes de ground stronger for de corn."

"Now, I'll jest tell ye. When de corn begins to smell de manure, it don't like de 'fumery, so it hurries out ob de ground and gits up as high as possible, so as not to breathe de bad air."

A MYSTERY. Two darkies had bought a piece of pork, and Sam, having no place to put his in, trusted the whole to Julius' keeping. Next morning they met, when Julius said:

"A most strange thing happened at my house last night, Sam. All mystery to me."

"Ah, Julius, what was dat?"

"Well, Sam, this mornin' I went down into the cellar to get a piece of pork for breakfast, and I put my hand down into the brine, and felt all round, but no pork dere—all gone—couldn't tell what be went with it; so I turned up de barrel, and, Sam, as sure as preachin', de rats eat a hole clear fru de bottom ob de barrel, and dragged de pork all out."

"Why didn't the brine run out of de hole?"

"Ah, Sam, dat is de mystery."

THE VALUE OF EDUCATION. Jake was heard calling across the fence to his neighbor's son, a colored youth, who goes to school at the Atlanta Colored University:

"Look hyar, boy, you goes ter school, don't yer?"

"Yes sir," replied the boy.

"Gettin' eddykashun, ain't yer?"

"Yes, sir."

"Larnin' 'rithmetick and figgerin' on a slate, eh?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, it don't take two whole days to make an hour, do it?"

"Why, no!" exclaimed the boy.

"You was gwine ter bring dat hatchet back in an hour, wasn't yer?"

"Yes, sir."

"An' it's bin two whole days since you borrowed it. Now, what good's eddykashun gwine ter do you thick-skulled niggers, when you go to school a whole year an' den can't tell how long it takes to fotch back a hatchet?"

The boy got mad and slung the hatchet over the fence and half-way through an ash barrel.—Wit and Humor.

Grape Juice and Wine

FOR SALE.

I FIND that after two to three years of age, my grape juice produces a very excellent wine, and as I have on hand some 300 to 400 gallons, I would like to dispose of a part of it. It has been used in the church the past five years, and I have not yet heard of any of the members being higher or any lower than an upright position. But I think they don't take enough to do either good or harm. I presume I use more myself in one day than all the members of a church use in a month. If you are sick and wish to get well, take some grape juice; if you are well and wish to keep so, take a little grape juice and save the expense of all other medicine. I have used it freely the last six years, and none other, and intend to continue it.

The Celery Cure.

Here we come with another doctor. This one's pronouncement is that celery is a cure for rheumatism. He has tried it over and over again with uniform success. The disease, he declares, is impossible if celery be cooked and freely eaten. It is effective when taken raw. He prescribes that it should be cut into bits, boiled in water, until soft, and the water drunk by the patient. Put new milk with a little flour and nutmeg into a saucepan with the boiled celery, serve it warm with pieces of toast, eat it with potatoes, and the painful ailment will soon yield. Cold or damp never produces but simply develops the disease, of which acid blood is the primary and sustaining cause, and while the blood is alkaline there can neither be rheumatism or gout. English statistics show that in one year, (1876), 3640 persons died of rheumatism, and every case, it is claimed, might have been cured or prevented by the adoption of the remedy mentioned. At least two-thirds of the cases named heart disease are ascribed to rheumatism and its agonizing ally, gout. Smallpox so much dreaded, is not half so destructive as rheumatism, which, it is maintained by many physicians, can be prevented by obeying nature's laws in diet. But if you have incurred it, boiled celery is pronounced unhesitatingly to be a specific.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Remedy for Croup.

A teaspoonful of currant jelly warmed over a lamp and given to a child with first symptoms of croup, will check its progress until a doctor can be sent for, or a fire started and some more vigorous remedies applied. Let the mother keep the child warm in bed, and her own hand dipped in cold water, laid on its throat, while others are making other preparations. Probably nine children out of ten who die of croup might be saved by the timely application of roast onions, mashed, laid upon a folded napkin, and goose oil, sweet oil, or even lard, poured on and applied as hot as can be borne comfortable to the throat and upper part of the chest, and to the feet and hands. Never neglect the first symptoms.

"GAVE THEM TO HIS PA." In a town not very far from Boston, where innumerable small streams tend to the ocean and are a great resort for smelts during the spawning season, and a town, too, where it has always been supposed the fish and game laws of the State were strictly enforced, a lady teacher remarked the other morning at the opening of the school: "Well, children, you look well and hearty this morning, how many of you had smelts for breakfast?" Every hand was up. "Why," she said to one little shaver, "you couldn't have had smelts, because your father is a policeman, and you know there is a fine of a dollar." "Oh, yes," replied the youngster, "I know that; but don't you see they gave them to my pa not to have him tell."

Poetry.

Somehow or Other.

Life has a burden for every man's shoulder,
Some may escape from its trouble and care,
Miss it in youth, and 'twill come when we're older,
And fit us as close as the garments we wear.
Sorrow comes into our lives uninvited,
Robbing our hearts of their treasures of song;
Lovers grow cold and friendships are slighted,
Yet somehow or other we carry along.
Every-day toil is an every-day blessing,
Though poverty's cottage and crust may we share Weak is the back on which burdens are pressing,
But stout is the heart that is strengthened by prayer.
Somehow or other the pathway grows brighter
Just when we learn there is none to befriend; Hope in the heart makes the burden seem lighter,
And somehow or other we get to the end.

Agricultural, &c.

Hints for May.

Grafting of old trees, while best done
just as the buds upon the tree are swelling, may be continued, with proper care, until the trees are in bloom. In late grafting, the bark slips readily, and care is required in cutting off the branches to not make bad wounds. At this time, before sawing off a branch, cut around it with a knife quite through the bark to the wood, and let the saw follow this cut; this will avoid displacing the bark.
A change of food is to be made cautiously. The stomach and bowels are easily disordered by the sudden and serious change made at this season, and during the first month the substitution of grass or clover for dry food should be gradual. The first symptoms of anything wrong in cows, is a shrinking of the milk, or a loss of appetite.
When the cows are fully on the pastures, supply them regularly with salt.
Once a day is sufficient, and it will prevent possible injurious effect of the fresh succulent food which otherwise might appear in the form of severe and dangerous disorders of the blood. Cottonseed meal will be useful this month,
until the grass becomes less succulent.
Young chicks will thrive best when they are kept dry and clean, and moved frequently to fresh ground. "There is no better place for a coop than the garden through which the chicks will wander freely, picking up or driving off many insects. Provide an abundance of clean water, tight shelter overhead and a dry floor. There will rarely be gaps if this plan is followed.
In making new lawns it is not necessary to sow oats or other grain with the grass seed, unless the work is done very late, and even then we should risk the large without it, as it fills the soil with large roots, to the detriment of the grass.
Frequent mowing before the weather sets in, will help thicken the turf, but new lawns should be cut less frequently when drouths come on. If it has not yet been given, the established lawn should have a top dressing of some fertilizer, and different from that applied the year before. Super-phosphate, guano, ashes, bone, nitrate of soda, or plaster will be useful, and one or the other should be put on each year.
Large weeds in lawns, can only be eradicated by weeding; if the plants are dandelions, dock, etc., appear, pull them in a moist time, or cut well below the surface with a knife. Annual weeds soon give way to frequent mowing, and die without seeding.—American Agriculturist.

Anecdotes.

Sixty-five Bushels.
Charles E. King of Winfield, N. H., says:—Last spring I bought some of Bradley's Super Phosphate. I prepared an acre for corn and used phosphate in the hill. Two rows were left through the middle of the piece without phosphate. The corn was picked and husked carefully. The two rows without phosphate had four bushels of ears—two rows, one each side had six bushels, an increase of 33 1/3 per cent. On the acre
I had 65 bushels of shelled corn, several cart-loads of pumpkins and squashes, and five bushels of beans.

SATURDAY, MAY 17, 1879.

Short communications and items of new interest solicited from friends and patrons. Anonymous communications are not published.

A FINE ENTERTAINMENT. In calling the attention of our readers to the Cantata of Ruth, to be given at the Town Hall next week, we thought it might be well to give an outline of the cantata. The argument is as follows:—

"A severe famine prevails in Bethlehem, Judea. A messenger brings the tidings of plenty in Moab, and beseeches the people to cry to Jehovah for help in their trouble. Elimelech and his family, Naomi and two sons, flee to Moab. The two sons there marry Ruth and Orpah. During a period of ten years, the three, Naomi, Ruth and Orpah, are left in widowhood. They beseech their affliction, and Naomi resolves to return to her home, where plenty is now restored. Orpah is persuaded to go to her own people, but Ruth 'claves unto her mother-in-law,' and returns with her to Bethlehem. The inhabitants greet them with surprise, when Naomi tells of her affliction. Boaz, a man of wealth and power, finds her in his fields gleaning, and becomes enamored of her. At night-fall she falls asleep among the sheaves, and Boaz goes to her a slumber song. The next day an Israelitish woman prophesies better things for her, and she waits to see the result. According to the Oriental custom, the property is redeemed, and soon after Boaz and Ruth are married. Boaz celebrates by 'making merry,' and the scene closes with praise to God for his mercies." The cantata abounds in beautiful solos, duets, trios, quartets and choruses, especially noticeable among which are the solo and chorus, "God is our Refuge." The entire second scene by Naomi, Ruth and Orpah, the united semi-chorus of reapers, binders and gleaners, "My spirit faints," a duet by Naomi and first Reaper, Ruth's "Gleaning Song," Boaz's slumber song, and Angel trio; the Timbrel chorus, "Merry-making," at the house of Boaz, and many others which we have not space to mention.

Go and hear it for yourself and we think we can safely say that no one will come away disappointed.

BEAUTIFUL MONUMENT. During the past two weeks many of our citizens visited the works of McGrath Brothers, to see a beautiful monument which is to be erected at Newton, for Francis M. Johnson, Esq., who for many years was a prominent and very highly respected citizen of this town.

The monument is of the Sarcophagus style, and is executed in pure Italian Marble, resting on a Quincy Granite base, nine feet in length, and four and one-half in width. The marble plinth is chiseled and bears the following inscription, in raised, old English letters:—

"Until the day break and the shadows flee away."

The die or central piece is concave in outline, and receives simply the family name. Over the cap, surmounting the whole is a mantle of rich, heavy drapery, falling in easy folds over the front and sides.

The design is unique and the work beautifully executed, reflecting credit on the taste of the family and the skill of the workmen.

The same firm have just erected at Mount Wollaston Cemetery a fine Quincy Granite monument, for our late honored townsman, Chief Justice Bigelow.

A NOBBY TEAM. There appeared on our streets this week a very handsome milk wagon, made by Messrs. Tirrell & Sons, which attracted no little attention, particularly the inscription upon the side, which was as follows:

Quintessentiality of the Famous Farm.
E. F. TAYLOR,
QUINCY, MASS.

The team was driven by its popular proprietor, who has for many years supplied his numerous customers in Boston with the pure lactical fluid, and who has so unanimously won their esteem, that he has yielded to their urgent request, and permitted the name of the celebrated farm, which has produced such large quantities of rich cream, to be gilded upon the wagon, so that the children and grand-children of his patrons may remember with pleasure the sonorous title.

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS. Prof. J. P. Marshall, of Tufts College, with the geological section of the senior class visited Quincy last Wednesday. Under the guidance of Rev. Mr. Perry they inspected the quarries of the town and were interested not only in the immense deposit of granite but in the various methods of cutting and finishing the stone. They also visited the famous ledge of Silurian argillite, known as Hayward's, in Braintree. This is the only ledge of the kind in our State, and being fossiliferous (trilobites) is very interesting to all students of geology.

LICENSED. The Selectmen have granted the following licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors, in this town:—

A. G. Durgin, fourth-class.
Joseph S. Whall, fourth-class.
George H. Whiton, fourth-class.
Hiram P. Abbott, first-class.
William Corcoran, first-class.
Bernard Donnelly, first-class.

EXHIBITION. Russ B. Walker closed his dancing school in this place, on Tuesday evening last, by a successful ball and exhibition, at Faxon Hall. A large audience assembled to thank the professor for the patience and care he had bestowed on this juvenile class, and to witness the skill, ease and grace which attended all their movements. May this popular teacher live many years to instruct our little ones in this healthy and graceful exercise.

Local Items.

This has been a hot week. The mercury has been up in the nineties.

Some of the school boys have been in swimming this week.

Some of the pear and cherry trees look like huge bouquets.

Grand Chancellor Wm. H. Lee will make an official visit to St. Paul's Lodge, Knights of Pythias, at this town, on Wednesday evening next.

A novel feature in the rendition of the Timbrel Chime, in "Ruth" will be a chime of six electric bells, used in connection with the piano and organ.

Mr. Lewis Bass has improved Granite street in front of his premises, by setting out a row of fine English elms.

Is it not about time to begin to make arrangements for the celebration of the glorious Fourth? Seven weeks from yesterday will bring the great day.

Do not fail to glance at the Supplement. You will find two communications and a variety of interesting reading matter.

In the Patriot of May 10, we gave directions for washing blankets. A lady friend has tried the process, and speaks in terms of praise of the beautiful new look of her blankets.

The trees have put forward their foliage very fast the past week. One week ago scarcely a blossom was to be seen on the trees, now the peach, cherry and pear trees are in full blossom.

Rev. Mr. Perry will lecture, to-morrow night, at 7:30, on "Modern Science and Christianity." He will show which doctrine of Christianity will survive and which will not, if the evolution be accepted.

Fires in Quincy in 1878-9.

We give below a list of fires occurring in this town during the year commencing May 1st, 1878, and ending May 1st, 1879. It will be seen by the list that we have had but six fires during the year, and the loss was $13,900, while in the year 1877-8, we had fifteen fires, with a loss of only $8000. The engines have been called out several times by alarms caused by the burning of chimneys.

History of Old Braintree and Quincy.

The Boston Transcript has the following editorial notice of our town history, written by William S. Pattee, M. D.:—

"This is evidently a work of very thorough research and industrious and faithful labor. It was not prepared by the prompting or patronage of the town authorities, but as a contribution made by the author himself, with zeal and heartiness, to local history. The best proof of the fidelity of investigation which he has given to it appears in the large number and the authentic character of the original documents, mostly thrown into the form of notes, for illustration and elucidation in the State House, the records of the courts, the towns and the churches, and from private cabinets. There can be no better materials than these for use in the construction of a town history, nor is there any substitute for them in fine writing or comment in presenting with the old quaintness and flavor the life of one of our ancient municipalities. Without any purpose to abate from the credit of the author for what he has done, but rather to give a caution to future historians of towns for the avoiding of blemishes easily guarding against, which are not in keeping with the character of research and preparation, we must note the oversights and carelessness in the correction of the press, the signs of which have passed under our eyes as we have read this volume."

"But of the interest and value of the contents of the volume we have not one word to utter. In some respects a part of the region whose history the writer chronicles is more than the whole. The town of Quincy, making a quarter of the original old town of Braintree, swallows up in interest its parent territory, having attained a world-wide fame for the granite which it has produced in two forms, in building material and in men. And the territory, which is now divided into four considerable towns, was once a part of Boston. Our original little peninsula was well and wisely chosen as our chief settlement and metropolis, because of its harbor and its deep water, and because it could be easily defended. But as soon as it was occupied, the settlers felt cramped for land for tillage and pasture. Hence, the first emigration, under the names of Wimsimmet and Rumney Marsh, were taken as an 'enlargement' on one side, and as Dorchester and Mattapan, was already a town by itself, the Boston people leaped over it and secured Braintree. Then the object of many who obtained grants of land in the territory seemed to be rather to hold it for increase of valuation than to occupy it for immediate improvement. Of the consequent embarrassments and controversies arising, giving matter for much litigation, the author presents sufficiently full information."

"The most picturesque character and the raciest writer in our early days—Thomas Morton, the rollicking and satirical hero of Matt-Mount or Merry-mount, had planted himself and his genial crew on the elevation in Quincy which will always be associated with his name and his Indian maidens 'in beaver coats.' In strongest possible contrast to him and his doings were those who followed him on the spot, and the alterations on doctrinal themes which engaged their fervid theological zeal. Of these, too, Dr. Pattee makes faithful and luminous record. But the author having left his readers without the help of a table of contents, though he has furnished a good index to the subjects and another of names, it is difficult to do more in opening the matter of the volume to general notice than to say that it is arranged under titles such as these:—

"Early Settlements and Incorporation of the Whole Territory and of each of its Parts"; "Land Grants and Troubles"; "Chapter of Annals"; "Centuries"; "Public Houses"; "Religious Societies in General"; "Schools and Education"; "The Industries of the Place in Granite, Iron, Glass, Fish and Various Manufactures"; Newspapers; Miscellaneous and Distinguished Individuals."

The histories of the religious societies seen to have been prepared by representative members of them. Perhaps the town had not so much rancor and intolerance connected with its religious history as have many other of our communities of like age. The history of the Episcopal Society is peculiarly interesting."

It is worthy of mention that John Adams, in providing for the flourishing academy which bears his family name, excluded metaphysics from its course of instruction. He wrote in a letter, 'Metaphysics I would leave in the clouds with the Materialists and Spiritualists; or if permitted to be read, it should be with romances and novels.' It was only by a close vote of the inhabitants that, when in 1792 what is now the town of Quincy was separated from old Braintree, it received that name instead of the designation of Hancock."

The Drama.

BOSTON, MAY 15th, 1879. MUSEUM. Without doubt the novelty on the boards this week is the "Children's Pinafore" at this house, and in some respects it is the phenomenal performance; and from the first has attracted large and delighted audiences. It is needless at this time to speak of a piece so familiar, sufficient to say the company is of children of six to fifteen years. That the music be to perfection, with surprising volume, naturally. That the roles are assumed with great intelligence and ease. A word for one particular star,—"Little Buttercup,"—and she is little, being the midget of the company, about six years old and twenty-eight inches high. The way she acts and sings her part, would put to shame many of mature years, whom we have seen in the same; she is the delight and pet of the audience, who hail her with rapturous applause. Next week the latest New York success, the comedy,—"The Snowball" at the regular performances.

GLOBE. Next in point of interest is the appearance of Messrs. Robson and Crute, as the two Pyromaniacs in Shakespeare's "Comedy of Errors," and in passing we would say that rumor has greatly exaggerated the merits of these performances; the western critics had raised our expectations to a high pitch, and we experienced no little disappointment therein. Of the play and its author nothing need be said. The original text has been somewhat altered, and as might be expected without improvement over the master-piece. Making ample allowance for all defects, the performance has much of fun, drollery, excellence and attractiveness. The balance of the characters are assumed with much cleverness and merit. Mr. Charles Webb's Eygon being by far the artistic effort of the piece, and Mr. Harry Coulter as Antipholus of Syracuse, deserving special notice. The comedy is preceded by the amusing farce, "The Little Rebel."

GAIETY. Mr. Emmet is still on the boards of this house and presenting his "Fritz." He is a pleasing and painstaking actor, and gives a variety performance of no little merit, though at times somewhat tedious, but on the whole entertaining. His Antipholus, we regret to say, have been light.

BOSTON THEATRE. The Ideal Pinafore remains the attraction, with large audiences. Saturday evening Miss Michael Noah takes her benefit, assisted by Miss Sarah Bartlett, her pupil, who recently made her successful debut at Portsmouth. "The Hunch-back" and other pieces are the attractions.

PARK THEATRE. "Engaged" has a strong hold on popular favor, and should be seen by all who enjoy pure fun, and a chance to moralize. It will run until June 2d, when the "Union Square" success, "The Banker's Daughter" will be presented.

A Request.

Failing to understand what connection there is between "The murder of an innocent little child at Pocomass, Mass." and the attempted suppression of the pernicious sale of intoxicating liquors in Quincy, will "Citizen" who in the article of the 10th, claims to "represent the mass," over his real signature, make some "practicable" suggestions, whereby he may help to unravel the "moss" and show how to propagate "mice" of more mature growth? even if diffidence will not permit his name in public to be known, such advice would gladly be received and carefully considered by

For the Patriot.

Rev. Mr. Smith preached his first sermon as pastor of the South Congregational church, on Sabbath last.

Rev. Mr. Colburn, Methodist, preached to his people last Sabbath afternoon, from John 3d chapter, 3d verse.—"Except a man be born again, he cannot see the Kingdom of God." It was a plain, practical sermon; the pastor using an illustration upon the blackboard, showing the road from conviction to conversion, and thus speaking through the eye to the heart. Mr. Colburn is an earnest preacher, and will be a good worker amongst his people.

A narrow escape from fire occurred at the house of Mr. Russell, on Tremont street, on Monday morning last. A little son of Mr. R., whilst playing with matches set fire to some odds and ends in a back closet, in the second story. It made quite a satisfactory blaze for the lad, but being discovered in season was put out without a general alarm.

H. B. Perkins has bought the coal yard recently occupied by R. C. Paine & Co., at the south depot, and proposes to take extra pains to satisfy the public and secure their patronage.

WALKING MATCH. A grand five-mile walking match took place at Weymouth, last Wednesday evening, in which there were nine contestants. Quincy was represented by the champion giant walker, Mr. Peter Williams. Mr. Williams is acknowledged by many to be the best walker in Norfolk County. His time was 43 minutes, 10 seconds, and he prize a gold medal. He is ready to accept any challenge that may be addressed to him.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, MAY 17, 1879.

NANTASKET BEACH. The new hotel is fast taking shape. Its immense proportions and the large spaces occupied by it begin to show themselves. As one stands on the first or reception floor and looks down through its net-work of up-rights and supports, or standing on its broad veranda measures its length and breadth, it is a very easy matter to realize that it is to be a grand house. The view from it will be very fine, located as it is on the brow of the beach and having an unobstructed sweep of the bay. Its broad piazzas will no doubt be the favorite and pleasant resting place of many of the thousands of excursionists who visit the beach during the summer. The hotel will be a very attractive feature the coming season, and nothing will be left undone to assure the comfort and happiness of its patrons and guests.

A YOUNG TEACHER. On Friday last, says the Fall River News, a teacher in the Borden School, of that city, was unavoidably absent, and the expected substitute failed to put in an appearance. But a young Miss—named Merrithew, aged ten years—took the teacher's chair, called the school to order and carried on the exercises. Some of the pupils undertook to be smart with ladies' tobacco, a flowering weed, throwing it about, but she energetically put a stop to it, and made each one empty his pockets. Great credit is due to this inchoate school-marm of the future. Where is the boy ten years old who could have done it?

FATAL ACCIDENT. The New York express train, while approaching Hyde Park, last Saturday evening, struck Mr. Henry F. Cushing, who was walking on the track. He was instantly killed and thrown into the river, the force of the blow being so great as to break off the pilot-rod from the engine. Mr. Cushing resided on Fairmount avenue, and was employed in a wholesale gentlemen's furnishing goods establishment in New York. He leaves a widow. He was about thirty-eight years of age.

A DANGEROUS COUNTERFEIT. The secret service division of the Treasury Department received telegraphic advices from Washington, Monday afternoon last, of the appearance in New York city Sunday night of a new counterfeit $5 bill on the National Bank of Pawling, Pawling, Dutchess county, N. Y. It is supposed to be a transfer from the dangerous counterfeit Tamaqua five, and the public will do well to refuse all fives on the Pawling bank.

Paper napkins to the number of 250,000 have been sold by one Boston firm since they were introduced a year ago. Take paper napkins at five cents a dozen, and stamped wooden plates at ten cents a dozen, and you have a reasonably inexpensive table outfit that does not require washing.

An Illinois man sleeps every night on a spot of ground left bare for the purpose in his house, and has an attendant shovel clean earth over him, to take the place of bed-clothes. He believes that in this way he guards against disease.

A Wabash man has been successively and successfully divorced from three wives. Then he married the first again, and now, upon her death, he has re-united with the second. The third is waiting.

The new civil-damage liquor law is wading out the irresponsible and poster classes of liquor-sellers in all the country-towns. The real estate owners are unwilling to give their consent for the traffic on their premises.

A negro watchman at the San Francisco Mint has been detected in stealing gold bullion from the vaults. He has operated for over three years, and taken about $20,000.

The new postal cards—a two cent one for foreign mails, and a double one for a return message in domestic correspondence—will be ready between now and autumn.

On the Hudson river, between Tarrytown and Albany, there are upward of 150 brick-yards, varying in productive capacity from 20,000 to 140,000 bricks a day in the working season.

The Robins.

It should not, perhaps, be considered remarkable that a bird so long celebrated in poetry and the stories of children, should have excited sympathy in our legislature. And I suppose that we should all of us agree, that our laws should be so framed as to discourage the wanton destruction of either reptiles or birds. Until I, myself, began the culture of fruit, some fifteen years ago, I had the common estimate of the robin, and thought it wrong to molest this bird in any way. Since that time, I have read the laws made for its protection, and am satisfied that while the motive of our law-makers was no doubt good enough, they were totally ignorant how destructive this bird is, in the fruit garden. Had its real character been known, it would no more be protected by the magistrate than the crow or the hawk.

Of my Delaware, Eumalan and Clinton grapes (all three sorts which the robin can swallow easily), this same bird from year to year, has destroyed the whole! All the others, together with my pears, peaches and apples, are mutilated and rendered worthless by the robin; and I would like to know, if upon my own premises, I am not permitted to protect my fruit, from any and all depredations by boys or birds?

Nor can I believe there is a single magistrate in this town that would, for one moment, listen to a complaint that would deny to a poor man who gains his daily bread by fruit culture, the right to protect himself from all fruit thieves, upon his own premises, conditioned that he do not infringe upon any right of his neighbors. No one, I am sure, who has suffered as much as I have from the robins, could object to another's protection of himself from thieves,—whether by crows, hawks, robins, boys or black-legs.

Budget of Fun.

The amount of pin-money required by the married woman depends on whether she uses diamond pins or rolling-pins.

Whether old age is to be respected, depends much on whether it applies to men and women or to poultry.

Two Irishmen were imprisoned—one for stealing a cow, and the other a watch. "Hello! Mike! what time is it?" said the cow-stealer to the other. "And sure, Pat, I haven't any time-piece handy; but I think it must be most milking-time."

Gen. Lee asked a straggler one day, whom he found eating green persimmons, if he did not know they were unfit for food. "I'm not eating them for food general," replied the man. "I'm eating them to draw my stomach up to fit my rations."

"Second class in grammar, stand up," said the schoolmaster. "John is,—who does John correspond with?" "I know," said the little boy at the foot, holding up his hand; "if you mean John Brown, he corresponds with my sister Susan."

An Irishman went to the theatre for the first time. Just as the curtain descended on the first act a boiler in the basement exploded, and he was blown through the roof, coming down in the next street. After coming to his senses, he asked, "An' what piece de yez play next?"

A sportsman who, during the shooting season, had gone to pass a week with a friend in the country, on the strength of a general invitation, instead of waiting for a special one, said to his annoyed host: "I saw some beautiful scenery as I came to-day by the upper road." "You will see still finer," was the reply, as you go back to-morrow by the lower one."

A very little boy had one day done wrong, and he was sent, after paternal corrections, to ask in secret the forgiveness of his Heavenly Father. His offence was passion. Anxious to hear what he would say, his mother followed to the door of his room. In lisping accents she heard him ask to be made better, and then, with child-like simplicity, he added: "Lord make ma's temper better, too."

A teacher in one of the Westfield public schools was startled the other day at the answer she got from one bright little fellow. On the blackboard was the picture of an ostrich, and the teacher described its great strength and power of endurance, closing by saying that it was the only bird man could ride. "I know another," spoke up a little chap. "Well what is it?" "A lark." Unsuspectingly the teacher asked, "How can you prove that Johnny?" "All that I know about it," said the boy, "is that mother every little while says that father's off on a lark, and when he comes he looks as if he had rode awful fast."

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, MAY 17, 1879.

Evolution.

To the Publishers of the Patriot:

As the communication in your last issue with the above caption is a criticism upon the abstract of my lecture upon Darwinism, published the week preceding, I suppose I am called upon to respond. A query exists in my mind whether it be worth the while. My critic has largely mistaken the animus of my lecture. I have no quarrel with Science, but gladly accept all that is "demonstrated by actual experiment." I give my assent to the theory of evolution so far as the above quotation is true of it. I submit, however, that the development of life, mind and soul, is the question of the hour. It has not been "demonstrated by actual experiment" how these came to be. Is this not what Tyndal meant when he said, "I prolong the vision backward across the boundary of the experimental evidence and discern in that matter * * * the promise and potency of every form and quality of life"? Before he discerns the origin of life he looks across the line of knowledge. The evolution of life, mind and soul, is accepted by scientists not because proven but because it seems to be of a piece with the rest. I may then be "illogical," if I say that I await the "demonstration of actual experiment," but have I parted altogether with the scientific spirit?

The scientist starts with the fire mist and traces it down in its development to the complex forms of modern life. That fire mist was self-evolved; existed eternally; or was created. My critic may take the first or second. I prefer the third. I may be "illogical" again, but I am bound to come to my own conclusions. My object in speaking upon this point was to show to religionists that they need not fear that it is not easy to get rid of the need of God. I added that many of the leading scientists—among them Haeckel, Spencer, Tyndal and Huxley, do not deny a Creator—"Small scientists" quite generally do deny a Creator. By small scientists, I mean those who pride themselves upon being followers of greater men without really knowing what their masters teach.

I see my critic is a believer in spontaneous generation. In this he has certainly taken a long step in advance of some of the ablest of scientists. Prof. Tyndal's experiments certainly go far to show life comes from seeds or germs, and is never spontaneously developed. "Nothing but forms are created." These words simply show how difficult it is to get free from the need of a Creator.

My critic assures us that, "by science we mean a knowledge of nature's order and laws, and by theology simply a theory of the unknown." I suppose he uses the "we" in the "editorial" sense. I suspect many people will take exception to one or both of these definitions. As the word Science is used nowadays, it means rather the aggregation of knowledge and theory. Haeckel claims that his work entitled, "Anthropogenie," is scientific, and his conclusions, science. Huxley says of it, "It need hardly be said that in dealing with such a problem as this, science rapidly passes beyond the bounds of verifiable fact and enters those of more or less justifiable speculation."

My conclusion is, and I might strengthen it by other citations that science is somewhat a "theory of the unknown." I claim, but have not now time to bring the proofs, that the existence of God can be postulated as truly as the existence of nature; hence that theology is not a "theory of the unknown."

QUINCY, May 10, 1879.

Anecdote of Ben Butler.

Ben Butler was called on by a person who wanted to have a talk with him. "Mr. Butler," said he, "one of my neighbor's cows jumped my garden gate last night and completely destroyed my flower beds. The gate was of the height required by law, and was closed. Now I wish to know whether I can obtain damages?"

"Most assuredly," replied the widow's friend.

"Well, Mr. Butler, how much?"

"Oh! about ten dollars."

"But, Mr. Butler," triumphantly, "the cow was yours."

"Ah?" said Mr. Butler, thoughtfully; and he looked unutterable things out of his bad eye. Then he turned to his desk, scratched off a few lines on a piece of paper and handed it to his visitor.

tor. It was in the form of an account and read as follows:

"B. F. Butler to Mr. —, Dr. To damages caused by cow, $10; by legal advice, Cr., $15; balance due me $5."

"Mr. — said Mr. Butler, softly, "you needn't hurry about the payment."

Important to Know.

A man drew a note promising to pay one hundred dollars. He used a printed form, and did not close up the blank devoted to dollars, and after passing as negotiable paper somebody inserted "and fifty" after the one hundred and before the printed dollars. The note thus altered, got into the hands of an innocent party, who presented it to the drawer, and the Supreme Court decided that the maker of the note was liable for its face, because through negligence he did not draw a line between the word "hundred" and the printed word "dollars." Any testimony that the drawer might offer to establish the fact that he gave a note for one hundred dollars must go for nothing, as there was nothing on the face of the note showing that it had been altered. Evidence of any alteration on the face of the note would have changed the case. Let this be a lesson to all drawers of promissory notes. No one can be too careful in such matters.—Exchange.

A young man who enjoys the sobriquet of "Frank," in parting with a young lady the other night, endeavored to impress his customary kiss, when she forcibly pushed back his head, and said, "No, sir, you don't—the franking privilege is abolished."

Walking Match.

The walking match for a gold medal and the ten-mile championship of Quincy, occurred at the Braintree Town Hall, on Saturday evening last, between Wm. H. Garvin of Quincy and Christopher Barry of West Quincy.

About 8 o'clock the contestants were ordered to get ready, and as each man appeared on the track he was received with rounds of applause. Soon after, the word "go" was given and off both men started at a rattling pace, each man straining every nerve to gain the half lap and then drop in behind his adversary. Barry was the lucky one and soon had the race in hand, but Garvin repeatedly tried to shake him off, but to no purpose. These positions were not changed during the race and Barry was the winner, which gives him the title of champion. So rejoiced were his friends that they gave vent to their feelings in loud cheers which made the hall ring from top to bottom. At the finish, Barry appeared as fresh as if he had only been taking a morning walk for an appetite, with his inimitable and enervating trainer Mr. John Collins, and throughout the race showed wonderful endurance.

Mr. John O'Connell of Weymouth acted as judge for Barry and filled the position to good advantage. F. A. Chapman was judge for Garvin, and Robert Fair acted as referee. Everything passed off quietly and the affair was a success throughout.

OBITUARY. Mr. Thomas J. Emerson, who for many years carried on a fashionable hair-dressing establishment in this town, died at his residence on Saturday morning. Mr. Emerson had been in feeble health for the past two years, and his disease, which was probably caused by a sun stroke while in the army, he having served his country in the late war, had so impaired his mind as to make the strong man simple and trusting as a little child.

His funeral took place on Monday afternoon and was largely attended. His remains were conveyed to Mount Wollaston Cemetery. Paul Revere Post and a delegation of the Granite Temple of Honor, both organizations of which he was a respected member, doing escort duty. The Rev. D. M. Wilson conducted the services at the house, and the Rev. E. A. Perry, chaplain of Paul Revere Post conducted the services at the grave.

CONCERT. Last Thursday evening, our citizens were highly entertained at the Town Hall, by a select chorus assisted by eminent solo talent, composed principally of ladies and gentlemen from Wollaston, who gave the cantata of "Ruth, the Moabitess." The concert was one of the very best given this season, and we were pleased to see the hall so well filled.

CHILDREN IN QUINCY. Mr. Ensign S. Fellows, who has taken the census since the first of May, of the children of this town, between the ages of five and fifteen, furnishes us with the following figures:—

No. attending Codding schools 277
No. attending Quincy schools 191
No. attending Wollaston schools 257
No. attending Willard schools 608
No. attending Wollaston school 157

Total, 1792
No. of children last May, 1794
It will be noticed that over one-half of all the children attending school go either to the Willard or the Adams schools.

GO-AS-YOU-PLEASE. A seven mile go-as-you-please race will occur on Decoration morning around the Stone Temple in the Square, for four prizes. The match will commence precisely at 8:12 o'clock, and promises to be an exciting contest. It is open to pedestrians from Quincy, Weymouth and Braintree. The entrance fee is fifty cents.

FIRE. A small barn at East Milton, near Algerine corner, was destroyed by fire early on Sunday morning last. It was owned by R. B. Forbes, Jr., whose loss is estimated at about $100.

An alarm was given in our village and the whole fire department turned out, but only the chemical engine at Wollaston went to the scene of conflagration. The other companies went as far as West Quincy.

PUBLIC REQUEST. We learn that the late Edward Q. Tirrell, a nephew of our aged townsman, Charles P. Tirrell, has left to a number of Societies $100 each, for the benefit of the poor. Among the number is the Universalist Society of this town.

GLASS BALL SHOOT. A glass ball shoot was held in the field at the foot of Granite place, East Milton, Saturday afternoon last, by some of the members of the East Milton Sporting Club. Each man shot at ten balls, with the following result:—G. H. Bent, 10 broken; J. Bunton, Jr., 6; J. Pearce, 7; H. Johnson, 9; G. Badger, 8; H. E. Sheldon, 6; F. Badger, Jr., 7; T. Hollis, Jr., 7; J. Smith, 6. A shoot will take place on the same grounds on Decoration day, in which the whole club will participate.—Sunday Herald.

VERDICT. In the suit to recover for personal services, Miss Martha L. Clark against LaRoy Sanderland, the jury rendered a verdict of $450 for plaintiff.

Reply to "Many Females."

MR. EDITOR:—In reply to the request of your correspondent, "Many Females," I would say there are none so dull of comprehension, and blither, as those who will not see and hear; and when he or she intimates that I would in any manner attempt to cry down any honorable undertaking for the suppression of the liquor traffic, they make a serious mistake, and allude to something I did not mention. My article of the 10th, was aimed at some of our fanatical, would-be reformers, who instead of assisting the cause of temperance, or helping in any way the suppression of the liquor traffic, only use it as a cloak out of which to manufacture political capital, and have by their insane notions and hypocritical conduct only helped to increase it.

It is far from any intention of mine to be brought into any extended correspondence with "Many Females," but for a suggestion in relation to the propagation of "mice" of a more mature growth, I would suggest giving up the labor of catering to advance the interests of old rats, (political,) and by a manifestation of reason and common sense in your daily walk, make home attractions so binding that the young mice will not care to follow in the wake of a long-tailed rat, who "Should Satan cry, in guise of man, or pig, Try on his cloak, 't would be so big Or small, no christian would ever fail To wear within, Sir Devil's hoof or tail."

Facts are stubborn things, and any one with half an eye can see that the manner in which the temperance question has been agitated here in Quincy, for the past eight years, has not only increased the sale of liquors, but some of the social elements, which have been introduced in connection therewith, have been a curse in any civilized community.

On Monday last about 5 P. M., a little son of Mr. George Bestick, aged four years, fell from a window in the second story of his house, a distance of ninety feet, he struck fortunately upon his side. He is now doing as well as can be expected, but it is feared he may have injured his spine.

Sons of Temperance.

Prohibition Division, No. 9, Sons of Temperance, was visited at their hall on Granite street, on the evening of the 14th inst., by a delegation of members from Dorchester Division, No. 30, Milton Lower Mills. There has been quite an interest awakened between these Divisions, and an effort is now being made to unite the two fraternally, and make them seem as one. It is hoped that their united efforts will be crowned with success, and that the people will be awakened to the enormity of the crime and degradation of intemperance, and resolve to do all in their power to fight against this great evil.

The proprietors of the Boston Bay Steamboat Company have engaged as their agent for the season, Mr. M. M. Whelan, the popular advertising agent of the Boston Museum, and we congratulate them on securing the services of so popular and worthy a young man.—Their beautiful excursion steamer Stamford has been thoroughly repaired and refitted under her old and reliable Capt. Davidson's immediate supervision. She will run from Foster's wharf to Long Island and Lovell's Grove, North Weymouth, as in past seasons. The grove has also been put in excellent order, many attractions being added, and it will undoubtedly be a very popular place of resort for picnic parties, excursions, &c.—Boston Gazette.

WOMEN VOTERS. It may interest many ladies to know that under the law recently passed relative to election for members of the school committee, the qualifications required to make women eligible as voters, are substantially the same as are required of men, that is, they must have reached the age of twenty-one years or upwards, must have resided one year within the commonwealth, and six months in the town where they propose to cast the ballot. Any woman thus qualified may notify the assessors in writing, on or before the 15th day of September, of her desire to pay a poll tax, and to make oath to a statement of her real and personal estate, which being done and the taxes paid, her name will be registered among those of legal voters. Those who intend to exercise their franchise should be in time, and govern themselves accordingly.

THE POCASSET HORROR.

Letter from Mrs. Freeman.

What She Says of the Deed.

FAITH IN GOD WAS THE CAUSE.

Below we print a letter from Mrs. Freeman to relatives in Natick, concerning the Pocasset horror:—

BARNSTABLE, MASS., May 17, '79.

DEAR SISTERS:—We have received your letters. I had looked for one for a long time. I never thought it would find us here. Am glad to know you are all well. We are in need of nothing, but we thank you for your kind thoughts for our comfort. I have no doubt you will all come to be. You know how dearly we both loved our precious little one. We have tried for more than a year to live entirely devoted to God, and to the good of others. We had given up dress, the desire for money, and everything that was not pure in purpose. You would hardly have believed it was Charlie. He never was profane, has not drank since I knew him, and was one of the best of husbands and fathers; but now he commenced a life of prayer and faith in God, and I with him. He read his Bible every spare moment, and his whole life was spent in christian, earnest work for good, and his whole aim (not neglecting other duties) was to win souls to Christ, and seek himself eternal life. One trial of our faith came after another, and God blessed us very much for our trust in him. By and by, however, we were more and more of great and new trials. Charlie did not sleep nor eat, scarcely, for nearly two weeks. During this time of painful trial, he felt that God required him to have the faith of Abraham. You know what that was in regard to Isaac. He could not get away from it; the more he tried, the more it came home to him. At last he said to the Lord he would be willing to bear the test; he thought that would be all God would ask. That seemed to end it for that day. That night it came to him that he should be willing to give up his son; Oh! God alone knows how I suffered! But having such great faith in God to believe He would stop him just as He did Abraham—that it was only a trial of faith—knowing as I did Charlie's life and love, his fear to disobey God, and that he had Abraham's faith, I could not hinder him. But neither of us thought God would suffer her to be touched, any more than that the day would fall 16th inst. We thought God would see our faith, and give us some token of acceptance. We believed God would thunder from Sinai, before any harm should come to our darling; but when I found my precious Edie gone, oh! Father! how I felt! But comfort seemed to come again. Abraham believed God would raise Isaac, and so we felt that it was God's plan to take her so to raise her from the dead, and thus show His mighty power and love. We believed He would do this, in order to show the world that the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob still lives, and so wake up the frozen church of God to their duty to the church so much tried to the world that there is scarcely any difference between the two. We believed this was to be, and that Edie would yet go with Charlie to preach the gospel of the kingdom. What a power she would be! What glory to His cause! Elijah, Elisha, Christ and the Apostles! For particular, we believed that God did not now as then? We believed He would. But the time has now passed, and we are here. God knows we are innocent of any crime. Charlie still thinks God is going to manifest His power and glory, and himself be justified in the eyes of the world. God grant it may be so.

Oh, you cannot know my sorrow. It almost breaks my heart! My dear, dear Edie! Charlie is innocent, oh! he is, of any crime; but I am afraid I was a mistaken faith in God. Dear Lord, help us in our need.

HATTIE.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, MAY 24, 1879.

Worth Remembering.

A tablespoonful of black pepper will prevent gray or buff lines from spotting, if stirred into the first water.

To take out ink, immerse the spot in boiling hot tallow; when cool, wash out in soap suds, and the ink will have disappeared.

For burns or scalds, cover the place with baking soda, and tie up with a wet cloth; the pain is relieved at once, and the sore heals rapidly. Coal oil is also an excellent remedy for burns.

Remember that brooms that are dipped for a minute or two into a kettle of boiling suds, once or twice a week, will last much longer, and a carpet is not worn half as much by then.

Wings of turkeys are nice to dust furniture, but, best of all, to wash windows with, because the corners can be easily and perfectly cleaned by them, leaving no lint behind as when cloths are used. Use them to spread paste when papering walls there is nothing that does that work better.

To take out fruit stains, tie up cream of tartar in the spotted places, and put the article into cold water and boil it. Recent stains of fruit may be removed by holding the linen tightly stretched over a tub, and pouring hot water over the stain; do this before applying soap.

If on table linen, rub on it common table salt before it has time to dry. The salt will keep it damp till the cloth is washed, when the stain will disappear.

Cheap Matrimony.

Yesterday forenoon, while a Detroit justice of the peace sat warming his feet by the stove, and his nose by a cigar, a stranger entered and inquired:

"Judge, how much will you charge me to read over about fifteen lines of printed matter from a book I have?"

"Why, can't you read them?" replied his honor.

"I can, but I want to hear how the lines sound when read aloud. I'll give you a quarter to read them to me."

"All right," replied the justice; "I can't earn two shillings any quicker."

A woman opened the door at that moment and the stranger put down the book on the desk clasped her hands and said:

"Begin at the pencil mark there and read slowly."

His honor's chin dropped exactly thirteen inches by dry measure as he saw that the reading matter was the usual form of marriage, but he didn't back down from his word. It was the cheapest marriage he ever attended and he didn't half enjoy the chuckles of the bride and groom as they went out.—Detroit Free Press.

A ROBIN'S NEST. A few weeks ago, a Richmond, Va., farmer had occasion to leave a two-quart basin full of large board nails at the end of a hollow tree, some four feet from the ground. A day or two ago the nails were wanted, and on going after them, every one was found on the ground, and a robin's nest in the basin with three eggs in it.

Spilkens always insists on spelling needle, n-e-i-d-l-e. He says every needle should have an eye in it. Sew!

"It's only a spring opening, ma," explained that awful boy, as he exhibited his torn trousers after a leap over the picket fence.

"My dear," said a grocer, "we just got converted and can't sell milk on Sunday; but if you happen to want a little just come in the back way."

A Western paper, in describing an accident recently, says, with much candor, "Dr. Jones was called, and under his prompt and skillful treatment the young man died on Wednesday night."

A person out West is offering for sale grass seed, gathered from the path of rectitude. A religious contemporary fears that the path must be sadly overgrown with grass, as it is so little travelled nowadays.

"Charlie," said Grandma reprovingly, "your portion will be in the burning lake at last if you go on telling so many stories." "Oh! no, Grandma, I couldn't stand it." "But you will be made to stand it, my boy." "Oh! well, Grandma, if I can only stand it, it's all right."

A few days since an unlucky drunkard stood up before his Honor at the police court, and his Honor said, in his slow solemn way, "I'll give you $10 or thirty days." "Well, I'll take the $10, 'Squire," said the inebriate, "if it's all the same to you."

This is the way a citizen of Denver advertises for a lost calf:—"Rund away 1 Red and vite caf. His to be hint leg was plak he vas a she caf. Enipotti vat prings him pak pairs 5 tollars. Jacob Zudderling, Clear Creek tree miles behind the pridge."

At a New Bedford church, while the clergyman was waxing eloquent in his Easter address, a minute youngster, to whom the exercises had become rather wearisome, startled the persons in the vicinity of his seat by suddenly exclaiming, "O, div us a west."

Josh Billings says, "Most men concede that it looks foolish to see a boy dragging a heavy sled up hill for the 'deetin' pleasure of riding down again. But it appears to me that boy is a sage by the side of a young man who works hard all the week, and drinks up his wages on Saturday night."

A schoolmistress, taking down the names and ages of her pupils and the names of their parents, at the beginning of the term, asked one little fellow what the name of his father was. "Oh, you need not take down his name he's too old to go to school to a woman," was the reply.

The time fast approacheth when that poetical bird, the crow demurely arrayed in his sable habiliments, quietly percheth himself on the bending bough of some blossoming apple tree, and as he carefully watcheth the patient farmer as he droppeth the corn into the freshly furrowed earth, sayeth to himself, "What shall the harvest be?"

She stepped into the car, radiant with youth, and looking cool and bright in her flower-trimmed hat and speckless suit of linen. Four young men immediately offered her their seats. She accepted one, and instantly gave it to a poor, wan old woman, who had been standing for ten blocks. Whereupon the young men did not know whether to get up again or not, and tried their best not to look foolish.

"A gentleman surnamed the American Flagg," says the San Francisco News-Letter, "who is stopping at the Palace Hotel, was the other day the victim of a fearful outrage. It seems this gentleman, who is tall, commonly wears the highest collars ever seen in Frisco. He received a note from a firm of bill-stickers, asking if he did not wish to let out the backs of those articles for advertising."

"No man ever saw the sun rise—no man ever will see the sun rise!" was the astonishing remark of a lecturer on astronomy. "Why not?" called out an auditor. "Because it takes eight minutes for light to come from the sun to the earth, and so the sun is always up eight minutes before you see it," was the reply. "But suppose you look eight minutes ahead of time?" queried the auditor. The astronomer didn't answer.

UNTIMELY DEATH. Hattie Goodspeed, a charming, golden-haired little daughter of William H. Goodspeed, of East Somerville, aged eleven, has met a sudden death by being hit with a stone. She went out to play on Saturday afternoon last, to the Nunnery Grounds, with her sister, and meeting several young friends, a merry game was begun. There were also in the neighborhood several boys, passing ball, two of whom were Edward Reardon and Thomas Murphy. The ball chanced to go by one of the catchers and rolled down the hill where the girls were. One of the latter picked up the ball and playfully refused to give it up when the boys demanded it. The boys thereupon picked up stones and began to throw them, and the girls turned and ran. The boys followed them with a shower of large stones, and Hattie fell to the ground, being struck upon the temple with one of the heaviest missiles. The young assailants immediately took to their heels, and the frightened girls bore the victim of their assault swooning to her home. Dr. Hanscom was sent for, and on making an examination found a bunch over her temple about the size of a hen's egg. The doctor gave it as his opinion that she would recover. The girl, however, grew worse, and had several spells of vomiting, but, to the time of her death, her mind was perfectly clear and she was able to talk rationally at times. At half-past ten o'clock on Sunday evening she grew very low, and was taken with spasms, and about an hour later she died.

Murphy and Reardon have been arrested for murder.

WAX PRICES. A record kept in Raleigh, N. C., in the closing Confederate days of February, 1865, shows that apples were $8 per dozen, bacon $7 to $9 pound, beef $2.50 per pound, butter $10 per pound, corn $30 per bushel, coffee $40 per pound, eggs $4 per dozen, flour $475 to $525 per barrel, sugar $17.50 to $20 per pound, syrup $25 per gallon, sheeting (4.4) $36 per yard, salt $75 to $100 per bushel, calico $15 per yard, wood $85 to $100 per cord.

CHEAP EDITIONS. The American Bible Society, New York, have sent us specimen copies of bible and testament which they are offering for sale at the low price of twenty-five cents for bibles and five cents for testaments. The Society does not seek profit, but only desires to receive the return of the cost of publication. The books are neatly bound and it seems almost impossible that they could be sold at such prices.

The commodious steamer Stanford, which will be again placed on the route between Boston and Lovell's Grove, Quincy Point, about the 1st of June, is being thoroughly overhauled, repainted and refitted, under the direct supervision of Captain Davidson, who has been long and favorably known to the public. The groves have also been put in excellent condition for picnic parties, and a good season is anticipated.

The Portland Transcript tells of an old farmer who, having eaten an oyster stew for the first time, said: "I like the soup pretty well, but I didn't like them polly-wogs." This recalls the story of the Hoosier who lunched with General Jackson, and had, among other things, champagne and olives. "General," he said, slapping the old hero on the back, "I like your cider, but — your pickles."

Gen. Butler offers 20,000 acres of land in Wisconsin to the negroes fleeing from the South, to be divided up into small farms, and Bob Ingersoll will lecture on the exodus to raise money to help the colored people to accept the offer. A New Haven, Conn., lady's pet dog died last week. Her attachment was so great that she secured a nice little coffin, covered with flowers, and had quite an elaborate funeral sermon.

GOLD AND SILVER. Edwin A. Perley of Lebanon, New Hampshire, has recently discovered a gold and silver mine on his farm. Operations have already commenced and considerable excitement prevails. Experienced miners are trying to negotiate for the ownership.

The Truth Never Dies.

Ladies and Gentlemen:—We have a great work to perform, and it is high time that we are at work. When I pass through our streets and see the youth growing up so weakly, I ask myself what will the harvest be. God holds you and I responsible for what our children are,—do we realize it. I think when I meet a youth in the street, I can tell pretty well whether or no the parent has done his duty towards his child. If he has you will not hear the little child say to any one that has grown gray,—“Old man, how are you?” But you will see him make his bow. Reverence should be taught first of all that is taught in our schools. We may be sure if children do not reverence their parents, nor the people they meet in the streets, they will not reverence their God. Hence they will stand ready to lead astray, those that are just making their appearance. Parents take this advice from a friend.—Keep your boys at home nights, where you can watch them. Don't let them congregate in our stores, or on the streets. Young man and middle aged, be careful what language you use before the youth, for you stand responsible for the influence you have over these young minds.

A TRUE FRIEND.

Oldest and Coldest Town.
According to Humboldt the oldest town in the world is Jakutsk, 5,000 inhabitants, in Eastern Siberia. It is not only the oldest, but probably, also, the coldest. The ground remains always frozen to the depth of 300 feet, except in midsummer, when it thaws three feet at the surface. The mean temperature for the year is 13.7 degrees F. For ten days in August the thermometer goes as high as 85 degrees. From November to February the temperature remains between 42 degrees and 68 degrees below zero. The river Lena remains frozen for nine months of the year.

WASHINGTON, May 19. The Senate to-day received a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury in response to a resolution, showing that the amount of the direct tax due and uncollected from the eleven States which participated in the late rebellion aggregate $2,275,104, and that the balances due from all other States and Territories amount to $455,228. The principal items forming this latter total are $207,685 for Wisconsin; $162,648 for New Mexico; $65,382 for Kansas; $35,141 for Oregon, and $26,582 for Utah.

The Animated Frying-pan.

In Ireland, a warming-pan is called a friar. Not many years ago an unsophisticated girl took service in a hotel. Poor thing—she had never heard of a warming-pan in her life, though she regularly confessed to a friar once a year.

It happened on a cold, drizzly night that a priest took lodging at the inn. He had travelled far, and being weary, retired at an early hour.

Soon after, the mistress of the house called the servant girl.

"Betty, put the friar into No. 6."

Up went Betty to the poor priest.

"Your reverence must go to No. 6."

There is no help for it, and the poor priest arose, donned a dressing-gown, and went into No. 6.

In about fifteen minutes the mistress called to Betty:

"Put the friar into No. 4."

Betty said something about disturbing his reverence, which her mistress did not understand.

So she told the girl in a sharp voice to do as she was directed, and she would always do right. Up went Betty, and the unhappy priest, despite his angry protestations, was obliged to turn out of No. 6, and get into No. 4.

But a little time elapsed ere the girl was told to put the friar into No. 8, and the poor priest thinking everybody was mad in the house, and resolving to quit the next morning, crept into the damp sheets of No. 8. But he was to enjoy no peace there. Betty was again ordered to put the friar into No. 3, and with tears in her eyes obeyed.

In about an hour the lady concluded to go to bed herself, and the friar was ordered into her room.

Wondering what it all meant, Betty roused the priest, and told him he must go into No. 11. The monk crossed himself, counted his beads, and went into No. 11.

It so happened that the husband of the landlady was troubled with the green-eyed monster. Going up to bed, therefore, before his wife, his suspicions were confirmed by seeing between his own sheets a man sound asleep.

To rouse the sleeper and kick him into the street, was the work of a moment, nor was the mistake explained until next day, when the priest informed the inn-keeper what outrages had been committed upon him, and he learned to his amazement that he had been serving the whole night as a warming-pan.

Printers and Printing.

Many who condescend to illustrate this dark world with the fire of their genius through the columns of a newspaper, little think of the lot of the printer, who sits up at midnight to correct their false grammar and orthography and worse punctuation. We have seen the arguments of lawyers, in high repute as scholars, sent to the printer in their own handwriting, many words—especially technical and foreign terms—abbreviated, words misspelled and few or no points, and these few, if any, certainly in the wrong places. We have seen the sermons of eminent "divines" sent to the press without points or capitals to designate the division of sentence; also the letters of the political and scientific correspondents. Suppose all these had been so printed—the printer would have been treated with scorn and contempt. No one would have believed that such gross and palpable faults were owing to the ignorance or carelessness of the author; and no one but the practical printer knows how many hours the compositor, and after him the proof-reader, is compelled to spend reducing to readable condition, manuscript that often writers themselves would be puzzled to read.—Exchange.

Liabilities for Newspapers.

The Courts have decided concerning the liabilities of persons taking newspapers:—

First—That any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office or letter-carrier, whether directed to his name, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the pay.

Second—If a person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount whether it is taken from the office or not.

The Quincy Patriot.

With Supplement.

SATURDAY, MAY 31, 1879.

Short communications and items of news earnestly solicited from friends and patrons.

Anonymous communications are not published.

Memorial Day.

Once more with the beautiful flowers of early summer, has come the day hallowed to the memory of the loyal dead. In the cemeteries of every town and city in our State can be seen the little flags, like sentinels keeping guard over the graves of the brave heroes, who, when their country called, left home and all they loved to stand by the old flag.

The order of exercises for the day's proceedings, by Paul Revere Post of this town, will begin by the assembling of the Post at Lyceum Hall, at 7.30 in the morning, when a detachment under command of comrade S. B. Turner will visit the graves at Mount Wollaston Cemetery, while another detachment under comrade E. A. Spear will visit the Soldiers' Home and Old Cemetery, and decorate the graves in those places.

At 10.30 the Post under command of comrade Charles H. Porter, will march to West Quincy, and there place the tributes of their respect on the graves in that part of the town.

At 12.30 a collation will be served at Lyceum Hall. At 1.30 a procession will form in front of the Town Hall, consisting of the Post, invited guests and citizens, and will march to Mount Wollaston Cemetery, where with appropriate ceremonies the monument will be decorated.

At 3.30 an oration will be delivered at the Town Hall by Rev. E. A. Perry. The music for the day will be by the Band. In the evening a dramatic entertainment will be given by the Post in aid of its relief fund.

At eight o'clock this morning, a grand seven-mile race, around the Unitarian Church, will take place; open to Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth pedestrians. Three prizes, consisting of a silver watch, a bosom pin and a meerschaum pipe, are to be given to the successful competitors, of whom a dozen or more have entered.

G. A. R. Entertainment.

In every age of the world the soldiers' deeds have been remembered, the people believing that the ceremonies which were performed in the commemorative services had a good effect on the national mind, and as those in the past, honored their brave, so should we in our own memorial day prize more highly than we have done in the past the great blessings we enjoy. That day ought to remind us of the trials through which others passed for our good. They ought above all to open our hearts in sympathy to those who last farewells were spoken as they started to war.

It will be seen by the advertisement that Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R., will give an entertainment in the Town Hall this (Friday) evening, for the benefit of the Charity Fund of the Post. Aside from the real merits of the play, which is one of the most amusing and entertaining ever given in Boston, the Post certainly is justified in asking of our citizens who have more than once manifested their interest in the work of charity as done by this Post, that their pocket-books be opened in order to assist in the work, and to make it of great interest.

The services of a dramatic club has been secured, and Byron's favorite comedy, in three acts, entitled "Our Boys" will be given by gifted artists. All who enjoy a hearty laugh should not fail to be present. The play is a good lesson that will touch many hearts.

Paul Revere Post has done a noble work for charity in the past, and the sufferings and want of many have been relieved by their kindness. The Charity Fund is getting low, and in order that it may be of sufficient size to enable them to complete their work in the future, as well as in the past, this entertainment is to be given.

The members of the G. A. R. say to the citizens of Quincy, in asking for their support on this occasion, "We see the manhood men shattered in health, without employment, and often without power to work, often discouraged, their old business gone, their lives weary; and we have pledged ourselves that so far as in our power lies, they shall have the cheering word, the hearty hand, the open purse. We see women and children who had comfortable support before the head of the home was laid under the sod, now troubled for their daily food, and we have solemnly said, that to the extent of our means, no widow or orphan of a dead soldier shall lack bread for her hunger, shoes for her feet, or fire in her home. Not for ourselves alone do we say this. We say it in the name of a generous people who never fail to answer to our calls when they know the want and find the channel through which to help. We say it for this community which stands ready to give freely whenever we show them the hungry and the cold."

What stronger appeal to our feelings and our pocket-books can be made than this. Let the bill be filled to repletion and show to the veterans that you have an interest in them and in their God-given work.

Quincy Yacht Club.

The opening regatta of this Club took place off the Pine Point House, on Saturday last. The course for the first and second classes was from the Judges' Yacht off Pine Point House, passing between Sheep and Grape Islands, to red buoy between Bunkin Island and Downer Landing, leaving it on the port; thence, leaving Bunkin Island on the starboard, to red buoy off Hull, leaving it on the port; thence, leaving Sheep Island on the port, to the Judges' Yacht, passing between it and a flag-buoy.

Third class, - From the Judges' Yacht, leaving Bunkin Island on the port, and Pig Rocks Beacon on the starboard, to Wreck Buoy, leaving it on the port; thence, leaving Pig Rocks Beacon on the port, and Racon Island on the starboard to the Judges' Yacht, passing between it and a flag-buoy.

In the first class but two yachts started, the Waif, Capt. A. J. Clark, and the Folly, Capt. J. H. Sheppard, and was won by the Waif. In the second class, six yachts started, the Thistle, Capt. Litchfield, winning the first prize, and the Elf, Capt. Barker, the second.

In the third class, seven yachts started. The first prize was easily and handsomely captured by the little Rocket, Capt. Bass. The Rocket slowly and steadily increased the distance between her and the others, and soon demonstrated her superior sailing qualities over her competitors. The Rocket was beautifully handled during the race, and while it spoke well for her superior sailing qualities, it showed excellent seamanship in her management; as in fact, all the yachts were well managed, and reflected great credit on those in command.

Second prize was captured by the Imp, Capt. George C. Adams. While the race was in progress, Capt. Kelly took the Judges and reporters down the river in his new yacht Gussie; as the wind was quite fresh, it was not a very dry trip. The first prizes consisted of marine clocks, and the second prizes of handsome compass watch-chains. They were awarded to the first and second yachts respectively in the following summary:-

Old Braintree and Quincy.

We have received a History of Old Braintree and Quincy, with a sketch of Randolph and Holbrook, by William S. Pattee, M. D., and bears the imprint of Green & Prescott of Quincy. The work has been prepared under peculiar difficulty, and in typography and illustration it does not compare favorably with some of the recently published town histories; but it represents the fruit of a good deal of patient, intelligent and unselfish labor, and the method of arrangement - by topics - has obvious advantages. The work satisfies a want which has long been felt by the citizens of the towns whose history is here told. It contains a large amount of personal and local information, and leaves untouched no important phase of the subject. It is moreover so fully and faithfully indexed as to be very convenient for reference. The author gives his manuscript to the town of Quincy, and the book is sold for the bare cost of printing and binding.

DISTRICT COURT. E. Granville Pratt, Esq., has been appointed by Governor Talbot, as one of the associate justices of this Court, to fill a vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Solomon J. Beale, Esq., of Cohasset.

The first case before Judge Pratt came up on Wednesday morning. Thomas Ryan and Thos. Doran, two pugilists of East Weymouth, created quite a row, and were arrested for disturbing the peace.

To make the case interesting and all the facts in the case, James E. Threll, Esq., and A. W. Hayes, Esq., volunteered their services for the defendants, and J. B. Chaffin Esq., for the Government. After hearing the evidence there were so many nice points brought forward by the able counsels that Judge Pratt, decided to continue the case one day before giving his decision. After stopping in the lock-up one day they were discharged.

Charles Ahlf, of Braintree, for being drunk. Case continued until June 30th.

WEST DEEDHAM. The parsonage of the old "Clapham Tree" Unitarian Church at West Deedham was burned at 7 o'clock on Monday morning last. The pastor, Rev. Edward Crowninshield, lost all his furniture and household effects, besides $300 in money which he was unable to save, so rapid was the spread of the fire. His goods were packed ready for removal to Belfast, Me., where he has accepted a call. The loss on house and contents exceeds $3000.

Our Honored Dead.

The following is a list of the soldiers and sailors buried in the cemeteries in this town. It is as complete as Paul Revere Post has been able to gather the facts. It is hoped that all persons knowing of a grave of a soldier or sailor not in this list will take the trouble to inform the Post; or if any one knows of any fact or date connected with this list that is incorrect or incomplete they would give such information. The list, as it is, contains 164 names, and there are soldiers and sailors to the number of 41, of whom the Post have no particulars. Will their friends respond to this urgent call.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, MAY 31, 1879.

WEYMOUTH SAVINGS BANK. The Savings Bank Commissioners have issued an order restricting the payments of the Weymouth Savings Bank to its depositors to ten per cent. for each six months. The bank has considerable of an amount of its deposits invested in property that is not at present productive, and for some time past it has taken the benefit of its by-laws, which required notice for withdrawals. At its last annual report the bank had $831,963.70 on deposit, divided among 2335 depositors. The withdrawals the previous year amounted to $112,940.51, and the deposits in the same period $17,431.23.

THE CHINESE METHOD. The transmission of Chinese treasure is a unique process, thus described in the Foochow, (China) Herald:—"Bullion is conveyed to Peking in sheaths, which are nothing more than rounded logs about three feet in length and circumference. Each log contains 3,000 tins or $5,000, and is split into two parts, which are hollowed out for the silver. Of course these halves fit most accurately together and cannot possibly be tampered with. The chink is pasted around with a fine strong paper and this is carefully stamped. The logs are then bound with iron clamps and are ready for the roughest usage."

A lady of Rocky Hill, Conn., recently found in the yard of her residence a copper coin of the following description:—"On the face side, at the top, a rising sun, in the centre a cap of Liberty, surrounded by a circle on which were inscribed the words of the day from 1 to XII., around the circle thirteen small stars, at the bottom in small caps the words, "Mind your business," at the right side 1777 in figures, on the left side the letters "F. u. g. i. o." The reverse side is surrounded by a twisted chain, in the centre a small circle with the words "United States," and inside this the words, "We are one," in small caps. The edges are finely milled, like the present twenty-five cent piece; it is about the size of an old copper cent.

The conductors, baggage masters, brakemen and station men of the Old Colony Railroad are hereafter to wear uniform suits while on duty. The material is to be the best quality of Middlesex police cloth, with brass buttons bearing the words "Old Colony." The conductors will wear frock coats, and the other uniformed employees double-breasted sack coats. The costume will be completed by the regulation caps. It is expected that the uniforms will be finished in about three weeks by the contractors. The Railroad Company will bear a portion of the expense of the new suits.

At St. Johnsbury, Vt., an insect crawled into Mason Hall's ear and commenced an active foraging campaign. His operations were terribly painful to Mr. Hall, who ran hastily to Dr. Brown's house, arriving with his hand over his ear and the blood trickling down through his fingers. Dr. Brown, having no tools at hand, took a gold toothpick and a lead pencil, crowded the ear open, and saw the tail of some animal, speared it, and drew out a bug three-quarters of an inch long, very slim, and of a peculiar kind which the doctor had never seen before.

The Woonsocket, R. I., Patriot publishes the following:—"A woman and her son have lately died in Northbridge from what physicians call 'cider tremors,' and it is thought the woman's husband will not survive long, being ill with the same disease. It is said that since last fall this family have drunk fifty-two barrels of cider. There are one son and a relative in the family besides the persons mentioned. The doctors say the blood of these people is entirely changed to an acid liquid by the use of cider."

A somewhat remarkable instance in the family of Lyman G. Camp, of Montpelier, Vt., who died the other day, is worthy of mention. He had been married over sixty years. The family consisted of parents and eight children, no death until this having occurred in the family.

A suit of clothes worn by a gentleman of Salem, at the Centennial exhibition, in Philadelphia, in 1876, has been placed in a tin box, carefully sealed, and deposited with the Essex Institute. The box is to be opened in 1976.

Many years ago, Dean Stanley is said to have remarked to his wife that the people had that morning gazed intently at him while he preached his morning service. "How could they help it, my dear," she replied, "when one of your gloves was on the top of your head all the time?" The good dean makes no gestures while he preaches, and stands quite still, so that the glove, which, it seems, had fallen from his hat to his head, remained there during the entire discourse.

A letter bearing the following direction was received at the post office in Bangor, Me.:—"To go to Toome Bridge, Antrim Co., parish of Dunlune Direct to A young tradesman Hugh Fegan by name, Money Glass is the town where he works at his trade, so pass me along as my passage is paid—Ireland."

At Nantasket, in the vicinity of the Atlantic House, on the rocks, there are several private cottages in course of erection, and on the Jerusalem road many of the cottagers are already occupying their houses for the season. At the Strawberry Hill end of the beach, building is quite brisk.

A mechanic at Reading, Pa., has invented a velocipede, the speed of which is calculated at a mile in two minutes. It has four wheels, each four feet nine inches in diameter, to make thirty-six feet each revolution.

An exchange informs us that the horse-radish root will afford almost instantaneous relief in most obstinate cases of hoarseness. This is a simple remedy to try, and surely can do no harm.

A Miss Stevens, of Walton, Delaware county, N. Y., died recently of toothache. Although this is a rare occurrence, it is an undisputed case of death resulting from an excruciating toothache.

A Peabody, (Mass.) farmer says that the refuse of kerosene, which can be bought at the factories, is sure death to the canker worms, and does not hurt the trees.

The birth of a daughter to the Princess Charlotte of Prussia makes Queen Victoria a great-grandmother and the Emperor William a great-grandfather.

The production of alcohol in the first nine months of the present fiscal year has reached twelve million gallons.

Budget of Fun.

A tailor who was asked if the close of the year made him melancholy, said yes, until they were settled for.

That boy will make his mark in the world some day," said a parent of his dull child. So he did. He never learned to write.

"Good morning, Mr. Brown, you're first at last; you used to be behind before, but I notice you have been getting early of late."

Now, boys, what's the gender of egg? Lad (whose mother keeps chickens)—Please, sir, you can't tell till it's hatched.

Josh Billings says there are more people cross-eyed in the tongue than in the eyes; they talk one way while they are thinking the other.

An old lady being asked to subscribe to a newspaper, declined on the ground that when she wanted news she manufactured it herself.

There is many a man strong enough to hold a bull by the horns, and yet not strong enough to hold his own tongue.

By coating the top of the lower crust of pies with the white of an egg, it will absorb no moisture from the fruit or custard, and will come out of the oven crisp and will remain so.

A little Parisian mendicant follows a gentleman:—"Monsieur, give me just a penny—I'm an orphan by birth!" The definition was worth ten centimes to her.

"You are nothing but a demagogue," said a tipsy fellow to Tom Marshall, who promptly paid him back: "Put a wisp of straw around you, and you will be nothing but a demijohn."

A Michigan girl coaxed her lover to take her carriage-riding, and the horse ran away and killed her. Showing this paragraph to the girls will be thousands of dollars in the pockets of our young men.

"Are you building air castles in Spain, Mr. Jones?" said a landlady to a boarder, who was thoughtfully regarding his coffee-cup. "No, madam; only looking over my grounds in Java," replied Jones.

There was an ingenious amount of devotion implied in the remark of a love-sick millionaire when the object of his affections became ecstatic over the beauty of the evening star. "Oh, do not praise it like that!" he cried; "I can not get it for you."

"What!" said a young lady to a sister companion, "you are not going to marry that tall, lean, slender, consumptive-stricken fellow, are you?" "Yes, she is," volunteered the young lady's little brother, looking up from his broken cart wheel; "she's going to marry him and use him for a carpet-stretcher." The boy and cart wheel passed out through the same door.

Two old Texas rangers, who had just helped bury a neighbor, were talking about religion, and one asked the other how pious he thought it was possible for a man to get in this world, if he was in real earnest. "Wa'al," said the other, reflectively, "I think of a man gets so 't he can swop steers or trade horses without lyin', 'at he'd better pull out for the better land afore he has a relapse."

Dr. Glynn, whose name is still remembered in Cambridge, being one day in attendance on a lady in the quality of her physician, took the liberty of lecturing her on the impropriety of eating cucumbers, of which she was immoderately fond, and gave her the following receipt for dressing them. "Peel the cucumber," said the doctor, "with great care; then cut it into very thin slices, pepper and salt it well, and then—throw it away."

"What," the young man asked the young woman who was waiting for him to ask for his hat—"what do I put you in mind of?" "A French clock," she said, softly. And pretty soon he arose and went on his way. The next morning he called upon an eminent horologist and asked him what was the distinguishing trait of a French clock. The horologist said, "Why, it never goes." And the young man was sorely cast down, and he grieved, and told no man of his hurt.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, MAY 31, 1879.

A writer, who appears to be well informed, has made the statement that there are within a radius of twenty miles from the Boston Public Library, and including that collection, at least 400,000 volumes in the dozen or twenty libraries which are open to the people without charge of any kind; and that in the libraries of colleges, societies, clubs, Sunday schools and parishes, within the same area, are also 600,000 volumes, accessible to the people upon easy conditions. Thus a population of five or six hundred thousand men, women and children, filling Boston and the outlying towns, are in possession of libraries which contain a million books. That we repeat, is an achievement in civilization which Boston has a palpable right to be proud of.

A NOVEL IDEA. In Bombay when you pay your fare in a street-car you receive a ticket that entitles you to a chance in a lottery which is drawn every month. An American gentleman writing from India expresses the opinion that it beats all the bell-punches and passenger-registers that ever were invented. Possibly the managers of our street-car lines and elevated roads, who are so solicitous about the moral welfare of their employees, can devise some similar and equally effective expedient.

At a town meeting in Wakefield on May 19th, 200 voted in favor of granting liquor licenses and 247 against.

This question had already been voted on at two previous meetings and by hand ballot decided in favor of the temperance party, but at this meeting both advocates and opponents of license rallied in force, and notwithstanding the severe rain the hall was filled and the galleries occupied by numerous ladies.

Law has laid its hand at last upon that genial honest creature who has just come back from the West from a cattle trade, and would like to while away the monotony of railroad travel with a little game of cards. Both houses of the Legislature have now passed a bill which gives police powers to conductors and authorizes the arrest of persons who are gambling, or enticing others to gamble in railroad cars.

In Stanstead, Canada, a man sold ten-cent packages, "warranted sure death to potato bugs; no risk of poisoning animals as with Paris green." The packages were not to be opened until time to use them. One victim having three, opened one and found two square blocks of wood, on one of which was written: "Place the bug on this block and press firmly with the other."

James Webb, Jr., of Portland, working before the war for $5.50 per week, saved regularly $1 per week of that sum. Five years ago he bought a shoe shop and tools with $150 of his earnings. He is now making 20,000 pairs of ladies' shoes per year.

The orange tree is now successfully cultivated over an area in California not less than 400 miles long by 120 miles broad—that is, on 48,000 square miles of territory the orange can be cultivated without encountering any serious climate obstacles.

Kansas judges are either very generous or else they have little dignity. One of them was called "Old Skillet-legs" by a lawyer, and he only imposed a fine of seven shillings for the contempt of court.

Twenty-one freshmen were lately suspended from an English college because a professor couldn't find out who placed a ten-ounce tack in his chair. He, however, knew all about who sat down on it.

The postmaster of Waldoboro, Me., has received from the auditor at Washington a statement of his postal accounts for three years, showing an error of one cent. He has been directed to credit himself with that amount.

A Waterbury, (Conn.) plumber, while doing a job which required him to lie upon his back, fell asleep and snoozed three hours, which time was included in the bill which he afterward presented.

The Golden Rule says the License law has been used in Boston as a machine to grind out fees and afford immunity and monopoly to the legalized liquor traffic.

[From the Sunday Herald.]
CIVIL DAMAGE.

What Henry H. Faxon has to say about the effect of the New Bill.

To the Editors of the Herald:—I noticed a communication in the SUNDAY HERALD of the 18th inst., intimating that I had "overshot the mark in gaining the passage of the civil damage bill." By the way landlords who want to let their buildings for the liquor business, and rum-sellers, how about its passage. I should say the shot hit with telling effect in their vital parts. The idea that prohibiting dram-selling will prove detrimental to the real estate interest as a whole is absurd. There is no doubt that owners of corner stores who sympathize with rum-sellers and seek to let their estates at a high price, may add a few dollars to their earthly possessions; but how is it with those who let houses and tenements? More than three-quarters of the losses that the writer has sustained during the last ten years, from rents and other business, have been caused, directly or indirectly, by liquor sold in dram shops. A few years ago a party wished to hire a building wherein I expected he would sell liquor. My answer to him was: "I have a large number of tenants in Quincy, and even if I were not a temperance man, knowing what I do of the evil effects of intoxicating liquors, I would not let you the estate; you would sell rum to some of my other tenants, and I should lose by them three times as much as the amount you would pay me." In my recent large purchase of real estate in Chelsea, I found several families occupying the premises who did not pay their rent, and who were suffering from extreme poverty. In every case their poverty was traceable to the use of intoxicating liquors. It is so in most cases. Every dollar's worth of liquor sold as a beverage causes a loss of ten times that amount to the general public. No city, or town, or inhabitants thereof, will be the gainers by enriching a landlord, or by licensing a rum-seller to swell the public coffers for a small fee, that he may become rich, and thereby make his customers drunkards, paupers and criminals, to be cared for and tried at the public expense. The road to progress reminds me of the cases of some members of reform clubs, who make loud supplications to the Divine Being to strengthen their brother members and keep them from temptation, and then go to the polls on election day and vote for officials who they know will place the tempting dram-shop in the way to break the good resolutions of every reformed man. In other communications that have appeared in your widely-circulated journal I have noticed that the law has made some religious associations, which leased a portion of their premises for genteel grocery dram-shops, squirm. To all such associations, or members thereof, I will say, that if they choose to praise and serve God, apparently, Sunday, and the devil week days on other portions of their premises by letting them to rum-sellers, the sins committed must rest upon their own shoulders. One thing is certain, if they wish to have their accounts balance at the end of the year, they have got to run ten churches to every dram-shop; for no one will undertake to say that one rum-shop will not destroy more souls than ten churches run by such associations can build up.

HENRY H. FAXON.
Quincy, May 24, 1879.

A former paragrapher has settled in Toledo as a teacher of writing. One of his scholars said to him the other day: "Which is the proper way to make K, Mr.—?"

The ruling passion was strong in the teacher, and he replied: "Make K while the sun shines."

"Dennis, darling, what is it you're doin'?"

"Whist, Biddy, I'm tryin' an experiment."

"Murder, what is it?"

"What is it do you say? Why, it's giving hot water to the chickens, so that they may lay boiled eggs."

"What would you do if a girl kissed you?" said one ten-year-old urchin to another, as they discussed the latest society news.

"What would I do? I'd kiss her back."

"What would you do?"

"Kiss her mouth," was the reply.

As a lawyer was arguing his case, the judge interrupted him saying: "The court is against you on that point."

"Very well," responded the lawyer,

"I do not rest my case on that point alone; I have several others equally conclusive."

Grape Juice and Wine
FOR SALE.
I FIND that after two to three years of age, my grape juice produces a very excellent wine, and if you are well and wish to keep a little longer, I would like to dispose of a part of it. I have made it for over 10,000 feet of land, and I have not yet heard of any of it being better higher or any lower than upright people. But I think they don't know it to do either good or harm. I presume I use none myself in one day than all members of a church use in a month. If you are sick and wish to get well, take some grape juice. It will do you good. I have made a little grape juice and save the expense of a bottle of wine. I have made it for over 10,000 feet of land, and I have not yet heard of any of it being better higher or any lower than upright people. But I think they don't know it to do either good or harm. Poetry.

Thoughts.

There is no spot on earth so fair
That sorrow will not enter there,
No morn so clear, no noon so bright,
As not to sink to ever and night.

Each smile of joyous happiness
That comes our way of life to bless,
Will have its way, its pang of pain,
Surely as sunshine follows rain.

Then, while 'tis clear, enjoy the day,
And bless each cheering, sunny ray
That smiles on us with ruddy glow
And glides our path or life below.

For life is gift and thin veneer,
And naught is pure and solid here,
Even joy and grief and fancies fond
Are shadows thrown from worlds beyond.

There shall we enter life indeed,
From earthly cares and sorrows freed,
Where all, like virgin gold, are pure
And happiness is ever sure.

Home Stock Farm.

For a model stock farm, commend your friends to that presided over by A. W. Moulton and owned by Col. Henry S. Russell, at Milton. The buildings in themselves are models of neatness, and their internal arrangements could not have been better fitted for accommodation. Pretty painted in red, there is a house and appurtenances, and a barn (as they call nowadays) big enough to shelter more than one hundred horses. And it is a barn, too. Many people in Boston fare less sumptuously in comparison than do the equine dwellers at Home Farm, and nobody in Boston occupies apartments better ventilated or more cleanly kept. One could almost pull a white handkerchief across the floor without danger of getting it smooched, and the clear, pure air continually circulating through the building makes a man feel better in spite of himself.

Every horse at Home Farm has a window in his room, from which he can look out upon a beautiful landscape. Every room at Home Farm, to use the conventional hotel phrase, is "well ventilated, high-studded and commodious." The floors are covered with two feet of clean straw, and the animals stand loose, to go about as they desire within their circumscribed limits. There is plenty of hay and water always within reach, and the utmost attention is paid by Mr. Moulton and his assistants to the wants of guests. Home Farm stable is built something like the letter T. At the left of the horizontal line on one side, and at the right of it on the other, and at both sides of the perpendicular mark are BOX STALLS (more like spacious rooms on the first floor, in which stock as is not out of doors is kept. The stallions occupy the first division. Most prominent among them are, Indianapolis, eleven years old.

It is not intended here to catalogue Home Farm stock, for the number of horses actually cared for now reaches 83. No one pays more attention to the proper development of blooded stock than does Col. Henry S. Russell, and his farm is equipped with every facility for such development. It stands to-day the model stock farm of New England.

Preparing the Soil for Roses.

Roses will grow with but little cultivation, and in any common soil; if they luxuriate in a deep rich soil; if the natural soil of the garden is of this character, nothing need be done but to spade in a dressing of well decomposed manure before planting. Spent hot-bed manure is just the kind required, but this cannot always be readily obtained, and any thoroughly rotted manure will answer if free from litter.

In most gardens the only trouble is, that the ground is not rich enough. This is easily remedied by applying a heavy coat of manure and spading it through the soil to the depth of about eighteen inches; it should be thoroughly incorporated with the soil and the whole well broken up with the spade.

Where the soil is naturally heavy and wet, particularly if of a clayey nature, the whole bed will have to be changed before it will grow roses successfully. To accomplish this, remove the earth from the surface to the depth of eighteen inches, and replace with good soil; this latter can be obtained by removing the surface of the soil from an old pasture and taking the earth immediately below for about three inches; this will be fine and porous, containing the roots and fibres of the grass, and when well manured, makes the best kind of soil for roses. If the position is very wet, it should, of course, be well drained, as nothing is more injurious to roses than a wet soil. Roses planted in a deep, rich soil find no need for their roots, and should go on increasing in size and beauty indefinitely, each year yielding a larger number of finer and richer blossoms. In old rose gardens may be found thousands of plants twenty years old, still growing and improving.

Anecdotes.

A lady was entertaining at dinner a stranger who had brought a letter of introduction to her husband, and at the end of the meal, coffee was served. The lady asked her guest if he took sugar in his coffee; he replied,

"Oh, never, Madam; that is to say hardly ever, unless the coffee is very poor." A few minutes later he said:

"Will you please give me a little sugar."

As a woman was walking, a man looked at said lady, and

"Why," said she, "do you follow me?"

"Because I have fallen in love with you."

"Why so? My sister, who is coming after, is much handsomer than I am; go and make love to her." The man turned back, and saw a woman with an ugly face; and being greatly displeased he returned and said:

"Why do you tell me a story?" The woman answered:

"Because you told me the truth. If I had known you were a woman, I would have loved you."

Conundrums.

Why is it always proper to take up a penny collection? Because there is some cents (sense) in it.

On a frosty day what two fish ought we to tie together? Skate and soles.

What is the quickest, heat or cold? Heat, because you can catch cold.

If the good all die early, why are the bad like the pupil of an eye? Because they die late.

Assessors' Notice.

To the Inhabitants and all other Persons liable to pay Taxes in the Town of Quincy:

THE ASSESSORS of the Town of Quincy hereby give notice to the Inhabitants of said Town, and all Persons liable to pay Taxes therein, that they will be at the Office of the Assessor, EVERY SATURDAY in May, from 2 o'clock, P. M., to 5 o'clock, P. M., and from May 25th until June 2d, every day, from 8 o'clock, A. M., to 5 o'clock, P. M., to receive the valuation of Estates; and all persons liable to be taxed in said Town, are hereby required to bring in at said Office a true and correct schedule of the Real and Personal Estates, for which they are liable to pay taxes.

Persons holding estates in trust are requested to furnish the Assessors with statements in relation to such estates.

When estates of persons deceased have been divided during the past year, or have changed hands from some other cause, the executor or administrator is required to give notice of such change. In default of such notice he will be held responsible for the tax assessed.

Any person bringing in a list of his taxable property will be assessed upon the valuation thereof, and anyone neglecting to furnish the Assessors with such list, within the time above specified, will at a legal meeting of the Board of Assessors, be assessed according to the laws of the Commonwealth.

All persons who take notice that statements of personal property must be in writing and subscribed under oath before one of the Assessors, at their Office, on or before the 24th day of May, and that the personal property of all taxable persons must be estimated; notwithstanding a verbal statement or informal written communication to any one or more of the Assessors.

When a person has failed to bring in a list or a schedule of all his taxable property, in conformity to this notice, no abatement of a tax assessed upon such property can be granted, unless such tax exceeds by more than fifty per centum the amount which would have been assessed to that person on personal estate.

Domestic Greeting.

As homeward comes the married man,
He's met by wife at door,
With fond embrace and loving kiss
And—"Baby's throat is sore!"
"And did you think to stop at Brown's
And get that marabout Ordered yesterday?"—and, dear,
Fred's boots are all worn out!
"I'm glad you are so early, John,
So much I miss you, dear—
I've had a letter from mamma;
She's coming to live here."
"How very glad you look, dear John;
I knew that you would be—
The floor's out, John, the butter, and You must send home some tea."
"That plumber has been here again;
If you don't pay he'll sue;
And Mr. Prendergast called in
To pay your rent was due."
"Fred's trousers are half cotton, John,
You thought they were all wool—
Oh, that reminds me that your son
Was whipped to-day at school."
The roof has leaked and spoiled the rugs,
Upon the upper hall;
And Jane must go, the careless thing!
She let the mirror fall!
"To-day, as she was moving it,
(The largest one, dear John);
Of course it broke; it also broke
The lamp it fell upon."
"What makes you look so grave, my love?
Take off your things and wipe
Your feet—and only think, to-day
Jane broke your meerschaum pipe."
"Oh, John! that horrid, horrid word!
You do not love me, dear;
I wish that I—how soon—were dead—
You're cross as any bear."

Receipts, Wit, &c.

BAKED INDIAN PUDDING.

Economical and excellent. Boil a quart of sweet milk, thicken with four tablespoonful sifted corn meal. Add three tablespoonful molasses or brown sugar, a tablespoonful of butter, and one egg, a teaspoonful of salt, nutmeg or cinnamon to taste. Bake one hour if your oven is quick; if a slow heat, one hour and a half. Eat warm from the oven, or cool if preferred, with syrup or other sauce. Don't think to improve it by adding molasses eggs. It should bake until curdled.

CHEAP FRUIT CAKE.

One-half cup of butter, two cups of flour, three-fourths of a cup of sugar, one-half cup of milk, less than one-half cup of molasses, two eggs, one-half teaspoonful of soda in molasses to foam, one cup of chopped raisins, a little clove and cinnamon.

TO KILL BLACK ANTS.

Take a piece of old cheese, moisten it if dry, and dust it with corrosive sublimate or arsenic. Or mix whiskey, molasses and water in equal parts and fill a tumbler half or two-thirds full, and set it partly in the ground infested by ants. It will soon be full of drunkards, which can be scooped out and killed.—Poughkeepsie.

A teaspoonful of borax added to an ordinary kettle of hard water, in which it is allowed to boil, will effectually soften the water.

A teaspoonful of spirits of ammonia added to the rinse-water will make rusty black goods look as good as new.

A writer on style says:—"It is the fashion in France for ladies to take their tea in bonnets and gloves." One objection to this is that some of the new bonnets do not hold much more than a lump of sugar.

There are two ways of getting rich; one by adding to our possessions, the other by diminishing our desires.—The latter is the much easier, but is more rarely tried.

An old bachelor, who particularly hated literary women, asked an authoress if she could throw any light on kissing "I could," said she, looking archly at him, "but I think it's better in the dark."

Kissing by telegraph is a new way of sparking. It is perfectly harmless, paroxysmally innocent, and free from any danger of diphtherial contagion.

The father of a St. Louis bride presented his son-in-law with $90,000 head of cattle. "Papa dear," exclaimed his daughter when she heard of it, "that was so kind of you; Charley's awfully fond of ox-tail soup."

This is about the time of the year when people with the weakness of postponing matters offer up their best fur and their woolsens to the ravages of the moth.

They tell a good story of a dergymen in one of the towns not far east of Springfield—that he went to make a call upon a female parishioner the other night and left word for his son to stop for him at 10 o'clock. The young hopeful went to a party and didn't get home for the dominie till 2 o'clock in the morning.

Rev. Nathaniel Howe, of Hopkinton, opposed the building of a new church. One hot Sunday afternoon the people were contentedly doing under the sermon, when Mr. Howe from the high pulpit beneath the old-fashioned sounding-board, suddenly thundered out: "There is no use of a new church; the sleepers are all sound in the old one."

Miscellany.

MY REVENGE.

I paused at the parlor door, hearing voices inside, and thinking there might be callers whom I did not care to meet.
"Where is Miss Janet?" asked the voice of Max Ruthven. A pleasant thrill went through me at the sound of it. It was a pleasant thing to know that some one cared enough for you to inquire after you.
"She went out shopping, I believe, didn't she, Lucia?" said Aunt Diana.
"I think she did," answered Lucia more dutifully than truthfully, I thought.
That was always the way. If any one came and chanced to ask for me, I was always out or indisposed. Judging from what Aunt Diana used to tell her visitors about me, I was sick half the time, and gadding about the other half.
My cheeks flushed up hotly that morning to hear them telling Max Ruthven I was out when they knew better. If there was any one I cared for it was Mr. Ruthven, because he had always been kind to me; and kindness was something rare enough in my life to be appreciated thoroughly when I came in contact with it.
"They don't want me in the way," I said, bitterly. "I'll turn the tables on them," and opened the parlor door and went in.
"Good morning, Miss Stafford," said Max Ruthven, with a dash of pleasure, I thought, in his handsome eyes. "I have just been inquiring for you."
"I thought you were out," said Aunt Diana.
"Why, no," I replied, looking at her wonderingly. "You know you told me to dust the dining-room, and I've been busy there all the morning."
Aunt Diana looked ominously stern. I began to see a storm brewing.
But then I was used to stormy weather. Calms were a rare exception in my life.
"I want you to sing for me," Max said, opening some music upon the piano.
"I happened into a music store yesterday, and came across some old editions of 'Annie o' the Banks o' Dee,' and 'Within a Mile o' Ellinboro' Town,' and knowing how well your voice was adapted for such songs, I got them, and have brought them with me. Miss Lucia—"

"I must beg to be excused," said Lucia, softly. "I never could play with Janet's singing."

"I can play my own accompaniments," I said, and sat down to the piano, resolved to do my best. Lucia could not sing at all. I knew that she envied me my full, clear voice, and I liked to display it for her benefit. And then, Max Ruthven wanted me to sing, and I was only too glad to be able to afford pleasure to one who had been so kind to me as he had, in many little ways.

I sang the beautiful old Scotch song with all the expression I could give it, and I loved them so well that after the first verse I forgot any one was listening, and sang because I loved them.

"I never heard any one sing them as beautifully as you do," Max said, when I had finished them. "I could listen forever," he added, in a tone so low that neither Lucia nor Aunt Diana could catch what he was saying. I was conscious of a little extra color flushing into my cheeks, and saw that Aunt Diana's eyes were watching me closely.

"I am going to bring you a book of old songs," he said, "and I am sure you will find a great many gems in it."

"Thank you; I wish you would," I said. "I like old songs so much. There seems to be something of the charm about them that clings to yellow old lace."

"A very poetical fancy," sneered Lucia. "You should turn poet, Janet."

"Perhaps I shall, some day," I answered. "In that case I shall be happy to write your biography in rhyme."

Aunt Diana bridled. I enjoyed their vexation, although I could see that I should catch a lecture when Max Ruthven was gone. I had got used enough to the signs of a coming storm to be quite a weather prophet.

"These callas are superb," Max said, bending over a vase of flowers standing on the table. "What are your favorite flowers, Janet?"

Janet's my face was as red as any rose. He had never called me that before. A thrill of pleasure woke an echo in my heart that vibrated long after he was gone.

"I hardly know," I answered. "White roses, I think."

"I will send you up some this afternoon," he said. "Mother has some superb ones in her conservatory. What shall I send you, Miss Lucia?"

"Oh, don't take the trouble to send anything," said Lucia, coldly. "I don't want your mother's conservatory robbed for me, I'm sure!"

Pretty soon he went away, and the minute the door closed after him Aunt Diana opened her batteries on me.

"Janet Stafford, I am ashamed of you," she began. "One would think you were engaged to Mr. Ruthven. I've no doubt you'd like to be! Here you have tried your best to monopolize his attention, knowing, that he came to see Lucia, and knowing, too, that he has been paying his attentions to her for some time."

Widow Stebbins on Homeopathy.

These're new-fangled doctors they call the homeopaths here pesky odd nosens, no way, 'n no mistake. They dew best all natur' in thar ideas 'bout doctorin' folks, 'n curin' 'em up with jest nuthin' at all but liddle bits o' sugar pills 'n seck like. Then they hev the queerest names fur thar tincturs 'n medicines thar ever I heern tell on.—Thar's belladonna, camemillery, pulsatilla, nucks vomicky, illumine her, ache o' night, 'n goodness knows what not. I can't keep run on 'em no how. Now, my neighbor, Miss Fulson is allers tellin' 'bout homeopathy, 'n what a heap o' good it's dun her fur all sorts o' complaints. She's a sorter doctor. Miss Fulson is, 'n sez it's her speer for be doin' all the good she ken fur sufferin' humanity.
Wall, I was tuk daown a peg in my 'pinion on it last spring, I wis, 'n I'll tell ye how it 'twas. My Sairy Ann caught the whoopin'-cough, or sumthin' or rather luv the sort, 'n I felt a tittle frustrated 'bout it, 'n so I thought I'd run over ter Miss Fulson's 'n see what she would prescribe for it. She looked over her medicine chest—she's got a big one, I tell ye, full uv vials uv all kinds o' cures, 'n it tooks uv all the world like sum city confectshunner's shop put on candy 'n stuff.
Wall as I was a-sayin', she put on her specs 'n looked over her medicine chest, 'n said solemnly, ez how ef 'twas her child she'd gin her a 'heap er sulphur' right away. Wall, I was glad ter hear her say that, ez I allers thought the homeopaths gin the leastest bit uv stuff when a body was sick, 'n so I sed I believed I'd try it, ez it wouldn't do her no harm if it didn't do no good. I sed plenty uv sulphur in the house—I allers hev it on hand in the spring—'n so I tuk nigh onto a cup full—ez I wis sure Miss Fulson said a heap on it 'n mixed it up with molasses, same as I allers did, 'n made Sairy Ann take the luv on't, all ter wunst. Wall, she was the jistest child fur a while, Sairy Ann wis, that ever yeou did see, 'n didn't seem to help her cough a bit, nuther. I went over tew Miss Fulson's soon ez Sairy Ann could spare me comfortably, 'n told her what I dun, 'n would yeou believe it? she laughed right out in my face, ez she sed ter gin Sairy Ann, 'n that heper v. 'n a Latin word, 'n meant 'the liver,' 'n not a large quantity on anything, ez I supposed. Wall, that sickened me on homeopathy, 'n sence then I hev stuck ter the old skule, whar they don't hev no seck ricklericks worlts ter bother a body's life out on 'em. Them's my sentiments on homeopathy.

Home Repairs.

A lady gives some hints for repairs that can be made by any housekeeper:—"The fire brick of our cook stove gave out, and not one was to be had nearer than Philadelphia. A friend gave me a recipe which we find works well, though we had little faith in it at first. We mixed a cup of salt with two of coal ashes, wetting it up with water. This was applied to the inside of the stove in place of the fire brick. It hardened in a few hours, and answers as well as the brick. Cracks in stoves may be mended in the same way. A large paid used for taking up ashes had become too full of holes for use, but was so light and handy we did not like to give it up. So we pasted stout cloth over the bottom, outside and in, and then covered the cloth with a thin cement of salt and ashes. It is a first-rate ash pail still, and hot ashes do not burn out the cloth. Mending tin with cloth may be a new fashion to some, but it works very well. I know of a coal scuttle that has done good service for five years since it was pronounced worn out, simply by having a piece of cloth patched on with thick flour paste. It needs renewing about twice a year. A lady told me that she mended a big dish pan by covering the bottom with white paint, and then putting on a piece of white cloth which she also covered with paint. She had used it five years then, and it is eleven years ago, so I presume she is using it still, as she was not a woman much given to change.

A Simple Disinfectant.

One pound of green copperas, costing seven cents, dissolved in one quart of water, and poured down a water closet, will effectually concentrate and destroy the foulest smells. On board ships and steamboats, about hotels, and other public places, there is nothing so nice to purify the air. Simple green copperas, dissolved in anything under the bed, will render an hospital, or other place for the sick, free from unpleasant smells. In fish-markets, slaughter-houses, sinks, and wherever there are offensive gases, dissolve copperas and sprinkle it about, and in a few days the smell will all pass away. If a cat, rat, or mouse dies about the house, and sends forth an offensive gas, place some dissolved copperas in an open vessel near the place where the nuisance is and it will purify the atmosphere. Then keep all clean.

Sulphur for Diphtheria.

John S. Wiles, a surgeon of Thorncombe, Dorset, writes to the London Times that after two cases of malignant diphtheria out of some nine or ten he had been called to attend, had proved fatal, the mother of a sick child showed him an extract from an American paper concerning a practitioner who used sulphur to cure the disease. Accordingly he used milk of sulphur for infants and flowers of sulphur for older children and adults, brought to a creamy consistence with glycerine; dose—a teaspoonful or more according to age, three or four times a day, swallowed slowly, and applications of the same to the nostrils with a sponge. Result, he did not lose a case there or elsewhere and he succeeded in saving life when the affection had almost blocked the throat.

A Bright boy was walking along the street with his mother, and observing a man with a peculiar hitch in his gait approaching, he drolly exclaimed: "Look there, mamma; see how that poor man stutters with his feet!"

She Didn't Advise.

"Is this the Buglehorn office?" demanded a tall, Macoupin woman the day of the editor, whom she happened to find in his sanctum.
"Yes, ma'am, this is the place," and he handed her a chair and prepared himself for business.
"Be you the man that runs the newspaper, mister?"
"I am the editor of the paper, ma'am. What can I do for you? Do you wish to subscribe or to advertise?"
"When I've told it to you I want you to print it—that's what I want. And its all about a man that come into the Crooked Creek settlement—that's where I live—a preaching. He allowed he had a call to preach, and we thought mebbe he had."

So much by the way of preliminary; then she rested and stared hard at the editor.

"Is it a personal matter, ma'am? Has this man been doing anything out of the way—anything improper?"
"Improper?" and she smiled in scorn that he didn't see it before asking such a question. You just write it down as I tell it, and see then if it is not improper."

"Will you proceed to tell me all the facts, then, ma'am?"
"That is jist what I'm goin' to do as soon as ever I can think it over. Wall, he come there, allowin' he had a call to preach."

"I have written that," he remarked, after waiting for her to go on with the story. What did he do then?"
"Why he preached. You just write it that he preached; and he boarded with me."

"Before going any further you had better give me the names of all the parties interested in this matter, ma'am."

"Names?" Why, everybody that knows me knows what my name is; and I ain't afraid to have it called right out in meeting neither. But what have you got writ down about it?"
"That this man came to Crooked Creek and wished to preach."

"That is so, and he did preach. He was sort of delicate like, and couldn't eat common doin's like the rest of us. His stomach couldn't relish nothing but fried chicken three times a day. Now, write that, mister."

"Next you might mention that he wanted my Martha Ann to do most of the cooking! And the way he praised that gal's cookin' was calculated to give her hopes that he was willing to enjoy it regular ways. He jist spilt that gal for cooking anything but fried chicken. O, that man is a little the meanest, onnyrunk skum I ever knowed here in Macoupin."

"Didn't he pay his board?"
"Yes, he paid; but he was so dreadfully close and stingy. You don't reckon we're going to kill every last chicken on the place, and Martha Ann cooking herself mighty nigh to death just for the price of board, do you?"

"I really don't know what is customary in such cases, ma'am. Perhaps this preacher ought to have given your daughter a present or some token of gratitude for her kindness."

"Now you are talking sense, mister. I know there never was such a fool as I've been about that preacher. I ought to have made him stick to corn bread and meat till he was willing to marry Martha Ann, or me, her mother. Then he'd know that fried chicken was of some account. But he's gone up to Sangamon county a preaching, and I want to print it in the papers how mean he's been here, so as other women won't be wastin' their fried chicken on him. Now, how much have you writ, and how much will it cost?"

"Forty lines at fifteen cents a line will be six dollars, ma'am. Shall I make out a bill?"
"Yes, make out a bill jist as big as ever you can, and make him pay for it. Then he'll know what chickens is worth."

"But that is not the way we do business here, ma'am. It is your bill and you will have to pay—not the preacher."

"Me pay for putting his meanness in to the paper! What do you take me for, mister? What is the good of putting him into the newspapers unless he has to pay? Good day, mister."

She didn't advertise.

In a town near Boston there lives a good lady who suffers acutely from sciatica. She has consulted physicians far and near, but has been unsuccessful in finding any cure. Not long since she heard that a man living not far away was afflicted with the same disease in an aggravated form, and it occurred to her that she would call upon him and ask whether he had ever found anything that would avail to lessen its terrors.—She did so, and having introduced herself, stated her errand. "Do you," she asked, "find anything that affords you relief?" "Yes, ma'am," he replied, "two things." "Two things? Pray what are they?" "Curing and uncuring," said the invalid. It is added that on her return home the good lady told her husband that she only regretted that she could not avail herself of this remedy. "Not that I have any conscientious scruples," she said, but I don't know how."

SATURDAY, JUNE 7, 1879.

Short communications and items of news earnestly solicited from friends and patrons.

Anonymous communications are not published.

Memorial Day.

The observance of this day was quite general in this town; stores and other places of business being closed. The ceremonies of decorating the graves was conducted by Paul Revere Post in the morning, according to the programme given last week. In the afternoon, when the Post formed into line to take up their march to Mount Wollaston Cemetery, a large assemblage of citizens, on foot and in carriages, joined in the procession and wended their way to this beautiful home of the dead. The soldiers' monument was very neatly trimmed and the exercises were conducted under Comrade Charles H. Porter, Commander F. W. Parker being out of town.

At the close of the ceremonies the Post and the large cortege of citizens returned to the Town Hall, where the Rev. E. A. Perry delivered an excellent oration, a synopsis of which will be found in another column.

The Belknap Band done escort duty on this occasion, and discoursed some of their best music. The day was a rather uncomfortable one, owing to the strong wind which sent the dust in every direction, making it unpleasant for riding or walking.

In the morning there was a seven-mile foot race around the Unitarian church, which called together a large audience. The word "go" was given about nine o'clock, and the nine who had entered for the prizes started off in good shape, but after going around a dozen times some of the walkers began to lag, and only four completed the distance.

The first prize, a silver watch, was taken by Thomas Murphy of Weymouth; time 45 minutes. Second prize, by Dennis Carney of North Braintree; time, 45 minutes, 8 seconds. Third prize, John Dunn, of Quincy; time, 48 minutes. The fourth and last one in was Robert Courtney of Quincy.

In the evening the Post gave a dramatic entertainment which was largely attended. The talent employed on this occasion was of high order and all present were highly pleased.

FLORAL SUNDAY. The annual floral festival of the Sunday school connected with the Unitarian Church, will take place to-morrow afternoon. The ceremony of children's baptism will be one of the features of the occasion. Several distinguished gentlemen from abroad are expected to be present and address the school, among them the former beloved pastor of the society, Rev. John D. Wells, now of California. The church will be beautifully decorated with flowers.

BIRTHDAY PARTY. A pleasant gathering at the Jenkins House, North Quincy, to celebrate the 61st birthday of its genial host.

Among the guests were many of the present and past officers and members of the Boston Lancers, and the Ancient and Honorable, of which organizations the Colonel has been a member. The famous "Old Crow" Glen furnished most excellent music, and a pleasant evening was enjoyed. After many congratulations, and kind wishes that many happy years might be spared to their host, the party numbering about fifty persons sat down to a beautiful repast. At a late hour the guests separated after having enjoyed an evening long to be remembered.

GLASS BALL SHOOT. The following members of the Merry Mount shooting club of this town, enjoyed themselves on Friday afternoon at a glass ball shoot. The revolving target was placed behind a screen at 21 yards distance, and the following is the result of their skill:

A YOUNG ROGUE. A lad of about thirteen years, from Boston, named Alexander J. Bryer, hired at the stable of Washington M. French a horse for a few hours ride, the first part of last week. Not returning the owner started in pursuit, and on Saturday last the horse was found at Canton, but the rogue escaped. He has since been arrested at South Braintree by officer Farnham, and will be tried before the District Court on Monday next.

OBITUARY. The Hon. Alva Morrison, who died at Braintree, on Wednesday last week, had been a very prominent and active citizen of that town for more than forty years. He was born in Springfield, N. H., in 1806, and came to Stoughton, in this State, when quite young. In 1859 he married Miss Myra, daughter of Col. Consider Southworth of Stoughton, who still survives him.

Mr. Morrison has held many positions of honor and trust in Braintree, and has represented his district in the State Senate. His unostentatious charity and his unswerving friendship for all, made him universally loved and respected in the circle in which he moved. He was buried in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, in this town, on Decoration day. His funeral was very largely attended.

W. M. French Hose Company is making arrangements to visit Provincetown on the 17th of June. The company has secured the steam tug C. M. Winch, which will carry the party on the excursion. On arriving at Provincetown the company and guests will proceed to the Atlantic House, where a dinner will be served for them.

There will be a public temperance lecture at the Town Hall on Friday evening, June 20th, commencing at 8 o'clock, under the auspices of the Provision Division, No. 9, Sons of Temperance. Mr. Benjamin R. Jewell, G. T. of Boston, and Mr. Charles E. Dennett, P. G. W. P., of Malden, are to be the speakers of the evening. The public are cordially invited to attend.

Decoration Day Address.

The following is a synopsis of the oration delivered at the Town Hall, on the afternoon of Decoration Day, by the Rev. E. A. Perry:—
We feel differently towards our native land than towards any other. This feeling exists though our reason may tell us that other countries are better than ours, though we may have been ill-treated by our fellow countrymen. This feeling is so universal that no one ever took voluntarily the name of traitor. This feeling is the basis of patriotism.

Patriotism may exist simply as a sentiment. The possessor of it never sacrifices for his land. Such patriotism evaporates in talk, and leads not to the battlefield. Abundant instances of its existence in the early days of the Rebellion can be recalled.

Patriotism may exist as a passion. It then has the distinguishing feature of passion—lack of judgment. It manifests itself at inopportune times and under hopeless circumstances. The attempts of Ireland to gain her liberty; the cry for war with England growing out of the Trent affair, are instances.

Patriotism may exist as a principle. Then it is guided of reason, and demands the same faithfulness in peace as war. What will such a patriotism lead its possessor to be and do?

If a war threatens he will seek to avert it. He will ask whether his country is right or wrong. Whether the question at issue be one of principle. Whether after all, the difficulty cannot be adjusted.

If the war be a justifiable one, he will sustain his land by the might of his arm, and his financial and moral influence.

A war is justifiable when waged against a foreign foe, led by lust of conquest, a domestic tyrant in form of a man or men, or an evil principle. As a man, he should fold his arms and permit the midnight burglar to rob his house, is a participant in that crime, so the citizen who does not use his strength to prevent his country falling a prey to the spoiler is a foe to his land, and deserves not the privileges of citizenship.

Such a citizen will do two things for those falling in defense of their common country. He will keep the memory green of all such, and finish the work they left. In this case he can do both by making this nation free, united and prosperous.

Peace has her duties as well as war. True patriotism will lead its possessor to do his political duties free from party spirit, sectional feeling, or demagogism.

He is a demagogue who appeals to one class against another, the workingman against the capitalist, for instance.

The truly patriotic man does not cheat his government, but renders a true valuation of his taxable property, and pays his taxes cheerfully.

He highly prizes his privileges as a freeman and takes care that they descend to coming generations unimpaired.

He has high hopes of the future of his native land. The grand prospect fills him with a new devotion, a holy inspiration to toil, to sacrifice, that his ideal may be reached.

Mr. Perry closed by quoting the closing lines of Longfellow's "Building of the Ship":—

A Soldiers' Monument.

We have had the pleasure this week of examining a beautiful granite monument for West Bridgewater, executed at the yard of Messrs. Thomas & Owens on Granite street, in this town. Nearly one year has been spent in the construction of the same and it will do honor to the town that ordered it, and credit to the firm who executed it. We will endeavor to describe it to our readers, although no description of it will begin to give the reader an adequate idea of its beautiful appearance.

The granite platform on which it will rest is 17 feet square, composed of two steps. The bottom base is 7 feet square and 2 1/2 feet thick, and weighs ten tons. The die, which is of Quincy granite, is 5 feet high, the inscription on it in front is in raised letters, in a sunk panel on the right and left sides are the names of the soldiers—fifteen in all. The cap which rests on the die is beautifully carved with egg and dart, and dentils.

Above the cap is a plinth carved on all sides with emblems: On front is a cannon with flags; on the right are guns and swords; on the left an anchor; on the back are laurel leaves; on the plinth rests a Doric column 14 feet high, polished and fluted, which is capped and finished with an American eagle.

The whole weighs about seventy tons, is 35 feet high and will cost when set in West Bridgewater about $3,500. It is to be dedicated on the 17th of June.

The same firm has recently erected in the Catholic cemetery at West Quincy a very handsome private monument for Mr. William Mahoney of Atlantic. It is a stone monument with die and cap polished, and beautifully traced with vine.

VERDICTS. In the case of Thomas J. McMorrogh against the Old Colony Railroad Company, which was tried in the Supreme Judicial Court for Suffolk county, before Judge Ames this week, the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff in the sum of $2000. In the suit of Henry McLaughlin against the same corporation, which was also tried in the same court, the jury found for the plaintiff the sum of $1500. Both of these suits were brought to recover for personal injuries received by the plaintiffs on board of the Silver Lake excursion train, which was thrown from the track by a misplaced switch near the Wollaston station, on the 8th of last October. In both cases the only question was in reference to damages.

CONVENTION. A teachers' convention was held at South Weymouth yesterday and will be continued today. The first class in the Coddington C. Grammar school of this town, was carried there yesterday afternoon to illustrate the use of the moulding board in teaching geography. The subjects for discussion this forenoon are:—"How best can the teacher secure habits of attention and application in his pupils?" and "How may the teacher best use his time when out of school?"

Something About Newspapers.

The Franklin Register, which has been published upwards of eight years in the neighboring town of Franklin, Mass., by James M. Stewart, on Friday announced its suspension, and also the discontinuance of two or three editions of the same paper, under different names to localize it in adjacent towns. Mr. Stewart is a man of experience in the newspaper business. He was formerly publisher of the Milford Journal. But his thirty years experience as a printer and publisher has ended in a failure. The times have doubtless had some bearing on this unfortunate result. The times are not favorable for the newspaper business. No interest has suffered more during the last decade of depression. The cost of making acceptable and creditable newspapers has increased remarkably within a few years. With the exception of white paper, everything that enters into the cost is higher than it was ten to twenty years ago. Skilled labor is very much higher. In many localities a ruinous competition is weakening and thinning out daily and weekly journals. A town that can only decently support one newspaper, has sometimes two or more. The result is, poorly made and poorly paid journals, ending in a final and disastrous bankruptcy to the weaker. The people of a town are often at fault in this matter. The publishing of two newspapers where is support for only one, is often encouraged by those who have nothing to lose in the contest. Sometimes the encouragers think the sharp competition of publishers is to be a benefit to themselves; but the reverse of this is generally true to the community at large. One strong, well-supported newspaper is worth to the community more than a dozen weak ones. Of the former the publisher is enabled to make a good, widely circulated journal, worth even more than he charges for it; while the half-supported journal has generally little or no talent employed upon it, and has a small circulation.

In the matter of advertising, in which the business public has a deep interest, one good newspaper is worth to the advertiser more than a score of poor ones. The best newspaper charges but little if any more than the consumptive sheet, yet furnishes to ten times the publicity. An increase of newspapers cost the public double or treble for its advertising, provided it employs more than one. We have no reference here to towns or cities which have newspapers proportioned to their population and business.

A newspaper is creditable or otherwise to the town or city in which it is published, not only in accordance with its strength, but still more in regard to its character and enterprise. A live newspaper, whose clear columns can safely be trusted in the family circle, does more for the name of the town, both at home and abroad, than any other instrumentalities. Yet how few people think of this. How few appreciate the conscientious labors of publishers and editors! They are speaking for you to the great world every day. They are decreasing and increasing the reputation of your town every sheet issued.

They are giving a good name for you abroad, or they are doing the reverse.—Every newspaper, like every private individual, is a character of its own; and the newspaper cannot do good or ill without entailing the consequent result on itself and the community which attends the same conduct in man or woman.

Rev. Mr. De Normandie, of Kingston, Mass., planted a few days since 10,000 bulbs for his annual crop of tuberoses. He has had 56 blooms on a single stalk, 52 being the largest number of any imported bulb, that he had ever heard of.

LARGE CARGO.—The barque Taria Topan, of Salem, sailed from Boston for Zanzibar last week with 2,873,156 yards of cotton bleached and 63,399 yards of bleached goods, the entire lot aggregating 8,809,600 feet, nearly 1700 miles. It was valued at $150,000.

Isaac H. Folger, the late senior partner of the firm which published the Brockton Advertiser, who decamped not long since, being several anxious creditors, was arrested in Boston last Saturday on a warrant charging him with obtaining money under false pretences.

A short time ago a little boy went with his father to see a colt. He patted the colt's head and made quite a fuss over it, until the stableman told him to be careful that the colt did not turn round and kick him. When the little chap went home his mother asked him what he thought about the colt. "I like him pretty well," was the reply. "He's real tame in front, but he's awful wild behind."

ANOTHER FRAUD EXPOSED.

A Medium who has been Deluding Her followers for a Quarter of a Century.

A woman steals the livery of angels to serve the devil in. The facts are substantially as follows: Mrs. Hatch, formerly of Mme. Everett & Hatch, No. 149 Shawmut avenue, Boston, who has for some time been holding flower circles in Boston and vicinity, and represented that the flowers distributed in her circles gathered from various localities—in some instances as far off as California—by spirits she familiarly styled "the boys," and actually brought, by them, through the walls of the buildings to the spirit friends of those present and passed around, has recently held a number of circles in Chelsea and created quite a sensation. On the 21st ult., she held a circle at the residence of Mr. George Short, Suffolk street, where was convened, all told, twenty-nine ladies and gentlemen, who, without question, most cheerfully conformed to every condition the medium stated was requisite to a successful circle, and who, as a matter of course, got lots of flowers. Upon conferring together, after the circle, grave doubts were found to exist in the minds of many of those who were present as to the manner in which the flowers came into the circle and were distributed. It was therefore agreed upon to have another circle in the same place for the express purpose of testing the thing, to the satisfaction of all. Accordingly arrangements were made with Mrs. Hatch by Mr. Short to hold a circle at his house Wednesday evening, the 28th of May.

The performance this evening commenced with singing, by request of the controlling spirit. Not long did they wait before the shower of flowers began, mingled with which, were spent-pine cones and acorns. All at once the room was flooded with light, exposing Mrs. Hatch with a handkerchief full of flowers in her hand which she vainly tried to conceal with the skirt of her dress, as soon as she recovered enough from her surprise to take in the situation.

Finally Mr. Short suggested that the gentlemen leave the room, whereupon, the medium, as quick as thought, with her skirts still gathered up in front, passed out of the room through the hall into the street, and could not be found for nearly half an hour afterwards, when she returned for her shawl and hat and the money due her for admission fees. Nearly all present at the circle were confirmed Spiritualists and honest seekers after truth, and as far as could be ascertained, all were agreed in believing the woman Hatch to be a fraud.—Boston Herald.

The workings of the civil damage bill are beginning to be manifest in Somerville as the applications for liquor licenses are being made to the city government. It is reported that a large number of the best liquor saloons in the city are unable to get permission of their landlords to carry on the traffic.

Did you ever notice, says an exchange, the poor chap that stands in the front picture of an almanac, with fish, and scorpions, and bulls, and twins, etc., around him? Did you notice that he was naked, and had nothing in his stomach? Well, that poor fellow used to edit a country newspaper, and take his pay in "I'll pay my subscription next week."

One little boy said to another that it was nice to see the swallows back again; whereupon the other said he couldn't see their backs they flew so fast.

It is certainly very odd that the Chinese and Japanese both should have such an antipathy to partaking of cows' milk as food.

An Irishman tells of a fight in which there was only one whole nose left in the crowd, and that belonged to the tea-kettle.

A western paper says a wife in the house is worth two in the street.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, JUNE 7, 1879.

The number of towns and cities in Massachusetts which refuse to license for liquor selling the present year is in excess, and the deduction is apparent enough that the people have found out all the bearings of the system, and know how practically to make the law work in the interest of prohibition when they are so minded. It makes no great difference after all what law is upon the statute books—this matter will be governed by public sentiment; and when that is strongly enough opposed to liquor selling and drinking, that is if a decided majority are determined enemies of the traffic, it will be crushed out of sight; while on the other hand, neither law nor the best efforts of reformers can keep a majority of any community from working their will if such are not disposed to give up what they consider their rights.

GLASS BALL SHOOT, EAST MILTON. A glass ball shoot took place at East Milton range on Decoration day. The wind was strong and unfavorable for making good scores. Ten balls were thrown for each man, with the following result: H. Johnson, 10; W. Smith, 7; J. Pierce, 7; T. Hollis, Jr., 7; C. Gardner, 7; J. Coleman, 5; G. Beals, 4; J. Buntou, Jr., 8; H. E. Sheldon, 6; J. Blacker, 5; G. H. Bent, 8; F. Badger, 7; W. Bell, 9.

The Taunton Gazette says, by securing the new railroad connection, the Old Colony Railroad probably touches more deep water points, available to foreign and domestic shipping than any other New England road, or, perhaps, railroad in the country. Besides Boston, it has wharf connections, with deep tide water at Somerest, Fall River, New Bedford, Newport, and out to Provincetown.

A regatta for cat-rig boats is to come off at New Bedford as soon as the details can be arranged. Dr. E. R. Sisson, of that city, offers a handsome gold-lined cup to be contended for. It is eleven inches high and the design is a female figure supporting an urn. One side has an engraving of a race of a fleet of cat-rigs, and on the opposite is a wreath, with space for the winner's name. This cup is to be sailed for by not less than twenty, nor more than thirty boats.

Some of the cottages on the Vineyard are being fitted with windmills, to pump water from driven wells into tanks in the upper parts of houses. Oliver Ames' cottage will be one of the finest buildings in the "city," when completed. Over sixteen hundred yards of handsomely decorated cloth, will be stretched in its interior as a substitute for ceiling and wall finish.

The firemen's muster to be held at Danvers on the Fourth of July will give the following prizes: 1st, $500; 2d, $300; 3d, $200; 4th, $100; 5th, $50; also a solid silver trumpet to be played for by the five companies nearest to those that win; a $50 trumpet to the five playing the lowest, and $50 trumpet to the company making the best appearance—a total of $1350 in prizes.

William Witham, of South Paris, Me., a farmer about 50 year old, recently dreamed that he found in a low, marshy spot on his farm a sum of silver money. He went to the spot indicated in the morning, and after digging down about three feet unearthed about $1800 in halves, quarters and smaller silver coin.

There now ply between Europe and America 160 ocean steamships, and new ones are added frequently to meet the demand for quick transportation of passengers and freight.

Among the recent arrivals at the Dead Letter Office is four Florida oranges, a piece of wedding cake and a Bologna sausage.

The canvass of Brockton, by Mr. A. J. Rice, the Bible agent, shows the population nearly twelve thousand, the number requisite for a city charter.

Eighteen hundred girls under twenty years of age were married in New York city last year.

Col. King, a Texas cattle man, has a fence 75 miles long, enclosing about 337 square miles, on which range 110,000 beasts.

"He's my darkest hour," said a wife, pointing to her husband; "and would you know the reason why? It's because he always arrives just before the day."

BAKER. A little boy in a railroad car who was making himself quite conspicuous by his boastful manner, was asked by a gentleman sitting near him if he could spell. "Spell," said he, "why, I can spell any word there is." "Well," said the gentleman, "suppose you begin with 'baker,'—spell 'baker.'" The little fellow thought a moment and then with an adroitness that is only equalled by a smart lawyer in a getting out of a bad box, he said, "I meant I could spell any word but baker."—MURSON'S Photographic News.

Poetry.
Youth and Age.
I see the boys with bat and ball,
Though falls the noiseless shower;
But springtime laughs to hear them call,
For 'tis youth's blossom hour.
The girls are playing on the green
Like birds with lightsome wings,
And when I gaze on such a scene
My heart leaps up and sings!
I half renew my golden prime
On such glad holiday;
Forget to sigh o'er flight of time,
And long to join their play!
See! like a thing of life you kite
Goes soaring up the sky,
With bits of tinsel flashing bright,
And bobbing swinging high!
Ah! care a moment flees away!
I bless that laughing throng,
For memory's bells this sunny day
Have chimed sweet boyhood's song!
I little rogue again, I climb,
Yea, ride the swaying limb;
Leaves dance to breezes' whispered rhyme,
Birds chant the great world's hymn!
May Heaven bless each merry heart,
Prolong youth's blossom hour;
E'en frozen blood of age will start
When fields are all in flower!
What care I if my locks are gray,
These pulses thrill with fun!
More joyous grow the lids at play,
To see this graybeard run!
I go! I go! I'm with them now!
They shake their sunny curls,
And never heed my wrinkled brow,
The rosy, happy girls!
The child-heart, oh, that precious boon
That makes the clock so fair!
That rears for them this afternoon
Bright castles high in air!

Miscellany.
TOO SURE.
"What is the time, John?"
"Ten minutes to nine."
"I thought it was later."
"Did you? I am sure it is what I say."
"Thank you."
The boy who had inquired of John,
and who trusted to his word, ran down
the street.
"That's good," he said to himself.
"I shall just have time to do what I wish and get back to school by nine o'clock."
He ran as fast as he could for three minutes. Then he stopped, for he heard a sound. The church bells were striking nine.
Very vexed he felt as he retraced his steps as quickly as he had come.
But when he reached school he found the door was shut.
He went in among the "late boys," and consequently lost his place in the class.
"It was too bad of you to deceive me, John," he said, as he passed him. "If it had not been for you I should have been early."
"I suppose it was later than I thought,"
said John.
"Yes, but you should not have told me you were sure unless you had been so."
"That is just like John Stevenson," said another boy, "he is always so sure about things."
There was no time for further remarks, as the boys were obliged to take their places.
"John Stevenson, look over these exercises in dictation," said one of the teachers.
John did not particularly like that work. The exercises had been written by the younger boys, and most of them had plenty of mistakes to correct.
John read the first dozen lines on each slate. If they were correct he did not like the trouble to go on, but wrote the word "Correct" at the bottom of the slate. If there were errors in the first dozen, he concluded there might be others, and therefore read the whole.
It took him nearly half an hour to do it. When it was done he returned the slates to the teacher.
"Have you marked all the errors, John?"
"Yes, sir."
"Are you sure you have overlooked none?"
"Quite sure," said John.
But casting his eyes swiftly over the uppermost slate, the teacher found towards the bottom two mistakes that had been overlooked.
"You should be more careful before you make an assertion, John," said he, when he had called John's attention to them. "It is very dishonorable to say you are sure of a thing when you are not at all sure."
When the morning lessons were nearly over, the master called for the ciphering book.
"Is this sum correct, John?"
"Yes, quite correct, sir."
"Have you done it carefully?"
"Yes, I am sure there is no mistake."
"You are much too sure," said the master. "If you work it again you will find that one figure is incorrect."
John was not much pleased at that.
He wanted to go home with the other boys, and now he was obliged to remain and get the sum before he left.
Three times this morning, John Stevenson, you have said you were sure of what you asserted, and each time you were wrong. You are too self-confident.
You should take the trouble really to satisfy yourself as to the correctness of a thing before you declare it to be so. I hope you will learn the truth that you are very likely to be mistaken, and that, therefore, you should be exceedingly particular about what you say."
But the habit which John had formed was too deep to be easily altered, and although he did try to be a little more careful before he made an assertion, he was just as self-confident as ever.
Some time after John left school, and was apprenticed to a draper.
He was quick to learn, and when he had only been in the shop two or three months he began to serve customers. He thought it very unnecessary indeed for one of the older persons to stand by and see that he did it properly.
"I'm quite sure I know how to do it,"
said he.
But other people were not quite so sure and thought it better that he should have some supervision.
"Have your bills examined always, Stevenson's," said the foreman.
"That's too bad," thought John.
"As if I did not know how to work a little addition sum like that!"
It always vexed him to have to take his bills for examination, but of course he had to conform to the rules.
On one occasion, however, a lady was in a hurry, and did not want to be kept a moment longer than was necessary.
John made out a bill and she paid it.
"Is it right, Stevenson? Let me see,"
said the foreman.
"I am sure it is right," said John,
and the lady does not want to stay."
So the money was paid, and John gave the lady the change.

But in the evening when the checks came to be examined, a mistake was discovered.
The next morning John was summoned into the office, and asked to account for the deficiency.
"Here is a mistake of ten shillings in the bill about which you were so sure yesterday, Stevenson," said the foreman.
John cast it up and found it was so.
"I thought I was very careful. I cannot account for the mistake," said he.
"You were foolishly confident in yourself, you see. Did you know the lady?"
"No I never saw her before."
"I did not know her either, so of course you will have to pay this ten shillings yourself."
"I?" said John with a red face and sinking heart.
"Certainly. Who should lose it if not you?"
"I do not want to spare the money."
"I cannot help that. You will always have to make good any losses that occur through your own carelessness."
So John paid it, and was very short of pocket-money for several weeks afterwards in consequence.
But it did him good. He had been made to see that he was not nearly as infallible as he had supposed himself to be. It taught him to be careful. And taught him humility, too.
"In future, when he was tempted to be too sure about any thing, he thought of the half sovereign which he had lost, and was always willing that others should test what he had done, so that there might be no mistake.

New York Fashions.
TRIMMED SKIRTS VERSUS UNTRIMMED.
The latest innovation is that of entirely plain skirts with polonaise or overskirt and basque. But in either case, the upper skirt is short and comes high on the sides. A rich striped silk, corduroy or satin forms the lower skirt, while the velvet dress is also to be observed.
Then again we see skirts of similar fabric, but having only a faint show of trimming, as for example a narrow row of silk plaits around the lower edge, or faint dots at intervals. These fashions are indeed quite a feature in new costumes,
and are placed anywhere and everywhere.
But though I am willing to prophesy that untrimmed skirts will prove as contagious as the small-pox, yet for the present we find that opposite styles are formidable by reason of their numbers.
There will be a contest between the two all summer, but we are the gainers, for we can choose which we please. It is manifest however, that the many light fabrics worn during warm months must have ornamentations, so here is an advantage on the side of trimmings.
MIXTURES OF COLORS.
are as noticeable as plenteousness of ornamentation. Bright blue costumes which would have horrified us a year ago, are now worn composedly by leaders of fashion, while again we see garnet plaids, tightly trimmed with yellow stripes; red,
yellow and blue are placed side by side without a quail; nothing is too pronounced, and the only positive color seen as yet, is bright pink; that being reserved for children's wear. Yet pale colors are not excluded, for often times we see the most delicate combinations. One of the boldest ideas of the season are the costumes of "cheese cloth," trimmed with the most flaring
"bandanna," or negro handkerchief goods. These peculiar outfits will be worn by young ladies at lawn tennis or archery gatherings, where their complexions will be shaded by cotton paraols of gay bandanna. "Cheese cloth" is the name given to what in reality is a very flimsy, unbleached muslin selling at five cents per yard. A parting word as to new and desirable designs. The Givendoline train, at once simple and elegant, falls long at the back, is disposed in panier style on the hips and turned back in long rows on the front.
To this the Anatolia blouse would give a very stylish complexion.
In children's outfit, may be mentioned the Hebrew costume adapted to girls of from ten to sixteen, and having a blouse waist, draped overskirt, and skirt finished with a deep, kilt plaited flounce.
The Isabel costume for from fourteen to sixteen consists of a curious basque with panier drapery and trimmed skirt.
The Maids dress would be pretty for girls from eight to twelve. The "Daisy" is a graceful blouse dress for children from six months to six years, and for boys from six to eight, the Antoine skirt can be recommended.
SPRING CHANGES.
So many people with the spring, have just moved into new quarters, or are having a general renovation of their old ones, that I am tempted to give a word of advice about the new piano which all is the last and most important. None are more sought after by people who understand such matters than those manufactured by Haines Bros., 124 Fifth Avenue. They finish an instrument of the best material and finest tone, at a moderate price, and though every style is presented yet for those in search of an upright, it may be added that this is a specially with them, and is therefore seen in not a few of the most elegant houses here.
LUCY CARTER.

For the Patriot.
My Grandmother.
She is old and full of wrinkles,
But her starboard peeper twinkles,
And she cranes her head and peeps full of fun:
She can jig a few and after,
Make you split your sides with laughter,
And her molars skip and rattle at a pun.
I believe the most galling article in the relation line is a grandmother. For startling effects, awful predicaments and a constant keeping of the family on open-eyed wonderment, I'll handicap my grandmother against any other feller's grandmother—on the mother's side.
From the time she made gingerbread out of mustard, some thirty years ago, when her sight first began to fail, up to the day before yesterday when she swallowed a white marble for a sugared hair. The only time I ever knew her to be at all mean was when she hired me, with the promise of two delicious looking cream cakes, to pick the stones out of the flower beds. I worked for a whole forenoon as hard as a ten-year-old could work; carted off five or six wheel-barrow loads of cobbles and only rested from my labors when a thunder-storm arose. After the rain the sun burst forth in all his majesty; I repaired to the house. The laborer was worthy of his hire; the cream cakes were mine;
and beneath the shade of a weeping willow I seated myself to gormandize to the melodious music of the happy birds.
All about me nature rejoiced in the genial sunlight. I took my first bite—will the printer be so kind as to put a few exclamations points after that bite;
the thunder had soured the cream and the old lady refused to make good my loss; "a bargains or bargin," said she,
and I left the house with canker in my heart. It was her first and last meanness, for in the stillty deadness of the night I toted every stone back into the beds again.
It was when she was in her fifties that the neighbors said she gave such a palatable twang to an egg now. I thought so too, and so did the minister who used to call every Saturday afternoon with the regularity of clockwork, never departing till he had placed himself outside of one or more of the old lady's flaps. For a twelve-month his path lay through green pastures and he knew no evil; but one fatal hour, in the darkness of the china closet, near sighted granny mixed the flip with furniture polish. There was a sad look in the minister's eyes the next morning; a peculiar earnestness in his voice and his sermon was upon the "Pernicious effects of Intemperance, or Aqua Pura as a beverage." The local paper recorded it as "his most polished effort," said his discourse was "replete with the varnished language of the scholar," and that his face, "shone with goodness" while he spoke. A few Sundays afterward he received a call and left town without bidding my respected mother's mother adieu, much to her disgust.
Why is it that old ladies always express surprise by saying—"I wonder no!" "howyer talk!" "duttell!" "now!
shaldille!" and many like expressions?
And why is it they always pack their best silks and brocades carefully away in camphor, and go about in alpaca worn brown and shiny by too frequent application of wisp brooms and spittle? I am just gasping to have these two questions answered. I wish I could think of some other little episode in my granny's life, but just at present my memory fails me; you can bet a month's receipts however, Mr. Editor, that for pleasing situations she carries off the cake. Yours till death, her dutiful grandson,
THOMAS KNOWNOTHING.

A young man from the country went to have a tooth plugged.
The dentist advised him to have the tooth out, and assured him that he would feel no pain. If he inhaled laughing-gas—
"But what is the effect of the gas?"
asked the youth. "It simply makes you totally insensible," answered the dentist; "you don't know anything that takes place." The rustic assented; but, just previous to the gas being administered, he put his hand into his pocket and pulled out his money. "Oh, don't trouble about that now," said the dentist, thinking that he was going to be paid his fee. "Not at all," remarked the patient; "I was simply going to see how much I had, before the gas took effect."
He was a venerable and agricultural looking man, attired in the latest New Jersey fashion, and he stood on a street corner near Washington market.
Holding up his left hand, and gazing reflectively upon three pieces of string tied round an equal number of fingers, he soliloquized—"That's to remind me—to get a spool of cotton; 'other means don't forget the calico. But what in thunder's this one for? Ah, by gum!
that's don't get drunk again!"
A man wrote a note Saturday to tell of a mistake he was sorry to see in the Gazette. We were much obliged to him for the correction, and can congratulate him that in his effort of twenty-nine lines, there were only four errors in spelling, two in capitals, seven in punctuation, and an independent disregard of rhetorical rules betokening the true cynic.
Such men are the busiest observers of the slips of others.—Taunton Gazette.

Professor Wise's Experiments.
Professor Wise seems to be not only in earnest in his scheme for crossing the Atlantic in a balloon, but to be setting about his preparations in a very practical manner, strikingly in contrast to the dar-devil method of the unfortunate Donaldson a few years ago. His idea is to thoroughly test the conditions both of the natural air-currents and the necessary features of an air-ship to meet the varying atmospheric conditions, with the purpose of devising automatic machinery that will cause the balloon to regulate itself; then to send a trial balloon across, without an occupant, and follow it up with others, if necessary, till it shall seem safe to attempt the aerial voyage himself. Three scientists will accompany him, and many applications for the privilege have already been made. Professor Wise's preliminary experiments are already being made on Manhattan beach, New York.

That Bad Boy.
The day before Christmas, Johnny made some fishhooks by bending a great many pins in a peculiar shape. Christmas forenoon he had them in the dining room, and hearing some boys whistling in the shrill way all boys understand, he rushed out, leaving his pinhooks laying on the table and on the chairs. Johnny never gave another thought to them until 2 o'clock, when the family, including Miss Giggings and the minister, and Elder Dalton and his wife, cordially invited guests, were about to take their seats to an elegant dinner.
"Sit right down here," said Mrs. Sanderson to Miss Giggings.
"O-o-o-h!" exclaimed the latter lady,
in a voice of agony, as she rose from her seat and carefully settled back again.
"Parson, take this seat; Brother Dalton, Sister Dalton, this way."
And Mr. Sanderson beamed with that noble, Christian grace—hospitality.
"My Saviour," suddenly exclaimed the worthy parson, in stentorian tones that suddenly shook the windows.
"Immortal Zachariah!" echoed burly Deacon Dalton, and Mr. Sanderson, started at such unusual exhibition, so unusually gave as he dropped, like a piller, into his chair.
"Pull 'em out!" he at once howled,
as he leaped, with starting eyeballs, half across the room.
An immediate investigation divulged
the trouble, and quiet and good humor were restored. The only remark made, after Johnny gave his explanation, was by the parson, who, as he eyed Johnny sharply, quietly said:
"These pins are bent in a very peculiar shape for fishhooks!"

What Constitutes a Carload.
We often meet with the term "carload," but few of them know just what or how much it is. The St. Louis Times has taken the trouble to learn, and says as a general rule 20,000 pounds, or seventy barrels of salt, seventy of lime, ninety of flour, sixty of whiskey, two hundred sacks of flour, six cords of soft wood, eighteen to twenty head of cattle, fifty to sixty head of sheep, eighty to one hundred head of sheep, 5,000 feet of solid boards, 17,000 feet of siding, 13-600 feet of flooring, 14,000 shingles, one-half load of hard lumber, one-fourth less of green lumber, one-tenth of joists, scantling, and all other large timber, 340 bushels of wheat, 300 of corn, 680
of oats, 400 of barley, 390 of fax seed, 360 of apples, 430 of Irish potatoes, 360
of sweet potatoes, 1,000 bushels of bran.

READ ADVERTISEMENTS. The reader of newspapers who ignores the advertisements loses a large share of the entertainment and instruction prepared for him. There is no one, no matter what his business or his circumstances, who will not find something interesting and profitable in the advertising columns of any good newspaper. There is afforded ample opportunity for the study of society, its wants and inclinations, and there also may be found food for mirth, and a variety of valuable instruction.

A Doctor of Divinity was once giving his class some instructions about preaching in such a manner as to gain attraction and applause. "Young gen-

you go to preach in the country take

Poetry.
Pat's Criticism.
There's a story that's old,
But good if twice told,
Of a doctor of limited skill
Who cured beast and man
On the "cold water plan,"
Without the small help of a pill.
On his portal of pine Hung an elegant sign
Depicting a beautiful girl,
And a lake where a spirit,
With apparent delight,
Was sporting in sweet disfigurement.
Pat McCarthy one day,
As he sauntered that way,
Stood and gazed at that portal of pine,
When the doctor with pride
Stepped up to his side, Saying, "Pat, how is that for a sign?"
"There's one thing," says Pat,
"You've left out of that,
Which, indeed, is quite a mistake,
It's trim and it's neat,
But to make it complete
You should have a fine bird on the lake."
"Ah, indeed," says Pat, then,
What bird do you think it may lack?
Says Pat, "of the name
I've forgotten the name,
But the song that he sings is 'quack! quack!'"

Agricultural, &c.
Cultivation of Tomatoes.
Several of the catalogues issued the present year by dealers in seeds contain very attractive pictures of tomatoes trained upon rustic trellises. Whether it is entirely practical or not we do not know, but it is said the product is much improved, not only in appearance but in quality. A very easy way of raising the vines from the dirt and imparting to a small plantation quite an ornamental appearance, is to wait until the vine begins to fruit and then surround each hill with the common shavings used by furniture dealers as packing for furniture. Four or five inches in height and sufficiently spread to give the vines a support, not only keep the fruit from being covered with dirt, but the shavings serve as a mulch, which does not, however, prevent the rain from reaching the roots. An application of liquid manure to tomato vines gives them great vigor.

A New Knife Grinder.
A new knife grinder for sharpening pocket-knives and doing general work has been invented. Its advantages are its extreme simplicity, solidity and portability. The rest that holds the knife to be ground, is adjustable to any angle, and the emery-wheel, having a convex grinding surface, it is easy to grind up into the "jaw" of the knife-section, and in fact, thoroughly go over the cutting-edge of the entire knife with great rapidity and thoroughness. An entire section may be ground during the pauses of mowing or harvesting. The emery is a new patent that will not glaze on its grinding surface during the entire time of its use. A very important feature this. It is the invention of a practical farmer who perceived its necessity in his own farm work. The Wood Manufacturing Co., of Worcester, Mass., are the manufacturers.

PRINTING. John Brooks, of Princeton, says: "Pruning ought to be done in June, after the leaves have attained their full size, then the wounds will not bleed, and they will commence to heal immediately. When you prune before the sap starts, when it does start it will run out the places where you have cut off the limbs and kill the bark. That accounts for the large number of limbs, in a good many orchards, with about two or three inches of dead wood at the ends with the bark nicely grown down around them."

W. E. Coffin, Esq., of the Dorchester District, has a cow on his place at Savin Hill, eighteen years of age, that gives twenty-three quarts of milk a day, and from the cream of which fifteen quarts of butter per week are made.—Norfolk County Gazette.

A German farmer disputed his tax bill. He said: "I pay the state tax, and the county tax, and the school tax, but I pay no total tax. I've got no total tax and never had any."

Conundrums.
Why is a successful comic actor unlike a school-master fond of flogging? Because the one makes a furor (few roar), and the other makes a great many roar.
What is that which always walks on its head? A nail in a shoe.

Anecdotes.
Two little children went to church alone in Westfield, Mass. They became tired during the long sermon, and the older one, supposing that school rules held good in churches, led her sister up in front of the preacher and said:—
"Please, sir, may we go home?"
He said, "Yes" and they soberly walked out.
Butcher—"Come John, be lively now; break the bones of Mr. Williamson's chops and put Mr. Smith's ribs in the basket for him."
John—"All right, sir, as soon as I have sawed off Mrs. Murphy's leg."

"Why," asked a governess of her little charge, do we pray to God to give us our daily bread? Why don't we ask for four days or five days, or a week?"
"Because we want it fresh," replied the ingenious child.

A gentleman traveling on a Hudson river steamer, one day at dinner was making away with a large pudding close by, when he was told by a waiter that it was desert.
"It matters not to me," said he, "I would eat it if it were a wilderness."

"I am glad," said an illiterate preacher, "that the Lord has opened my mouth to speak." "And well you may be," was the rejoinder, for he never did such a thing but once before."

"And when was that?" asked the preacher. "In Behnam's time" was the conclusive answer.

"One-half the world don't know how the other half live?" exclaimed a gossiping woman.
"Oh, well," said her neighbor, "don't worry about it; 'taint your fault if they don't."

Floral Concert.

The annual floral concert given by the Sunday School, at the Congregational Church, last Sunday evening, was very interesting and largely attended. The platform abounded in profusion with plants and flowers; the latter were artistically arranged. On the right and left of the desk were large crosses of white flowers, and several small crosses, anchors, stars, crescent, crown, wreaths, baskets, &c., of flowers.

The exercises opened by reading of Scriptures, followed by prayer and recitations by the children. The singing by the scholars was excellent, and was led by Mrs. J. Edward Spear. The select readings by Misses Nellie E. Merrill, Ella E. Williams and Cora Young were very pleasing and appropriate. They were followed by short addresses by the Superintendent and Rev. Mr. Dodson of North Weymouth, whose remarks were interesting and well adapted to the occasion.

After the above exercises the Superintendent announced that many of the crosses and wreaths, etc., used in decorating the church on this occasion, were to be placed on the graves of eight members of the school who had died within the last four and one-half years, viz:—J. A. Bill, Johnnie M. Lee, Frankie Scannell, Lizzie Langley, Lemuel B. Underwood, Charlie L. Dexter, Lillie Giesler and Charlie H. Reed.

SCHOOL EXAMINATIONS. The annual examinations of the public schools of this town commenced on Monday last with language; followed on Wednesday with geography; Thursday, history; Friday, writing and spelling. Next Tuesday the exercises will be in arithmetic, and on Thursday there will be a public examination, to which parents and other friends of education will be admitted. In the evening of that day the graduation exercises of the High School take place. On Friday forenoon certificates by the School Committee will be given and promotions made. In the afternoon, there will be a public reading at the Town Hall.

Pleasing Entertainment.

The "Pinaforia" entertainment given in the Town Hall, Saturday evening last, by Mr. Wheeler's company of prominent members of the Boston Museum, was highly enjoyed. Those who are familiar with Sullivan & Gilbert's charming satire could not fail to notice the full absurdity of the whole thing, and enjoy it accordingly. Those who were unfamiliar with the text, must have been somewhat perplexed as to the relative position of the several characters, and as to whether the Captain was the Admiral, or Dick Doolittle Little Buttercup, or vice versa. The chorus though small and hard to keep track of, did its work efficiently and always on time.

It is hardly necessary to comment on Messrs. Wilson, Graham and Miss Harold; their faces and work are too well known. A word of praise is due to Mr. West for the great amount of work he does and the way he performs it. Miss Leonard is new to us, and on the whole pleasing, but her musical abilities are not up to par. Mr. C. O. Foster, the pianist, gave a solo upon the harmonica that was highly appreciated and enjoyed. We wish the troupe all success.

VISITED. On Thursday evening the Board of Engineers visited the Granite engine house for the purpose of inspecting the property, especially the engine which has just returned from the workshop of Hunneman & Co., where she has been undergoing repairs. The engineers were received by the officers of the company, and were invited to partake of a collation which had been prepared for them. Speeches were made by Messrs. Hall, Lacy and Duggan.

ANOTHER VICTORY. A grand walking match took place at Weymouth Landing, last Saturday evening. There were nine contestants and Mr. Peter Williams our champion five-mile walker was one of them. He completed the five miles in 42 minutes 23 seconds, winning the first prize and making the quickest time that has been made on this track. He made his third mile in 7 minutes 29 seconds. Mr. Williams is a hard working young man and has no time for training, but the way he makes the sawdust fly in walking, shows that he has great endurance. He is ready to meet anyone who wishes to walk against him.

LICENSED. Two more citizens have been granted a license to sell intoxicating liquors, making in all fifteen,—about one-half the number that was granted last year. The last two are Wm. S. Pattee, sixth class, and Wm. P. F. Meserve, first class.

GRANITE. The members of the Granite engine company played their machine on Thursday evening last and were well satisfied with the steam she threw. The present company is under the able guidance of Capt. William Barry, and his assistants who are working hard to make the Company an honor to the town. Our efficient engineer, P. F. Lacy is doing all in his power for its welfare, as are also the Board of Engineers. May they prosper.

THE ENGINEERS OF WEYMOUTH have refused permission to the firemen of that town to attend the firemen's muster at Danvers on the Fourth of July with their machines, as they consider the chances are greater on that day of their being wanted at home.

ARRIVALS AT THE POINT. Schooner T. Nickerson, Capt. Hoskell, from New York, with coal to Cyrus Patch. 19th, Schooner Hector, Capt. Higgins, from Philadelphia, with coal to Cyrus Patch. Sailed same day, Schooner Hattie S. Collins, Capt. Crosby, for New York, with granite from J. C. Wild and others.

A service for the children will be held to-morrow forenoon at 10:30 at the Universalist Church. The Pastor will preach a sermon for the children. Several children will be christened. The Church, as is the custom on such occasions, will be decorated.

We would call the attention of our readers to the Pavilion Hotel at Revere Beach, opened this season by Col. Meserve. It is a delightful place to spend a day. The cars on the Narrow Gauge railroad stop at the hotel door, and leave Boston every hour, making it very convenient and cheap for pleasure seekers.

We have heard many remark that they have never known such cold weather in June. Mr. Charles Beck informs us that in 1873 and 1875 the first part of the month was much colder than the present one. He has kept a record of the thermometer for many years and on referring to it he can give the facts concerning the weather correctly.

Dramatic Entertainment.

An interesting dramatic entertainment was given on Friday evening in the school house at Atlantic. The programme consisted of the play of David Garrick, followed by the farce of "My turn next."

Mr. Perkins D. Fisher, the well known boy tragedian, who achieved such a success in the character of Othello, in Boston, a short time ago, sustained the leading characters in both pieces, and played in a manner "greatly to his credit." He was supported by Miss Lizzie Fisher and the Misses Howe, of Atlantic, who have quite a reputation as amateurs, and who played in an acceptable manner.

Miss Marie Chelius of Boston assisted Mr. Fisher in the farce of "My Turn Next," and received well merited applause for her efforts. Messrs. Hovey and Pope, and several gentlemen from Boston and vicinity, volunteered their services and were well received. Mr. Fred J. Eastis, the well known pianist, performed some pleasing selections on the piano, and was warmly applauded. The entertainment was well attended and was quite a success.

Hose 1, on the Wave.

On Tuesday morning last, W. McCall, Esq., accompanied by Chief Engineer Hall and Assistant Engineers Lacy, Hayden Duggan, McDonnell and Glover, visited Provincetown. Early in the morning the "red shirts" were seen hurrying through the streets in the direction of their headquarters, where they took luges for Quincy Point. On their arrival the steam-tug Elsie, with the "Little German Band" on board, was awaiting them. About a quarter of seven o'clock the whistle of the tug sounded, the band struck up "Life on the ocean wave," and in a few minutes the merry party were out of sight on their way to enjoy all the pleasures of a sea trip of five miles. After a delightful sail of six hours, the wharf at Provincetown was reached. The Engineers of the Provincetown Fire Department and Foreman of the several Engine Companies were quickly on hand and escorted the "boys" to their hotel, the Atlantic House. At 1:30 the dinner bell rang and the laddies began to fill up their stomachs, (many of them had been emptied on the trip down especially for this occasion,) with all the luxuries which Cape Cod affords. The following is the bill of fare and it is needless to say that not a single dish was left untasted:—

Nuts and Raisins.

Tea and Coffee.

Eating finished, Capt. Maxim rapped the assemblage to order and made a few introductory remarks. He then introduced the jolly toast-master, who read the 1st regular toast: The Provincetown Fire Department. Its record is embalmed on the tablets of State history. We welcome to this board one of its gallant and accomplished representatives. Responded to by Chief Engineer Hilliard.

2d regular toast: The Quincy Fire Department. Nothing but water can thin its ranks. May it continue its march of glory under its present command. Responded to by Chief Engineer Hilliard.

3d regular toast: The Ladies Fair. They bring forth brave firemen, and oftentimes a hero here. Responded to by Capt. C. C. Emery.

4th regular toast: The Press. May its members shed the last drop of their ink in battling for the rights of the volunteer firemen. Responded to by Mr. Goss of the Provincetown Advocate.

Other toasts and sentiments, followed by songs by the company's chorister, Signor Bowditch, concluded the intellectual feast.

At 3:30, by invitation of Chief Hilliard, Capt. Maxim quickly formed his men in line for the purpose of making a tour of inspection of the several houses and apparatus of the Provincetown Fire Department. On reaching the main street the Quincy boys were completely taken by surprise at the approach of the entire fire department of the town, (five companies) in full uniform, preceded by the Fireman's Band of Provincetown, and the Board of Engineers. The usual salutes were tendered and from that time out the Hose boys became prisoners of war, but fortunately they were in the hands of merciful captors.

Under the escort of Engineer Hilliard's command, a line of march was taken through the principal streets and a stop made at each of the engine houses. The cleanliness and order which prevailed in all will undoubtedly be hereafter taken as a model to be introduced in the Quincy Department by Chief Engineer Hall and his assistants. The march concluded, the column was then invited into Masonic Hall, where a sumptuous supper was awaiting them, and to which simple justice was done. The supper was followed by speeches by Chief Engineers Hilliard and Hall, Capt. Emery, J. W. Lombard, Esq., (who continued them that he was a native of the Cape and a former resident of that town,) and several others.

Chief Hilliard then dismissed the assembly until nine o'clock, when he ordered his own men to appear at the same place, with all the fair ladies of the town, that they might test the proficiency of the Quincy boys in the art of Tarsiphoer. At the appointed time about three hundred couple were on hand, and enjoyed themselves hugely until twelve o'clock, when the prisoners having properly satisfied their captors that they were not only firemen, but gentlemen, "graduated," and adapted on the "light fantastic toe," were released and given the freedom of the town. At the announcement of the close of their captivity, Signor Bowditch called for a song and led off with "America," and "We won't go home 'till morning," in which the whole company joined.

At 1:30 A. M. Capt. Maxim's boys had returned to the tug, and with three rousing cheers for Provincetown and the representatives of the several companies who had assembled at the wharf to bid them good night, they took their departure for Quincy Point, where they arrived about 7 A. M.

It will be long time before our boys will forget their trip to Provincetown. Since their return all who participated have been profuse in their praise of the ovation tendered them by the Provincetown Fire Department; of the dinner provided by Mr. South of the Atlantic House; of the kindness of the genial and obliging Capt. Frost of the Elsie, and last but not least, of the music furnished by the "Little German Band," and all desire that they may have an opportunity to reciprocate the many favors shown them.

Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

This beautiful garden of the dead is growing more and more a favorite spot with our citizens, and each year makes it doubly attractive. Many fine monuments and other records of our departed ones have been placed in these grounds this season. We think it is now the handsomest cemetery to be found in Norfolk County, and may the good work which is being done by Superintendent Spear, go on till all who visit this lovely spot, consecrated to our loved ones, speak in praise of this beautiful city of the dead.

Among the many lasting tributes recently erected, we noticed one by Mr. George H. Locke. It is a beautiful granite monument about 17 feet high, the next base is about the same size, but is beautifully polished; this is followed by a die 3 feet high and a cap 1 foot, 4 inches, each finely polished; and on the last rests a handsome hammered column, 10 1/2 feet high. This monument, although quite attractive, cost only $300; and one-half what would have been asked six years ago.

For the Patriot.

The D. C.'s.

Why, what is up now? I declare the D. C.'s are off again for another sail down the river. The bids fair and if they don't have a boss time it won't be the fault of the great American Sardinian cater. Now I hear the sweet and mild voice of the captain giving his orders to the crew: "cast off the bowline and give her the jib," and want you please retire to the cabin, ladies, until then be very agreeable on deck." Like all good and true D. C.'s they respond at once, but the cabin is no place for D. C.'s, so up they come to the tune of twenty-three, and away we go for Hull Gut.

Good gracious! what's that? It was the captain, not it was Will's hat. About we go, but mistaking something on the water, we again left the hat astern. Man the small boat, and away start two sails for the hat, while the yacht lay off with only the rolling of the sea, awaiting their return, which was a long pull and a strong pull, but upon nearing the boat we beheld a sight which for grand and lofty tumbling excels anything ever before exhibited on our shores. All we could see was four boots in the air and our worthy Vice President with his companion had dropped into the bottom of the boat as gracefully as the sun sinks behind the western hills. It was but a momentary suspense, for they were soon on board, when away we go for Peddock's Island.

On our arrival a very comfortable house was procured and all hands assisted in getting ready to do justice to an old-fashioned dinner. The table ran the whole length of the room and was well stocked with all that was good, and the way that great, large, plum pudding departed was a caution to your writer, who in the future (should an opportunity present itself) proposes to help himself to a piece before passing it along, in order to secure a small portion, even taking the chances of a branch of etiquette. However, after dinner, the order of the day was base ball, running matches, and du-say-oo-ples; the latter game was extensively indulged in by all and seemed to be the favorite from dinner time until the arrival home. The sail up river was delightful, and the sentiment of all was, it had been a day which will always be fresh in the memories of the D. C.'s.

The Drama.

Boston, June 19th, 1879.

As the summer season advances, attendance at the theatres woefully diminishes, for it is far more pleasure to drive through the country, sail down the harbor, lounge on the Common or Public Garden, or to enjoy the atmosphere of a cool drawing room, rather than to suffer the heat and confined air of a theatre, and it requires no ordinary attractions to draw a house, though Boston is highly favored in the matter of ventilated theatres, they are not yet all that should be. Houses for the past few weeks have been very thin, with the exception of the Boston during the run of "Fatinizta," and at the Museum. And next week, the Boston, Globe and Gaity, close their doors for summer vacation, and will probably remain closed until the commencement of next season, the first of September.

Herby's Mastodon Minstrels give two entertainments Saturday, matinee and evening, at the Boston Theatre. They have drawn good houses, and excite a large amount of fun.

Harrigan and Hart and their "Mulligan Guard Band" and an Olio, continue to fill the Museum at each performance, and the "Children's Pinafore" is drawing its share of business, and is the same bright and charming performance as heretofore.

Charles H. Patten, critic of the Sunday Gazette takes a benefit at the Globe next Monday evening. John McCullough, Janascheck, and a host of others are announced to appear. The "Chimes of Conway" will be given this Saturday matinee and evening for the last time.

Monday evening, June 30th, the management of the Museum will produce "Fatinizta," with J. C. Fryer's Company from New York, Fifth Avenue. Full particulars next week.

"Sancho Pedro," which is being presented, I will not say acted and sung, at the Gaity this week, is a wretched affair, and we charitably refrain from giving it extended notice. It will be short lived.

PRIZE DRAWING. The drawing of the articles on the Combination ticket took place in the basement of St. Mary's Church, on Monday evening last. The following persons were the fortunate ones:

Prize Stove, No. 519, book 1; Philip Whalen, Quincy.
Silver Cake Basket, No. 697, book 6; Rev. F. A. Friguglietti.
Gentleman's Seal Ring, No. 336, book 3; William Clark, Quincy.

Ton of Coal, No. 277, book 2; Master Michael Elcock, West Quincy.
Gentleman's Travelling Bag, No. 12, book 9; Bernard Donnelly, West Quincy.
Fancy Skates, No. 81, book 6; Michael Early, West Quincy.

Ladies' Gold Watch, No. 143, book 1; Mrs. B. Beard, West Quincy.
Barrel of Flour, No. 496, book 4; Joannah Lynch, Milton.

During the evening the audience were entertained with some fine views of the moon, sun, etc.

REAL ESTATE. Much interest was manifested this week in the large sales of real estate in Dorchester, by the receivers of West Boston Savings Bank. Eight estates were sold on Thursday. A block of three houses and 7,000 feet of land at Harrison Square, south from the bank building, facing the railroad, was sold for $2,500.

A large two-story house at Harrison Square on the easterly side of the railroad, containing a furnace, bath-room, Cochituate water and gas, with about 7,000 feet of land, sold for $2,500.

A one and one-half story block of two houses with 8,000 feet of land on Parkman street, near Dorchester avenue, sold for $2,000. A second block of the same description, with a smaller lot, sold for $1,750.

Two cottages, one and one-half story, slate roof, with 10,000 feet of land on Fisher street, near Ashmont depot, were sold, one for $1,225, the other for $1,000.

A great interest was manifested in these sales, if we judge from the large attendance, and on some estates very spirited bidding. The prices were something more than half what the property would have sold for six years ago. Upon the whole, the attendance and bidding showed rather an improved condition of real estate.

The citizens of the town of Quincy, wishing to be abundantly supplied with the stimulating beverages, have licensed, and do employ, by their agents, thirteen men for that purpose.

SUMMARY OF NEWS. The new liquor law for Illinois permits all persons, male and female, to vote on the question whether license shall be granted in their town.

SMASH-UP. On Tuesday morning last a smash-up occurred near the West Quincy depot between the gravel train and the passenger train, but fortunately no one was injured. The first idea anyone had of any danger was when the engine of the gravel train whistled for down breaks but it was too late. The engine of the gravel train came plowing into the hindmost car of the passenger train, carrying away the cow catcher of the engine and damaging the car considerable. The wreck was soon cleared away and the train resumed its journey.

Reply to Rev. Mr. Perry.
The columns of a paper like the Quincy PATRIOT are scarcely a proper place for a religious-scientific controversy, even of quite limited dimensions, and I shall therefore endeavor to be very brief in the few remarks I have to offer.
The last words of Mr. Perry's letter are as follows: "both (i. e. religion and science) deal with the known, the know-able and the unknowable." If this be indeed so, if it be true that science deals with the unknowable, then it must so far greatly resemble the famous "chapter on snakes in Iceland," whereof the full extent consisted in the declaration,
"there are no snakes in Iceland." So the science which, according to Mr. Perry, deals with the unknowable, must be comprised in the valuable item of information, that of the unknowable, we know, and can know, absolutely nothing.
I fancy the readers of the PATRIOT will not be disposed to accord much respect to such a "science."
Mr. Perry informs us that he is "surprised to find as usual, that no one interested in science seems to understand" his position. But does not this very fact raise a just suspicion of the soundness of his position? Surely there must be something wrong when Mr. Perry can find "no one interested in science" who "understands" his position still less accepts or approves it. The truth is, Mr.
Perry labors under the very great diminution of attempting to reconcile (if he objects to that word) to harmonize two widely separated and opposed positions. It may be granted that there is no essential antagonism between science and religion, but there is a decided an-tagonism between science and any form of dogmatic theology which has thus far existed, and it is the essential weakness of Mr. Perry's position, that he is a representative—a very liberal and enlightened representative—of an established theological system.
The religious element in man is deeply rooted, and it is possible, nay probable, that out of the struggles and confusions, the storms and stress of the intellectual and religious elements to-day a religion may arise which shall be in harmony with science and of inestimable benefit to man. But nothing is more certain now, judging from indications on every side, than that the old theologies must certainly die.
And stronger, which like Antaeus of old,
increases its strength with every tread upon its mother-earth, will only strip off the excrescences which have grown about the Christian Theology, leaving all its main doctrines intact, is to suppose something that few, who are acquainted with the progress of modern thought, will be disposed to agree with. Mr. Perry asserts that the "only trouble" between science and christianity "exists in the minds of some on either side who have surveyed but a portion of the field, or who judge out of passion or prejudice." Surely this is a very superficial as well as complacent estimate, and does great injustice to the hosts of thinkers who have ranged themselves on the side of science, and who stand outside of all theological systems. I venture to think on the contrary, that the "trouble" springs from the great fact that the current theology originated at a time when a knowledge of the laws of nature was neither extensive nor exact. The traditional religious systems all partake of the mental and moral imperfections of the societies in the midst of which they were established, and though continuously modified and improved by the general enlightenment, they yet represent the principal of stationariness in belief as opposed to science which represents the principle of progress.
Hence arises the conflict which Mr.
Perry so erroneously ascribes wholly to passion and prejudice and limited observation of facts. Mr. Perry is in error in quoting Prof. Newcomb as saying "in a recent article" that "design is everywhere manifest in nature." In the article referred to (North American Review for June) Prof. Newcomb only concedes that the abstract doctrine of design (note the use by Prof. N. of the word abstract) is consistent with the modern theory of evolution. That design is manifest in nature, or that he believes in that doctrine, he nowhere says in the article in question. So far indeed from saying that design is everywhere manifest in nature, his language tends to imply that design is nowhere manifest in nature.
To quote his exact words, "the scientific philosophy entirely excludes design as affording that explanation of nature which it desires, that is, such an explanation as will enable man to foresee the course of nature."
F. A. C.
"Got Left."

Nothing Wasted.
Under the English housekeeper's management, nothing is wasted. She stops every possible channel of waste. Even her stale beer is saved to rinse her bronzes in, to boil with other material and make her old plate look like new, and to clean her soiled black silks; and the lemons, whose outer skin has been squeezed out, and whose juice has been squeezed out, if they are not laid aside to boil in some compound, are given to the cook to clean her sauce-pans. If she keeps fowls, every egg brought in is dated with a pencil, and those of earlier date are used first; if they are to be spared, she lays them by for winter provision, usually passing over them a camel-hair pencil, dipped in oil, which hermetically seals and preserves their contents; and, when she only uses the whites in one dish, she contrives another in which she shall use the yolks. If the bread has become dry, she does not immediately throw it to the hens, or dedicate it to a poultry; she dips the loaf in hot water, and sets it in the oven, and finds it sufficiently fresh for family use. Baker's bread she considers wasteful, and seldom indulges in it. When the bread is really dried past freshening, then it answers for stuffing, is grated for crumbs, or is soaked with milk and beaten eggs for puddings.
She is equally economical concerning everything. The dry bits of ham which would hardly seem worth saving, she grates from the bone, puts away in jars, to be taken out and seasoned on requirement, for the enrichment of omelets, &c. Her care extends even to the drippings. Indeed, nothing is ever wasted.
Book Notice.
"Uncle John Vassar; or the flight of Faith,"
by his nephew, with an introduction by Rev. A.
J. Gordon, D. D., American Tract Society, page 218.
The subject of this very interesting biography was one of the most remarkable men of our times. He was a nephew of the wealthy brewer of Pockings-pore, who gave him his money and his name to quick-tempered man, quite indifferent to all religious considerations. He is said to have been actually hired by his cousin to attend the revival meeting, where he received the serious impressions that led to his conversion. His spiritual agitation and struggles during the next few weeks were extreme, but finally ended in his attainment of a clear hope of forgiveness and a completeness of conservation which characterized all his subsequent life. He abandoned his position in the brewery, where he was receiving handsome pay and was in the line of promotion, and accepted a colportership under the Tract Society at $100 a year, with traveling expenses.
Thenceforward he was going up and down the land, wherever sent, carrying the message which had saved and gladdened his own heart. He held meetings only as a subordinate part of his work, which was to go from house to house and appeal to individual hearts. He would humbly put himself under the direction of the resident minister or ministers, saying that he was nothing but a "shepherd's dog." He has thus co-operated with the writer, as well as many well-known New England pastors. Some of the most interesting sketches in this book are those which relate his evangelistic work during our civil war, among the soldiers of both armies. It was there, and as a tribute of our confidence and love of "the boys," that he received his title of "Uncle John," by which he was universally known. His labors also among the cabins of the negroes and poor whites of the south, and in the west. His whole life as a missionary is expressed in the words, "roughing it," and he came to his grave literally worn out with toil and exposure.
Uncle John was an original and rare character as he was earnest and holy,
and the book before us abounds in anecdotes of his interviews and illustrations of his modes of working. All who knew him, loved him as few men were ever loved. I know of no book more certain to be read with absorbing interest, as well as spiritual profit and stimulation. It can be obtained at the rooms of the Tract Society in Franklin street, Boston, or of Mr. Walter H. Vassar of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., by mail, on receipt of one dollar.
F. N. Z.

At the present time many families in the Maritime Provinces are considerably agitated over the prospect of the division of the Hyde estate in England and the consequent fortune that will fall to them as heirs. Indeed after long years of waiting, in doubts and fears, the claimants have, by reason of discovery of some important documents, assumed a more hopeful tone, so much so that at a meeting held in this city recently they subscribed to a joint fund for the purposes of sending a delegate to England in their interest.
The following facts have been obtained from a reliable source, and looking at the matter in the light thereby thrown upon it, it would seem that the fortune, with but a small amount of energy, especially pecuniary energy, will soon be forthcoming:
Twenty-six years ago the first attempt was made to recover this estate, which was now said to be valued at £20,000,000 sterling. The Chief Justice of the Dominion, one of the heirs, was at that time commissioned to proceed to England in the interest of the heirs, but he was not provided with documentary evidence strong enough to prove the claim, the main link wanting being, it was said, a commission of rank to Thomas Hyde in the British army. It is almost unnecessary to add that the mission was consequently unsuccessful. The document that strange manner. It appears that a shipwrecked mariner, who applied at a house on the Nova Scotia coast for a box to place his nautical instruments and papers in, was given a box out of which he tumbled the very documents which on examination, were found to refer to one of the wealthiest estates in England.
After the non-success of that mission 26 years ago, the matter was allowed to slumber, and probably would have never been revived had not the coveted document—Hyde's commission as an officer in the British Ordnance Department at Annapolis—which formed the only missing link at the time of the first enquiry, been recently discovered.
A little sketch of Thomas Hyde's history becomes necessary to a proper understanding of the story. He came out to this country with his wife and child, to Annapolis in 1745, and filled the position in the Ordnance Department at that post of master carpenter. From this humble position he was promoted for merit and received a commission of rank.
His wife was a lady of title, and he, himself, appears to have been no mean personage. By his marriage he had one child, a daughter. The daughter, while quite a young lady, was married to Francis LeCain, by whom she had six children, one of whom it is generally supposed, never married. From this family have descended the present heirs, of whom there are believed to be not more than one hundred and thirty.
On the finding of the commission above referred to, which was discovered in an old trunk that had become some time ago sold at auction in Halifax, immediate steps were taken by the heirs to prosecute the search; and a gentleman who had had some experience in ferreting out English estates was engaged, supplied with $500 and sent to London to investigate the claim. Attested copies of the documents, proving the line of descent for about six months ago he began a thorough search of the English records. By the search the commission was confirmed, but for a visit to the record office a cost of $70 was incurred. Expenses ran up rapidly and rumors crossed the Atlantic that the agent was acting imprudently.
In consequence of these reports further remittances were refused by the society in Halifax, after something like $500 in all had been contributed.
A party who recently returned to this city from London saw the agent there and from an interview with him believes that the money can be had in less than two months, by the continuance of the search at a small outlay. The agent, who, by the way, was made an heir previous to his going to England, supplied with a return ticket and his traveling expenses guaranteed, preferred to suffer much privation during the past winter rather than abandon his claim.
Among the heirs in St. John and Halifax are several prominent families, and the society in this city is anxious to co-operate with the parent association in
